As the end of the year will see railway communication almost complete between Calcutta and Allahabad on the way to Bombay, and Agra on the line to Delhi, the direct mail by steamer from Calcutta to Suez will cease in November next. The distance from Allahabad to Jubbulpore is 230 miles of a country difficult for engineers. This line will be completed not under three years, but probably four. From Jubbulpore to Bombay, by the Great India Peninsula line, is about 563 miles, but the part from Jubbulpore to Chalisgaum will not be finished for at least a year. About the 1st of January next the only break of line will be these 230 miles between Allahabad and Jubbulpore. Not only will the conveyance of the weekly mail overland via Bombay save at least four days in transit, but we should imagine there will be few residents in Bengal who propose to visit England next March and April, that will not prefer the railway to Bombay, with the advantage of seeing Upper, Central, and Western India, to the P. and O. steamers by Ceylon. The subsidy for the mails to Calcutta being withdrawn in November or by the end of the year, the P. and O. steamers will either cease to run, or put intolerably small and slow boats on the line. The Madras passengers may be landed at Bepore, from which the Bombay and China steamers might take passengers to Galle. But to meet this the Burmah Steam Company will have its steamers touching at every port on the coast of South Asia, from Singapore to Kurrachee and the head of the Persian Gulf. Hence the subsidy given to the P. and O. Company has not been renewed for a fixed period of years, and their agent in Calcutta has not been confirmed for three years in his appointment. The "Messageries Imperiales" are expected to run their first vessel in July, and there is the projected "British and Eastern Steam Navigation Company." All we have no doubt, will find employment. Thus, in twelve months, passengers from Bengal may go to England via Bombay, and letters will be received in twenty-six instead of in thirty days, as at present. During the two or three years that will elapse between March, 1863, and the completion of the Allahabad section of railway, the dak companies, finding their occupation gone elsewhere, will doubtless crowd to continue the communication for these 230 miles.

The first result of this will be the prosperity of the Central Provinces. Attention will then be directed to the fact that they contain the most extensive, coolest, and healthiest plateau in India. As the mid-land between Bengal and Bombay, as the centre of the cotton trade, as abounding in building-materials and water, new stations must spring up, and new towns be built. When the rage for the Himalayan and Neilgherry slopes has subsided among English capitalists, they will be attracted there; and the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, as well as all the highlands of Central India, over the capabilities of which Sir John Malcolm grew so eloquent, will find a glorious attemperment for all the neglect with which, from their devastations by the Maharrattas and Pindarces, their scanty population and their inaccessibility, they have hitherto been treated. Both the revenue and geological surveys are preparing for that future.

Not merely will the traffic of the future cause cities to spring up where now there is the lair of the wild beast and the gloom of the forest,—in as many months as these changes will require years, the existing cities will throw out suburbs, which in their turn will grow into towns. To take Calcutta as an instance, the metropolis promises to develop itself in a wonderful manner. On all sides it is crying for room. While wastes in the midst of palatial Chowringhee, on which menial servants have hitherto squatted, are being built upon; while large gardens are being subdivided into building lots, and while the evil American system of boarding-houses is extending, the unhealthiness of the city is increasing. The merchants have been driven out of Garden-reach, and Calcutta must go elsewhere out of town. Where will it anew set up its household gods? For years the Mutlah will be unhealthy, but at the present rate of progress the Sunderbunds promise to become a garden, the Mutlah river to be a highway of commerce. When the clearing has been completed and sweet water secured, Mutlah-town will become the residence of a large portion of the mercantile community. A second direction in which Calcutta must sooner or later extend is towards Diamond-harbour. It is only a question of time when a railway shall run between that port and the city, as an extension of the Mutlah line and villas shall skirt the northern bank of the Hooghly. As the Sunderbunds are cleared the sea breezes will be valued. A third locality that the wealthy of Calcutta will secure, is in the vicinity of the Botanical gardens, on the southern bank. Already Howrah is becoming to the city all that the Surrey side is to London. Below it, with speedy communication by steamer or railway, the gardens will in time become the nucleus of a city of villas.

But most attractive and certain of all is the future of Barrackpore, or rather Tittaghur, its Garden-reach. Already most of its available houses are occupied by Calcutta merchants, who submit to the toil of crossing the Hooghly twice and using the East Indian Railway. But in a few months the Eastern Bengal line will be completed. While Sealdah, the Calcutta terminus, and the hitherto filthy and unpopular Circular-road become another Howrah and the most important suburb of the city, all who prefer coolness and health to heat, dust, and intolerable stench, will seek Barrackpore. As a railway will run between Sealdah and the river, the merchant will be able to step out of his office into the train, and in thirty minutes will find himself in the healthiest station of alluvial Bengal. There is the Park and the Gardens which Wellesley planned, reminding the resident of Clumber or Buccleuch. There is the river with water so sweet and healthy as to be famed among the natives. The "drive," the "band," all the advantages of civilised Calcutta, with none of its drawbacks, are to be found. A fine railway station has sprung up, and may be approached under the shade of trees, after a few minutes' walk from the chief points of the vicinity. A new church is to be built, and for Dissenters there is the Methodist Chapel. Steadily for eight months the cool monsoon is borne across the Hooghly, so that on its banks punkahs are unnecessary. From Ishapore, where the new bridge is to span the river, to Cossipore, next cold weather will see the beginning of a mighty Richmond.—Friend of India.

INDIA'S HORSE LEECH.

Throughout his whole career Lord Canning has never uttered anything so hopeful for the future of India as in his reply to the address of a portion of the Christian residents of Calcutta. He insisted on the importance of bringing an enlightened public opinion in India and in England to bear on mere officialism in governing England's greatest dependency. Let him, resisting the seductions of political expediency, remain true to the promise contained in that reply, and he may yet undo, or at least atone for, so many lost years. He will find on his arrival a battle still going on between England and India, in deciding which his assistance will be most valuable. The letters of our military correspondent show the annoyance excited at home by Mr. Laing's statement to the Madras Chamber of Commerce, that the cost of the actual above the established strength of European force for the past year would have sufficed to reduce the import duties on manufactures to the old rate.

The military authorities in London say it is unreasonable to complain, because the surplus strength of the Indian army was not reduced in a day, and that, if the finances of India could not afford to pay for the existing army, more native troops should have been disbanded. The question is entirely one of facts and figures. What is the established strength of the European force in India—when was it known—and were measures taken with sufficient promptitude to relieve Indian finances by reducing the excess? The established strength of non-commissioned officers and rank and file of all classes, exclusive of officers, is believed to be as follows:—

|                               |        |        |        |
|-------------------------------|--------|--------|--------|
| Infantry, 56 regiments        | at 920 | ...    | 51,520 |
| Cavalry, 11 ditto             | at 587 | ...    | 6,457  |
| Artillery, 73 field batteries | at 140 | 10,220 |        |
| " 33 garrison ditto           | at 75  | 2,475  | 12,695 |
| Sappers                       | ...    | ...    | 252    |
|                               |        |        | 70,924 |

The Indian Government, it is understood, consider that ten European cavalry regiments of five hundred men each are amply sufficient; but with this exception there is no difference as to the established strength, which may be taken in round numbers at 71,000. This strength had been decided upon in England, within a possible margin of 2,000 or 3,000 men at the outside, fully eighteen months ago, or in the autumn of 1860, and the actual strength at that date was upwards of 85,000 men in India. On the 1st January, 1861, it was 83,000 men; from that time till August it ranged between 83,000 and 75,000, and even as late as January, 1862, it was over 74,000 men, at which figure, we believe, it still remains. It is incontrovertible, therefore, that during the year 1861 India has had to pay for 5,000 or 6,000 European soldiers on the average of the year, beyond the proper establishment.

Nor is this all. To keep up an established force of 70,000 men in India, 5,000 recruits in depot in England would be amply sufficient, looking at the sanitary arrangements which diminish mortality, and the large volunteering which takes place from every regiment returning to England, thanks to the improved treatment of the soldier in India. But if this number would suffice in a normal state of things to keep up the establishment, a much less number would obviously have been sufficient when such a large excess of actual force in India had to be absorbed. All considerations of Indian policy, therefore, pointed clearly to a suspension of all recruiting and reduction of the depot force to a very low point, at least two years ago, when it was clearly foreseen that India would not require, and could not support without bankruptcy, a force within 10,000 men of the numbers actually there. But considerations of English policy pointed the other way. The political horizon in Europe was stormy, and it was important to keep as many soldiers as possible in England. But it was equally important not to have to pay for them, for the cost of the war in China had far exceeded Mr. Gladstone's estimates, and the existence of the ministry was endangered by the strong feeling against his policy of reducing taxes in the face of an obvious deficit. Accordingly, every extra soldier in the Indian depots at home was a gain to English at the expense of Indian finance.

Now what were the facts? The number of men in depot at the charge of India was kept up at the extravagant amount of 20,000 for a great part of 1860, and even in the beginning of 1861 it was as high as 14,000; nor was any material reduction made until the middle of 1861. And why was it then made? An arrangement was concluded with the Horse Guards by which, in lieu of all depot and regimental charges in England, a fixed sum of £13. 10s. per head was to be paid by India on the effective strength of the European force in India. The War-office, in effect, became contractors to keep the Indian army up to an effective standard of 70,000 for £13. 10s. a head. The moment this bargain was concluded the interest of the English military authorities was changed. It was no longer to keep a large force in depot at the cost of India, but to send the recruits to India and get £13. 10s. a head for them, instead of keeping them at home now that England had to pay for them. As contractors at a fixed rate they naturally wished to do as little work and receive as large payments as possible. Accordingly it was soon discovered that 13,000 or 14,000 men in depot were totally unnecessary; the number was reduced by the last English military estimates below 7,000; and recruiting was stopped, so that it will fall even lower. But in the meantime what was the effect on India during the years of her financial crisis? The years 1860 and 1861 were memorable years in the annals of Indian finance, for the question of national bankruptcy was, at each moment, trembling in the balance. It was apparent that, notwithstanding the imposition of new taxes which had convulsed Indian society and crippled English commerce, nothing but the most searching economy could save the empire from the infinite disaster and disgrace of stopping payment. The danger has been happily averted, but throughout the whole of this critical period, while the Indian Government was reducing its military expenditure by millions, not a single penny of reduction has, as far as we can learn, yet been shown in any estimate of home military expenditure sent from England. The estimate for regimental and depot expenditure for 1861-62 was £1,460,000, or precisely the same figure as for 1860-61, which is at least double what would have been the cost for a European force of 80,000 men under the old system before the mutiny and amalgamation, and £500,000 more than the cost for the established force even under the new arrangement at £13. 10s. per head. But to all this, the real hardship of which India complains, Sir Charles Wood makes no allusion. It is an incontrovertible fact, therefore, that India, during the year 1861, has had to pay £500,000 more at home, and to support 5,000 or 6,000 supernumerary men here, at an extra cost not much less than another £500,000 over and above the fixed cost of the regular European establishment as settled in 1860. It may be that the Secretary of State has done his best to oppose a state of things so detrimental to India, but he seems to defend it. The result is this, and it proves how powerful are the influences which, from the time of the Afghan and first Chinese wars downwards, have constantly tended to sacrifice Indian to Imperial finance.

It only remains to notice the argument that the Indian Government should have met this extra cost by reducing more of the native army. It may be that the Indian authorities have delayed reductions too long, and that the present force may admit of further reduction. We have always held both views; but in justice to the Supreme Government it must be remembered that, between army and military police, the native armed force has been lessened in less than three years by fully 220,000 men, or from 350,000 to 130,000—an amount of reduction which was carried out by the Government on their own responsibility in the face of warnings, which, now that they have been contradicted by the event, seem light, but which then seemed grave enough from the declaration of the highest authorities, such as Sir J. Lawrence and Sir J. Outram, that it was not safe to throw such a mass of men accustomed to arms out of employment. It must also be remembered, that during the last year the experiment of a new police was in full operation, that it was vitally important not to let a military organisation creep into the new constabulary on the plea that the native army had been too largely reduced. That this apprehension was not chimerical may be seen from the instance of Bengal, where the Lieutenant-governor has postponed for more than twelve months the reduction of his little army of 8,000 military police, on the sole ground that the reductions of the native army had left him without what he considered sufficient protection. Moreover, it must not be forgotten, that as a question of finance, the cost of one European regiment equals the cost, not of two or three, but of eight or ten native regiments. The native regiments having been reduced to 600 rank and file, and the European officers having to be paid at any rate, the saving from disbanding a native regiment is little more than the pay of the privates, and even this is not fully realised, as pensions and gratuities have to be given on parting with them. It takes, therefore, a reduction of fully eight native regiments to cover the cost of one extra Queen's regiment, and to have met the extra expense incurred in 1861 by excess of actual European strength on our establishment in India and England the Indian Government must have disbanded seventy or eighty additional native corps—a result which no one will seriously suppose to have been possible—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MIDDLE ASSAM, March 8.—In spite of the expressed opinion of Government that there is no pressing necessity for increasing the number of troops in this quarter, I am rather inclined to think we shall wake up some night with these wretches from the Hills holding a nocturnal orgie round our tea-house by the light of its fires, or poaching eggs by the smouldering embers of the "godown." But, not to treat the thing too lightly, it is certainly very inconsiderate of the Government not to afford sufficient protection to those planters, "immediately under the Hills," who in so many instances have vested their all, and who are certainly looked upon by the denizens of those Hills as interlopers upon their territory. They, too, frequently remind them they are in their power, by sparing no opportunity to annoy after the manner of savages. Only a few days ago they made a demonstration in great force before the bungalow of a planter, and demanded what they choose to term rent for their land, to the tune of several rupees. On being laughed at, then remonstrated with, and of course ultimately refused, they threatened that if twenty head of cattle were not given by a stated time to return and submit the whole factory to the flames. Then, again, not long ago, an old and very much esteemed planter received a number of pieces of bamboo, supposed to represent rupees of the like number, which he was politely requested to furnish, under pain of their severe displeasure, and a nocturnal visit from these savages. They came, and it proved very hard to get rid of them, and it was not before taking a part payment, a number of cattle (they have since had to be satisfied), that they could be induced to withhold setting the place on fire. All this can be traced to the well known fact that the military police are not numerous enough to keep these people in check. To make them fear our power and strength is what is necessary for prolonged security, and to do so the force must be immediately local, they don't understand it at a distance. But how long are these barbarians to jeopardise the lives of settlers in Assam? Surely there is a remedy! One would be inclined to think that having purchased the land of the Government the least they can do is to ensure protection to the occupant; but it is not so! It is evident that Assam is not of sufficient importance "to the powers that be" to give it that attention the more favoured provinces enjoy. To a corner from the N. W. it presents a sorry contrast to what he has left behind; total neglect in roads and bridges meets the eye upon all occasions, the former only passable for elephants. Even now, when they are about to be taken in hand, it is on such a scale that will drain the small amount of labour time a planter now commands, and leave the districts through which the improvements are made for ever after discontented. In fact, if the Lieutenant-governor vest the power in the local authorities to advance the wages to such a dangerous extent as 9 rupees, jumping from the local standard of rupees 3-8, what result can be expected but total ruin in many instances to the cultivation of the tea? The advance could be gradually introduced; that is what the planters are doing; but to offer the coolie 5 rupees this month all at once, would be tantamount to promising a like increase the next; the simplicity of their nature would leave them to expect it and make a stand accordingly. In short, the Government don't know the harm they are doing.—Englishman.

JUNG BAHADOOR.—Shortly after the British Government made over to Nepal that portion of the Terai known as the Goruckpore Morung, which had, until wrested from the Nepaules by the Oudh Government, formed a portion of the Nepal territory, Jung Bahadoor, accompanied by Kowar Rana, proceeded there to settle and fix the boundaries of the newly acquired district, and to enter into amicable revenue settlement with the people, whose allegiance, by the cession of their country, had become transferred to the Nepaules Government. The portion of the Terai thus transferred was of little value apart from the forest which for the most part covered it, though in that forest there was no inconsiderable quantity of exceedingly fine saul timber. To Jung Bahadoor it, however, possessed virtues of no mean order; in his eyes its value consisted not in the timber of the forests, but in the wild animals it harboured. Scarce giving himself time to fully accomplish the object of his mission, Jung Bahadoor proceeded to organise a hunting expedition of considerable magnitude; and even now, although he has been engaged in this his favourite pursuit for some months, he is not disposed to relinquish it. Kowar Rana has returned to Katmandoo, but without the minister, whose return thither, long since anticipated, is not likely yet to take place. In all probability he will remain in the Terai until driven thence by the advent of the Monsoon.

THE "SOANE."—A trial trip of the Soane, the first steamboat which the Oriental Inland Steam Company (Limited) has launched in the Hooghly, was made on the 20th March. The Soane left Fort Point at eight minutes to nine o'clock in the morning, and arrived at Budge-Budge at thirty-seven minutes after nine, having made the distance in forty-five minutes. She left Budge-Budge, on her return, at thirty one minutes past twelve o'clock, and reached Fort Point at eighteen minutes past one, having made the return journey in forty-seven minutes. She performed the measured mile in three minutes and fourteen seconds, and ran steadily eighteen and a-half knots per hour. Her engines are diagonal oscillators, made on Henderson's principle. The pressure of steam was twenty pounds to the square inch, the revolutions thirty-eight per minute, and the consumption of fuel thirty maunds for the trip. These figures will give our professional readers the means of appreciating the worth of this acquisition to our river navigation, and the favourable impression produced by the trial of the Soane will increase the expectations already entertained of the other steamboats building by the same company at Garden Reach, one of which, likely to be next completed, will tow the train of barges on Mr. Bourne's system, under the superintendence of that gentleman, the managing director of the company, who is at present at Lahore, but who will probably arrive in Calcutta in a few weeks.

ANDAMAN CONVICTS.—We hear from Port Blair that two of the convicts confined there had effected their escape on to the Great Andaman. They were both Mahomedans from the Punjab, and one of them had induced a female convict, to whom he had become attached, to accompany them. As has resulted in all previous attempts at escape, the runaways found the main land and its occupants so inhospitable that, after a stay of a few days, when worn out with fatigue and hunger, they of their own accord returned to the settlement. We remember that when Dr. Walker was superintendent of Port Blair similar occurrences, though on a much larger scale, took place, and he directed the execution of the greater number, if not of all those who had absconded.

The act was both unnecessary and injudicious, for nothing could possibly have served better to deter others from following the example of the runaways than the listening to the tales of the distress they had suffered and the cruelties they had experienced at the hands of the Andamanese. As a warning, the living presence of these men would have done far more to deter others from pursuing a like course with them than their dead bodies possibly could. We trust Captain Haughton will steer clear of like mistakes, having full faith in his humanity and firmness.

AN EXAMPLE.—A fair attempt has been made in the 72nd Highland Regiment, at Mhow, to carry out the War-office Order regarding soldiers' libraries, and the Indian Commander-in-Chief's recommendation about workshops. The library is now entirely separated from the canteen, and attached to it is a well-stocked and well-lighted reading-room. The funds are derived partly from donations, but chiefly from the subscriptions of the men, who pay two annas each monthly. Upwards of 500 have become subscribers. The books and newspapers are chosen by the men, subject only to the approval of the officers' committee, and it is interesting to know what periodicals and newspapers they select. "The Cornhill," "Chambers' Journal," "The Leisure Hour," "The Illustrated News," "The Illustrated Times," "The Home News," "Punch," "The Weekly Times," "The Scotsman," "The Glasgow Saturday Post," "The Friend of India," "Bombay Times," and "Delhi Gazette," are taken. In the reading-room means are furnished for playing chess, backgammon, draughts, Spanish draughts, puff and dart, solitaire, and dominoes. A supply of stationery and stamps is always at hand for those who wish to write letters. In connection with the reading club a course of lectures and readings has just been given, and has been well attended. Sometimes the audiences have been very large indeed. Business is going on in the tailor's, shoemaker's, and carpenter's shops. In the latter a fine turning lathe is daily at work. The printing press also employs several men and boys. Out of doors great impetus has been given to the athletic sports by the Colonel, who has given a challenge cup to be held by the best cricket eleven for a year. The competition for this has given rise to many exciting matches.—Friend of India.

ADULTERATION OF CASHMERE WOOL.—Captain Farrington, the Deputy-commissioner of Umritsur, in a letter to the local Government, seems to settle the question of the adulteration of Cashmere wool. He says the genuine Pushum is imported from Thibet via Kooloo and Busahur. Kirmanee wool, on the other hand, enters the Punjab via Kurralchee. "I am not aware that there is any direct import from across the Gulf, but I believe almost all, if not all, comes via Bombay. My inquiries show that the supply of Pushum is quite equal to the former demand, and that the weavers do not experience difficulty in obtaining the real article. The excess of export to Europe must not be regarded as a net increase, inasmuch as during this last few years there has been a considerable decrease in the export to Hindustan. The decay of several petty states, the extinction of the Courts of Delhi and Lucknow, the pecuniary difficulties of some others, and the late rebellion, have all acted on the market in that direction. Oriental taste, at the same time that it does not require the same amount of embroidery, demands a greater softness of texture. The adulteration in the shawl fabric commences to a certain extent with the weavers, who sometimes twist the inferior wool with the Pushum in making the wool thread; but, most generally, they make two kinds of thread, one of the Pushum, the other of the coarse wool." A "weaver, who could in a certain time make four yards of adulterated fabric, would require the same time to weave one yard of genuine Pushum." The cause of the adulteration is thus a desire to save labour and its wages.

THE TERRA INCOGNITA.—At the last meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society Major J. J. Walker, of the Survey, read a valuable paper on the geography of the unknown tract of country west of the Soolimani Range, and south of the Soofaid

Koh. It extends over five deg. of latitude, and averages two deg. in longitude, including an area of 50,000 square miles, which is nearly equal to that of England. The inhabitants are various tribes of Pathans and Beloochees, who are particularly suspicious of Europeans, and jealous of admitting them into their country. In 1840 Lieut. Broadfoot, of the Engineers, marched from Ghazi to Dera Ishmail Khan, by the route along the course of the Gomul River. But it is believed that he travelled in disguise with a Kadla of Powindas, and obtained only meagre information. In 1856 General Chamberlain surveyed the Koorum valley, at the head of an expeditionary force, as far west as the Paiwar Pass, immediately below the Soofaid Koh Range, where it rises to an elevation of 15,640 feet above the sea. The pass is 7,000 feet high, and derives its importance more from the populations and wealthy town of Paiwar at its foot than from its elevation. The Koorum river rises about sixty miles farther west among the Zoomut vallies, where the Soolimani Range abuts at right angles against the Soofaid Koh. In the spring of 1857 Col. Lumsden, his brother, and Dr. Bellew, in the course of the Candahar expedition reached the Hazardarakht Nuddi or stream of the thousand trees, one of the principal confluent of the Koorum River. Following this to its source, they arrived at length at the Shooturgurda, or camel neck pass, at a height of 11,400 feet, on the watershed which parts Jellalabad, Kabul and Ghizni from Kohat, Koorum and Wuzeristan. In 1859-60 General Chamberlain, in the Wuzerree expedition, entered the country of the Durwesh Kels and Mahsoods, the two principal Wuzerree tribes. Major Walker showed how these fanatic Mussulman mountaineers cannot help plundering. The irrigated lands, on which they chiefly depend for their cereals, are merely narrow fillets on the edges, and often in the beds of the principal water courses.

THE ASPIRING MASTERS OF ARTS.—The Calcutta University is still destitute of the name of even one Master of Arts on its lists. There were four Bachelors of Arts, who were examined last week for the honour—two in the Mathematical and two in the Mental and Moral Sciences, and all failed to reach the lowest limit of half the maximum number of marks. While we do not regret the difficulty, but at the same time fairness, of the questions, we feel that the students have a real grievance in their complaint of the very vague and unsettled character of the qualifications demanded. The Faculty of Arts should see to this, if all Bachelors of Arts are not to be discouraged from aspiring after the higher honour, which in Oxford and Cambridge is given by mere efflux of time. The Hindoo who "professed" as his voluntary subject Paley and Butler came far short, but the test, it must be remembered, was a high one, even for a Christian. Two of the graduates showed an intelligent acquaintance with some of the most knotty points in Sir William Hamilton's metaphysics. The study of that work, far removed as it is, in its tendencies, from the pantheistic idealism of Fichte, the psychological scepticism of Kant, and the degrading materialism of the Hartley school, the latest representative of which is Professor Bain, is calculated to have a most healthy influence on the students of India. We recommend it and Dr. McCosh's treatise on "Intuitions" especially to the dreamy mystics and unpractical followers of the Brahmo Somaj.—Friend of India.

THE TREASURY OFFICERS.—The General Treasury having been abolished from the 1st March, Mr. Harvey, the late sub-treasurer, has recommended to the Government to grant a subsistence allowance to the assistants and writers of above ten years' service, who have been thrown out of employ by recent arrangements and are not yet entitled to superannuation pensions. To assistants below ten years' service Mr. Harvey has recommended the usual gratuity.

Mr. J. G. WHITNEY has been elected a member of the Committee of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, in the place of Mr. W. M. Whitney, who has left for America.

DEATH OF THE HON. WILLIAM RITCHIE.—William Ritchie is dead! The late Advocate-General of India, the first legal member of the Supreme Council, whom we saw in high spirits at Lord Canning's farewell reception a week ago, is dead!—and the telegraph will convey to Lord Canning, whilst yet on his voyage, that another of those who shared his work and his trials has already ended his labours. The William Ritchie of Thackeray's touching comparison with his cousin Sir Richmond Shakespeare is dead! almost before he can have acknowledged that kindly tribute of an old and worthy friendship. We write the dreary words again and again, and can yet scarcely realise their sad truth. Just twenty years ago he came to India, where all that time he has worked with unflinching energy, high aim, and full success, occupying from the first a position at the bar calculated to inspire his competitors with envy; and for the latter part of it a position with the Government and a share in the Imperial councils making him the mark for all men's criticism. And the highest praise that a successful public man can claim is his! No man is his enemy; all men will sincerely mourn him. All parties will acknowledge that at this eventful period almost any man could have been better spared. What higher testimony can we bear than that those who have most closely criticised his public acts unite with those who knew him best in his kindly, honourable, private life, in declaring that the testimony borne by Thackeray to his friend of earlier days is paid by all who have later known the ripened and busy public servant, thus cut off in the midst of his great work. Last Saturday we heard that he was unwell, on Wednesday that he was absent from his place in the Supreme Council, dangerously ill with internal inflammation; then the sorrowful recognition of imminent danger, the temporary rally cheating his friends into "hoping against hope,"—and then this morning—that all hope was past; at last the insensibility of absolute exhaustion, and at four o'clock that the kindly heart had ceased to beat; that the busy brain, teeming with the results of an experience invaluable to the country at this juncture, was at rest; that the open hand and generous nature which had helped so many in their need were cold for the first time to all appeals. Such consolation as can be afforded to his bereaved family circle by the warm sympathy of a whole community is theirs, for death never struck down one in British India who commanded more entirely the esteem and good feeling of all with whom he came in contact, whether in public or in private life, whether among Europeans or natives, than did William Ritchie!—Englishman Extra, March 22.

COLONEL DICKENS' SOANE CANAL SCHEME.—A supplement to the Calcutta Gazette publishes a memorandum on Colonel Dickens' Soane Canal Scheme, but omits to state if it is ever to be carried out. The scheme is as gigantic in extent as it is able in design, and provides for the irrigation of all Behar. The flood discharge of the Soane is 1½ millions of cubic feet per second. The head of the canals he proposes to establish at Telcup, about eighteen miles above the Trunk Road. The general scheme is that of two main canals, one from each end of the dam, which, after a course of ten or twelve miles, are spread into two fanlike systems of irrigation channels, extending on one side to the Kurumnassa and Ganges, on the other, to the Poon Poon and Ganges, and with navigation channels to Benares, to the mouth of the Kurumnassa, to Arrah, and to Patna. The aggregate dimensions will be 681 miles of irrigation, and 145 of navigation, or 826 in all, discharging 3,124 cubic feet per second at a velocity of two miles an hour. The dam or anicut is on the general principle of the Madras Delta Works. The chief difference is in the depth of undersunk foundations which Colonel Dickens proposes, viz., two rows of blocks twenty feet deep, whereas the Madras officers content themselves with wells of seven to nine feet deep. The cost is estimated at 245 lakhs of rupees, of which 12½ per cent. is for establishment, and the income at Rs. 21,41,100, or 8½ per cent. profit. He would begin with the Patna branch, and spread its cost of sixty-three lakhs over five years. The Arrah branch will be most profitable. With such a plan carried out Behar would realise the glowing descriptions of Oriental poets and rival Dharwar as a cotton-growing country. But 245 lakhs! Had Behar been the Punjab it might have been thought of. The Peshawar-road will cost more than half of that before it is finished.

THE PUNJABES AND THE RAILWAY.—The effect of the opening of the railway on the Sikhs seems to have been marvellous. A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says Umritsur is amazed at the success of the railway trains. Many of the inhabitants have been hourly expecting to hear of the whole being blown up; while others manifest the most determined resolution to have a ride on the "fire horse." At Lahore, on Tuesday, the assembled populace came into collision with the police, and repeatedly took possession of the open vans, in spite of all opposition. Large parties of villagers are met daily coming in to see the "rail garee," and, if possible, to have a trip thereon. The excitement is described as inferior only to that caused by the mutiny.

A PROTESTANT SCHOOL is about to be opened in Lahore, under the auspices of Sir R. Montgomery. Mr. Thomson, who was a teacher in the Free Church Institution, Calcutta, is head master. The school is termed the Lahore High School, and will prove most useful to the Christian community. A boarding establishment should be connected with it.

EXTENSIVE FORGERY.—A trial—we wish we in India could call it extraordinary—has taken place in the Bengal Sudder Court. Mohindronarain Puttronovis was brought up on an indictment containing ten counts of forgery, fraudulent possession of counterfeit seals or stamps of thirty-two specified persons, and wilful fabrication of upwards of eighty forged documents, some of them reaching back in date upwards of two centuries. The prosecutor, or more properly the informer, Ram Coomar Ghose, failed to give a clear account of his means of discovery. He visited the prisoner, according to his own account, and ascertained that he was ready to fabricate deeds as if executed by the Rajah of Bogur, long since deceased. The evidence, in the opinion of both the sessions judge and law officer, proved beyond reasonable doubt the prisoner's guilt. He was sentenced to the highest punishment allowed by law, viz., seven years' imprisonment, and two years' further imprisonment in lieu of stripes with labour and irons in banishment.

COLONEL A. J. LOCKHART, C.B. of her Majesty's 92nd Highlanders, displaces Lieut.-col. Biddulph from the command of the garrison of Fort William, and the latter officer returns to his artillery command at Raneegeunge.

NATIVE POLICE.—The following incident, which we observe in the Delhi Gazette, shows the utter inefficiency of the police, and their probable complicity in the crimes committed in their districts. Mr. J. Lewis, an engineer, having encamped about seven miles from Bareilly, on the Moradabad road, hired a chokedar from the village as a guard during the night. In the morning all the boxes from one side of the tent were abstracted, taken off to an adjoining field, and ransacked, the greater part of the contents being destroyed. In the seven miles between Bareilly and the scene of the robbery there are three police stations, one of them being only a few hundred yards off. Nothing has been heard of the robber.

CAPTURED ARMS.—The Government has issued instructions to the several local Governments and its agents, that all arms taken from the mutineers, or which are forfeited to the Government, shall be at once destroyed; the stocks of fire arms being burnt and the barrels, swords, spears, and other offensive weapons being broken up and sold as old iron. We hope that those to whom the latter duty is entrusted will see that the instructions as to "breaking up" are efficiently carried out prior to the sale of the "old iron;" or it may, and doubtless will, chance that an expenditure of a very little labour will suffice to restore the "broken up" weapons to their pristine state of efficiency.

LORD ELGIN'S FIRST APPOINTMENTS.—The Calcutta Gazette of the 15th March publishes Lord Elgin's first orders as Viceroy. "His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general notifies the following appointments:—The Hon. Thomas John Hovell Thurlow to be Private Secretary. Major Arthur Scott, her Majesty's 5th Fusiliers, to be Aide-de-Camp." The Private Secretary is heir to his brother, the fourth Baron Thurlow, and was born in 1838. The first peer was the famous Lord High Chancellor, who was succeeded by his nephew. The second Baron had two sons, still alive, who bear the courtesy title of "Honorable," and are both officers in the army.

CURRENCY COMMISSIONERS.—The following are appointed Currency Commissioners:—Lieutenant-Colonel C. A. Orr, Mint Master, Madras, and Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Ballard, C. B., Mint Master, Bombay.

PAPER CURRENCY.—Since the introduction of the paper currency the amount of notes issued alone from the cheque department of the Bank of Bengal up to the 5th March may be estimated at forty-eight lakhs of rupees, besides some thirty lakhs of rupees issued from other departments, making a total of about seventy-eight lakhs of rupees.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL G. G. DENNIS, of the 1st Bengal Fusiliers, who died on Saturday, March 15th, of cholera, had seen good service. He served throughout the Sutledge campaign of 1845-46, and was present at the actions of Ferozshahr and Sobraon. In the latter engagements he was severely wounded—medal and clasp. He also served in Burmah in 1852-53, and was present at the re-capture of Pegu, 21st November, 1852. Colonel Dennis commanded the 9th company, which formed part of the storming party against the stockade—medal. Was present with the 1st Fusiliers at the battle of Balee-ke Serai, under the command of Sir Henry Barnard, K.C.B., on the 18th June, 1857, and in the operations against the city of Delhi. Succeeded to the command of the regiment on Colonel Welchman being severely wounded on the 23rd June, 1857, in the Subzee Mundee, when he was struck down by a coup-de-soleil. Colonel Dennis's sudden death will be much felt by all the officers of his old regiments. By this casualty the 2nd Fusiliers (104th), get a line step. Captain Tronson and Lieutenant Matheson are promoted to Major and Captain, respectively, and a General List Ensign receives his Lieutenantancy from the 16th March.

CAPTAIN D. OSBORN, Officiating Station Staff, and Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General at Raneegeunge, has been appointed by the Bengal Government to the command of the police battalion stationed at Patna and in the Dinapore district.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MADRAS RAILWAYS.—The Governor has returned from his tour, which was not a long one, as he only went down to Negapatnam to open the Great Southern Railway. Numerous addresses were presented to him by the natives, all expressive of the great appreciation they had for the Government, which has done so much for them. Doubtless official parties had something to do with the drawing up of the addresses, which, nevertheless, may be looked upon as the expression of the real feelings of the natives. Sir William's replies were sensible and to the point. The Great Southern Railway is now open from Negapatnam to Trichinopoly. In another month we hope to be able to record that the Madras line will be opened throughout to Beypore. It will then be seen whether there is any possibility of the speculation paying. Many well-informed people say that the main line which connects the East and West Coasts never will pay 5 per cent.; for, incredible as it may appear, it has been constructed so as to avoid all the large towns, and the consequence is that it costs more to have goods removed to and from the stations than to send them direct to their destination by bullock bandies. The company ought at once to organise a system by which passengers and goods may, at such stations as Arcot, Vellore, Salem, &c., be sent up to the town, and not set down four or five miles away from it.—Athenæum.

RESTORATION OF THE TANJORE PROPERTY.—One of Lord Canning's last acts was to send down express orders to the Madras Government to restore to the Tanjore family, in accordance with the Hindu law of inheritance, the whole of the late Rajah's property, landed and personal, with the trifling exception of the regalia, which were proved at the trial in the Supreme Court to consist of only three jewels, the Surpunch, Lunga, and Chellum, and perhaps the Throne.

F. DE SOUZA, Esq., senior member of the firm of Messrs. De Souza, Cammiade and Co., has been appointed Consul at the port of Madras for the King of Portugal, by a decree of his late Majesty Don Pedro.

BURMAH.—We have files of papers from Rangoon up to March 1st, and Maulmein up to Feb. 27th. The Rangoon Gazette has the following:—"A Screw Loose.—A rumour is current in town that on the last trip of the Government steamer Bentinck to the frontier, the Deputy-commissioner of Promé, Lieut.-colonel Brown, took passage by her to Thayetmyo, with a view to inquire into certain deficiencies of money said to exist in the Treasury Department there. The head accountant, treasurer, and another subordinate, suspected of complicity in this matter, have, we hear, been arrested." The Rangoon Times says:—"Last Wednesday afternoon a whirlwind, to which phenomenon we had occasion lately to refer as being rather prevalent just now, struck one of the port boats, and rolled it over in the twinkling of an eye. As the boat was starting from the main wharf, with the report book to proceed to a ship which had just anchored, the wind caught the sail, and before the lascars could know what was the matter they were all floundering in the water. providentially no life was lost, and no damage done. The Tindal held on to the report book, bringing it out swimming with one hand. In the month of February no less a sum than one lakh and 5,000 rs. was received as Custom's duties at the port of Rangoon. A fire has swept off a large portion of the town of Henzadah; eight hundred houses were burnt down." The Maulmein Advertiser says:—"We are sorry to learn that some of our enterprising timber merchants who had recently proceeded to Karen-Ni to purchase timber have been severely maltreated and robbed of elephants, money, and personal property. Dr. Harper and his brother have recently returned from the frontier, having had to find their way down the best way they could. They had gone into the Karen-Ni State with three elephants, and from 10,000 to 15,000 rs. The chief refused to sell them any timber, we doubt not but with a view to rob them. In coming down they were set upon by about thirty men and fleeced.—Dr. Harper having been severely speared likewise. His brother fared better, having only been slightly injured. A representation of the above facts has been made to Captain Burn, with a view that redress may be obtained, but nothing can be done until the commissioner returns to Maulmein."—Athenæum.

MA. TALBOYS WHEELER.—The Government of India has received instructions from the Secretary of State for India to direct Mr. T. Wheeler, a Professor in the Madras Presidency College, to proceed to Bombay, for the purposes of arranging and classifying the public records of the Government of that presidency. Mr. Wheeler, we understand, had previously performed the same office for the Madras Government. We can imagine it is with a view to uniformity in the classification that Mr. Wheeler is directed to proceed to Bombay, as there must surely be several servants of the Government of that presidency quite capable of performing the work, to execute which Mr. Wheeler is deputed there.

MADRAS VOLUNTEERS.—Sir Hope Grant has held a review of the Madras volunteers. The regiment mustered on the occasion 600 strong.

MADRAS COTTON.—Mr. J. T. Wheeler, in his "Handbook to Cotton Cultivation in the Madras Presidency," arrives at the following conclusions:—1st. American cotton can be grown, but the profit is questionable. 2nd. Indian cotton may be improved, but only to a degree. 3rd. American cotton must always command a higher price than Indian. 4th. The demand for Indian cotton must always depend on the supply of American. Of the three last we shall say nothing. Regarding the first conclusion, Mr. Wheeler says, "the ryot has hitherto found it more safe and profitable to grow indigenous cotton than to grow New Orleans Cotton." The cultivation of the first is cheap and simple, the crop is tolerably certain, the staple clothes the family, the seed feeds the cattle, and the residue finds a ready market on the spot. The cultivation of American cotton is a speculation; it is more difficult, the crop is uncertain, the staple is not used by native spinners, and the market is doubtful and distant.

COTTON.—With reference to the sample of New Orleans Cotton, grown in Mr. Minchin's garden, forwarded to Mr. G. R. Haywood by the Madras Board of Revenue, the latter gentleman reports that he finds the cotton to be of excellent quality, well cleaned, and of good colour, superior to the average of "Dharwar saw ginned American" now selling in Bombay, and which ranks highest of all Indian Cottons, and that if this cotton can be produced in quantity, and delivered in Liverpool equal to sample, it will be eagerly sought after. He states that the "plantations" of the Southern States are nothing but a system of garden cultivation carried on on an extensive scale, and that owing doubtless to the conditions of growth as to season, soil, climate, and mode of cultivation having been carefully studied by the Europeans, there have been numerous instances of "experimental culture" in India producing as large a quantity of cotton per acre as is obtained from equal area in the United States, giving an earnest that what has been accomplished on a limited scale may very probably be achieved extensively by Europeans willing to make the attempt. He counts it bad advice "not to mind the native plant." If the adaptation of machinery to the purpose of spinning can be effected with economy, a new impulse will be given to the growth of cotton in India, and the question of dependence upon America will be in a fair way of solution. In explanation of an erroneous inference drawn from a statement contained in his letter to his Highness the Pacha of Egypt, he says, "Egyptian cotton is used in the spinning of a finer class of goods than are manufactured from New Orleans and Indian cotton, and it is therefore erroneous to suppose that the Egyptian does not find the same favour in England as the New Orleans cotton."—Madras Times.

HYDERABAD, March 8.—It was told about the 1st of March that some persons, foreigners, were employed in endeavouring to get up a rebellion here, as well against the Nizam as the English, and with that view had been distributing shawls to persons at this capital. Their apprehension was deferred to obtain evidence of facts on which to proceed against them, which at length was procured by the principal person among the conspirators giving fifty rupees to a Government spy, of course for a purpose which is not described. On the night of the 4th, the police, doing duty

FURLOUGH TO THE BENGAL NATIVE ARMY.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Girana, March 6.—With the sanction of Govt., the C. in C. is pl. to grant furlough to the whole of the Bengal native army, with the exception of those regiments which are employed, or are likely to be employed, on the Eastern frontier, to which, as soon as circumstances permit, furlough will be hereafter granted to the same extent as to the rest of the army.

2. Leave will be given, where practicable, to the extent of 10 per cent. of the effective strength of corps, except in the Punjab regiments below enumerated, recently returned, or about to return, from China, to which it will be granted to the extent of 40 per cent., agreeably to para. 10 of G.O. No. 52, dated Dec. 20, 1859.—

19th Bengal Cav.

22nd (Punjab) regt. N.I.

3. In all cases where divisional generals may find it necessary to withhold the indulgence, altogether or in part, a special report of the circumstance is to be made for H.E.'s information.

4. Leave of absence is to be given with a strict regard to the priority of claims, and the period of leave is to be limited with reference to the distance of the men's homes, and the nature of their business, so as to admit of as general a participation in the indulgence as possible.

5. Men whose homes are 700 miles and upwards from their corps should, as a general rule, be given the maximum limit of furl., namely, 9 months; and to others, whose homes are nearer, a proportionately shorter furl. should be granted, so that the soldier whose home is distant may be able, as far as practicable, to pass the same time there as his comrade whose home is less remotely situated.

6. The usual leave certificates are to be granted, and men proceeding on furl. are to be reminded of the penalties they are liable to incur from overstaying their leave; and they are also to be warned to send notice to their regiments, should sickness prevent their starting to rejoin their corps in such time as to insure their reaching them on the expiration of their leave.

7. Furl. will commence on the 1st proximo, and terminate, except in exceptional cases, on Oct. 31 next.

at the Residency, were employed to capture the principal conspirator. This man had absconded, but a Gosai, residing in the Begum Bazar, the ordinary place of residence for Gosai—how connected with this conspiracy I do not know, was apprehended, and placed in the Residency prison, the fittest place for such prisoners both for security of the person, and as enabling a more minute examination to be made. On the 5th of the month, I presume upon the information given by this man, four more arrests were made, three by the Government Arabs at a Hindoo temple (endowed by an opulent sahookar, who it is impossible to conceive, can be concerned in such a matter) which is a place of general resort, and in which devotees and Brahmins are permitted to take up their residence. These three men are, I understand, a Gosaeen, a Brahmin, and a religious mendicant, an Ac-awar. The fourth, a Poorbeea, was taken at the Residency. This last man gives the information that he accompanied a person calling himself Bala Rao, from whence it is not said, via Baroda and Poona to Hyderabad; that Bala Rao had an escort of only ten men with him, and that he distributed shawls to various persons at different places on his journey, and to several persons at this place. Among these, two persons in the Hyderabad contingent, a native and a sepoy, are particularised as having received shawls from Bala Rao. His principal dependence for getting up a rebellion was in the expectation that the Madras discharged sepoys would join him. What steps were taken by him in this direction are not known to me. It is questioned as to whether this is Bala Rao; if he has distributed many shawls, as he is said to have done, I shall lean to the opinion of this man's being the real Bala Rao. It is said that he resided with one Chownee Rajah, of Poorbeea descent, a commander of about three thousand Nizam's disciplined infantry in the city. Others say that he resided in Buk-sheegunj, a southern suburb of the city, and visited Chownee Rajah. This commander was called yesterday to the Minister's, at whose palace he still remains by order; but as he is not placed under a guard or any sort of restraint, and is allowed to have his own military retinue about him, I conclude he is in no way criminated. The Nizam's government has proclaimed a reward of a thousand rupees for the capture of the person known as Bala Rao, and by several other aliases. He had resided for several days within, or in the suburbs of the city, and if he was actively engaged in his pursuit, and in distributing shawls and money, which must have brought an aggregation of persons about him, it does not speak favourably for the police of the city, with its numerous thannas and spies dispersed over it, that his doings escaped its observations. This Bala Rao, if he could have effected it, had selected the arena of his machinations judiciously. The combustibles are ready to any man's hand, and it only requires a spark to make it blaze. The operations of this man appear, as far as we understand it, to have been confined to the regiments of the Nizam, including the Contingent composed of Poorbeas. Why it was not extended to the Mussulmans, to whom in the grade of disaffection I would give a much higher place, I do not know. I have considerable reliance on the vigilance of the Minister and the Resident, to avert tumult and disturbance. In regard to the Minister, I had almost said on his personal vigilance; for he appears to me to be almost isolated in his attachment and fidelity to the alliance with the English. It is a curious fact that the outward manifestations of disgust towards us amongst the Mussulmans are scarcely less than what it was during their triumphs in the mutiny. It had been repressed by the lesson we had set them for a time; that is forgotten, and it has now again reappeared. I am glad of it; this ventilation of their animosity, if it does not repress its force, at least gives us warning. Hyderabad must be carefully guarded. We are taught so by the success of this pseudo Bala Rao, and, if his knowledge is to be our guide, in the want of discretion with which he conducted his machinations. The sepoys of the contingent above alluded to were arrested, nothing appeared against them, and they have been released. This conspirator was sheltered by Toolja Ram, the brother of Chownee Raja, who declares he did not know him to be a seditious person; but then has he told what his previous acquaintance with him was, to dispose him to make him an inmate; and did he know nothing of, nor suspect anything from, the man's proceedings? Many arrests have taken place, but they do not wear such a form as to permit us to give credit to my information. Though, upon the brink of it, there has been no enquete.—March 10.—I informed you in my last letter that the person calling himself Bala Rao had fled; he was traced to Narsinghee, a village ten miles distant from Hyderabad. He again made his escape, but a Brahmin, his servant, was captured there. This man says that the name of his master is Rama Rao; that he was a commander of five thousand men under Tantia Toppe; that he had resided at Objeyn, at Baroda, and for some time at Poona, and had come subsequently to Hyderabad; that he was now ill of fever, and could not make long journeys. Whether reckoning upon this, or some other information, the Government has sanguine expectation of his being captured. I, however, fear that the chances of escape, from the country being with him, are in his favour. But in all probability he will not quit these territories, to which he seems to have looked as his final destination for his operations, and is consequently hiding somewhere in our neighbourhood. Ala-ood-Deen, the rebel of July, 1857, lay concealed, if I recollect rightly, nearly two years, within twenty miles of Hyderabad. His concealment was the more remarkable, as he is said to have been a man of gigantic strength, conspicuous by his fame and structure; and that this Rama Rao considers himself favoured by the population of the Deccan is ascertainable from the very little precaution taken by him to conceal himself here; I am even told he was visited by persons who intended to join him. I can hear authentically of no suspicion being entertained of any man of note having been concerned in the machinations of Rama Rao, with the exception of Tooljaram, the brother of Imrothol, better known as Chownee Rajah. Regarding him, too, I suppose no strong grounds of suspicion exists; for though he is still detained at the minister's palace, and ordered not to quit it, he is not in custody. Common rumour attaches suspicion to another man of note. A great many persons have been taken up for examination, though I do not hear that many have been imprisoned. It begins to be rumoured that this Rama Rao brought letters of credit on the bankers of this place, and that though they may not have engaged in the treason he was known to them, and there has been misprision of treason on their part. If it be so, I hope it may appear; for every person here at all above the common ranks thinks himself privileged to act in all matters just as he pleases.—Englishman.

WASTE LAND.—The Madras Times learns from official documents that a gentleman at the Presidency has been in vain attempting to obtain possession of a tract of land in the Shervaroy Hills ever since the month of August last, and notwithstanding the rules for the disposal of waste land promulgated by the Governor-general, he is still without any satisfactory answer to his application. It seems the applicant asked for 200 acres of hill waste on which Government passed the following order last October:—"Under the present rules, land required for agricultural purposes at all the hill stations is put up to auction without any upset price, subject to a yearly assessment of one rupee an acre, the purchaser being at liberty to redeem the assessment at 20 years' purchase whenever so disposed." In other words, when any person desired to become possessed of a freehold on the hill stations, he must first buy the land at auction, and when bought being still subject to the assessment, he was obliged to redeem the same by paying twenty rupees an acre for it. No wonder settlers are few and far between.

LEUT. G. PROUDFOOT, of the European Veterans, has been appointed Officiating Secretary to the Madras Military Fund, during the absence, on medical certificate, of Captain Obbard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUTENANT YATES, I.N., has been tried by court martial. The following is the verdict:—"The prisoner, having voluntarily confessed himself to be guilty of the offences with which he is charged in the additional charges, the court considers them proved. The court having found as above, does adjudge the prisoner, Lieutenant William Francis Yates, I.N., to be put down to the bottom of the list of lieutenants in H.M.'s

I.N., and further to be severely reprimanded and admonished as to his future conduct. And the said Lieutenant William Francis Yates, I.N., of H.M.'s steamer Falkland, I.N., is hereby put down to the bottom of the list of lieutenants in H.M.'s I.N., and further, he is hereby severely reprimanded and admonished as to his future conduct accordingly."

PORT ON THE WESTERN COAST.—The Money Market Review makes a good suggestion for the opening of another cotton port on Western India. For the distance of nine hundred miles from Cape Comorin to Bombay Goa is the only safe port. The attempt to open Vingorla, fifteen miles to the north, has failed. Forty miles north of that much money has been spent uselessly in Vizadroog Bay. South of Goa both Compta and Mangalore have failed, and now Sedashegur is about to be tried. The writer suggests that Portugal should be asked to declare Goa a free port, so that it would become to Bombay on the south what Kurrachee is on the north. A better plan would be to buy the Portuguese out of India, by giving them a part of our territories in Africa. Sedashegur has yet to be proved a failure, and the railway now open to Beypore will, with the transfer of Canara to Bombay, soon change many of the conditions on the Western coast.

NAWAB OF SAVANOR.—It appears that the Nawab of Savanor, who has recently been admitted a member of the Bombay Legislative Council, is a descendant of one Abdool Dullul Khan, on whom a post of great importance was conferred by Aurungzebe in 1692, with charge of districts rated at nearly twenty lakhs of rupees, and a residence at Savanor. The villages in possession of the present Nawab yield him annually a lakh and a half of rupees, to which is added a pension by the British Government. Vinchookur, the other member of the council, is descended from Wittal Suddashar, one of the chief leaders under the Rhaoo in Hindoostan. The present chief enjoys personal jagheers valued at upwards of 60,000 Rs., and resides at Vinchoor.

PROFESSOR CANDY, of the Elphinstone College, has been deputed by Government to classify the old records and to destroy those which are useless.

DHARWAR COTTON.—During the greater part of the past season the demand for saw-ginned Dharwar has led to its adulteration and deterioration, and it is quite certain that its reputation must suffer in consequence, probably to a very considerable extent, unless the termination of the American blockade occur opportunely to nip such fraud in the bud, and restore caution and common sense to the Dharwar dealers. We trust that the fears excited regarding the quality of the present crop may not be realised, but the actual existence of the danger, and the experience of past should moderate the confidence of those who unwisely and prematurely chaunt the triumph of Indian cotton.—Times of India.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, MARCH 15.

The internal state of the Chinese Empire, and the attitude of foreign nations with regard to the belligerents in the domestic war which has continued for so many years to desolate the central provinces of this country, will, it is now evident, be the chief subjects of interest here for many months to come. The step deliberately taken by the allied naval and military commanders of protecting Shanghai is gradually leading us on to actual hostilities with the Taiping rebels, and it is now pretty well ascertained that there exists among these people a party strongly in favour of turning their arms against foreigners. The English Admiral has been keeping down his restless spirit during the past fortnight by short excursions up and down the Wongpoo river (on which Shanghai is situated), in search of rebel forces. These were discovered, and driven off on two occasions, the first about the 15th ultimo, five miles down the river, where Colonel Ward with 500 disciplined Chinese routed a rebel force, while the admiral attended with "moral support;"

the next, about a week afterwards, fifteen miles up the river, when a force, consisting of 400 English, 300 French, and 700 disciplined Chinese, drove a force of 5,000 rebels out of a village in which they had fortified themselves.

The vessels engaged in taking up the forces consisted of four British gunboats and two French, with artillery, marines, soldiers, and blue jackets. They reached the scene of operations about 12.50 p.m. on Friday, opposite Ming-hong. Four of Bradshaw's mountain howitzers, and 6lb. rockets with tubes were immediately landed; also a field-piece from the Imperieuse, and two French field-pieces. A party of French soldiers guarded the artillery during the night, when, to their astonishment, a reconnoitring party came down to have a "look see," bearing lanterns in the most absurd manner, and had the audacity to fire upon the guard. On Saturday morning 35 Royal Artillerymen were landed under Captain Bradshaw, 350 sailors and marines under Captain Willes, R.N., and Captain Holland, R.M., together with 300 French soldiers and 700 disciplined Chinese under Colonel Ward—in all 1,385 men, besides a few of the Chinese coolie corps for dragging the guns. This strong party marched inland on the Pootung side of the river, a distance of about three miles, when they came within view of the rebels, upwards of five thousand strong, entrenched within a fortified village. They arrived before the place at 7.45 a.m., and took up a position without opposition from the enemy. The rebels first opened fire, which was answered quickly in a most refreshing manner by the ordnance. A breach being effected in the entrenchments by the steady firing of the 12-pound brass howitzer of her Majesty's ship Imperieuse under the direction of Commander Gibson, and Captain Bradshaw's field-pieces having silenced the enemy's guns, a force under Captain Holland and Lieutenant Fawkes advanced, detaching a small party of marines and a body of Ward's men to attack the rebels while retreating in the rear. On their advancing, the rebels ran from the fortifications, and came to a stand in the main street of the fortified village. Upon this the field-piece from the Imperieuse, in charge of Lieuts. Stuart and Richardson, swept them down with grape and canistershot. After this their retreat became a flight, when the party of marines and Chinese detached to cut them off did considerable execution, some nine hundred or one thousand having been killed and wounded. The place was burnt to the ground by Ward's men; while the rebels who escaped retired to a walled town some two miles distant, which they set on fire, and vanished into the country. The casualties among the allies were one killed and about twenty wounded, and of Ward's men one officer severely wounded and about fifty rank and file wounded. The expedition returned to Shanghai about six p.m., leaving the Admiral, Captains Holland and Bradshaw, with a few marines, in the Coromandel. It was altogether a short, sharp, and decisive action, which will doubtless have a strong moral effect upon the other bands of Taiping rebels who are now threatening the safety of Shanghai city and settlement.

At Peking, by the last accounts, some activity was being manifested in the promotion or degradation of civil and military officers according to their conduct. The Emperor has also decreed that the provinces now distressed by the presence of the rebels shall be exempt from payment of this year's taxes to the Government. This measure is affirmed to proceed from pity for the suffering of the people in the provinces specified. Altogether, there has nothing occurred during the past fortnight that points to a way out of the present unsatisfactory condition into which Chinese affairs have fallen.

At Kinkiang (our port at the mouth of the Poyang lake) the Imperial troops have lately been threatening and suspicious in their conduct to foreigners. The principal residents have transmitted to Shanghai a statement of their position. For some reason which does not appear, the gunboat originally stationed there has been withdrawn, and the Imperial troops, not knowing how much we are befriending them elsewhere, have taken the opportunity of annoying foreigners; beyond this no harm is likely to ensue.

The news from Japan has reference only to the chronic state of dissatisfaction with their consuls in which the mercantile community have always existed since the country was opened. The old complaint, that the rules for residents are not followed by those who made them, has broken out more virulently than before. There is evidently a lack of consular integrity in the country; by next mail we shall know the grievances in detail.

From the other ports there is nothing of importance.—Overland China Mail.

THE STRAITS.

JAVA, March 15.—There seems a prospect at last of the Banjermassing insurrection being brought to a close, as the mainspring of the rebellion, Pandergang Hydayat, has been induced to surrender himself and proceed to Java, where he is now safely lodged. It will be recollected that a short time ago he accepted the terms of the Government, and was proceeding to the steamer for the purpose of embarking for Java, when he suddenly changed his mind, and landed amid such a number of natives that the assistant resident thought it prudent not to attempt interfering. It appears he was induced to adopt this course by Demang Lehman, who, for purposes of his own, managed to inspire him with a great distrust of the intentions of Government, and had kept back the greater part of the communications addressed to Hydayat by the Resident. Colonel Verspyck, on being made acquainted with the untoward state of affairs, quickly returned to Martapura, and took such energetic measures that Hydayat soon surrendered at discretion, and this time was safely lodged on board the steamer which conveyed him to Java. Demang Lehman, finding his intrigues detected, fled into the jungle with a few followers, but it was thought he would not be able to make any head. The speedy pacification of Banjermassing is confidently expected, as the minor chiefs were rapidly making their submission. Stormy weather still continued to prevail in Java, but not with so much violence. The abundance of rain was found favourable to the paddy planting, and the prospects of the rice crop were reported to be everywhere favourable. The Resident of Palembang had ascended the Musi River in a small steamer to a distance of one hundred and thirty-three English miles without meeting any interruption; the least depth was two fathoms. Smallpox had broken out in the Beencoolen division, and a part of the population had fled to the interior through fear of its ravages. Vaccination was making great progress amongst the population. A barbarous custom is said still to prevail, here and there, amongst the natives, of throwing persons suffering severely from this disease into the water, or burying them alive.—Overland Singapore Free Press.

MAJOR-GENERAL DE BRAUW, Civil and Military Governor of the West Coast of Sumatra, died at Padang on the 21st February last, in his 52nd year. He had seen much service in Netherland India.

cided and declared policy of the Government of India, which policy has been fully approved by her Majesty's Home Government, to abstain from all interference between planter and ryot upon this delicate question, leaving it to be solved in natural course, as all other matters of bargain and price are solved. The avoidance of all official intermeddling with this question was in a very marked manner enjoined by the Governor general in Council, in his orders of March 12 last, constituting the late special commission. In those orders H.E. said, "It will be his (the commissioner's) duty to make it plain to the ryots that the purpose of his visit has no connection with indigo." And this was entirely consistent with the policy deliberately determined upon, and ordered to be enforced, by H.E. in Council at the beginning. In orders of the Government of India, dated Feb. 27, 1861, paras. 25 and 26, on the report of the Indigo Commission, H.E. observed as follows:—"The Governor general agrees in the Lieut. governor's objections to the appointment of special indigo district officers, or to special indigo commissioners. To the appointment of special commissioners, indeed (which was much pressed upon Govt. at one time), there is in the judgment of H.E. in Council a fatal impediment. Unless the number of them were far greater than the supply of thoroughly competent and available persons would permit, they would be quite unequal to the task."

8. The Lieut.-governor cannot recommend a reversal of policy upon this important point. Not only does it appear to him that the principle of the policy hitherto prescribed is the only sound, fair, and safe principle, but he thinks that any vacillation now would be weak, and would place the Government in a false position, from which it would be hardly possible to extricate itself, and which, in all likelihood, would have serious consequences in one way or another. But should such a fundamental change of policy be resolved upon it will be necessary for the Government of India, upon its own responsibility, to tell the special commissioner explicitly what he should endeavour to induce the planter to do, and what he should endeavour to induce the ryot to do, in this matter of indigo. In so doing, what has been already said to both parties must not be forgotten, even if it be resolved to say something different now.

9. The position of the case appears to be this. The terms formerly offered by the planters were considered unremunerative by the ryots. Since the general refusal of the ryots to cultivate any longer upon those terms, one planter, Mr. Hills, has offered infinitely more remunerative terms; but it has not been reported that his example has been as yet followed by others. What, then, are the several lines which Government, in interfering in the business, might adopt? The special commissioner on the part of Government might endeavour to support planters in adhering to their old terms, and to induce ryots to accept them to the injury of the ryots, and to the manifest ruin of all planters who had raised their terms, or he might endeavour to induce planters greatly to raise their terms, and to support ryots in accepting nothing less; of which style of interference, by an officer who cannot know certainly what terms can be offered or accepted profitably, planters would have just ground to complain. The objections to either course appear upon the surface, and no third course is apparent.

10. On the whole it appears to the Lieut.-governor that, wherever things remain much in the state Messrs. Montresor and Morris found them to be everywhere last year, that is to say, wherever the indigo question is at the bottom of the differences, the obstacles in the way of all attempts to adjust them by official, but authoritative interference are insuperable.

11. Mr. Herschel's account, however, of the present aspect of the question in Nuddea is this: though indigo was the origin of the differences, and remains more or less hidden still at the bottom of them, the form which they have now assumed is that of a general and vast enhancement of rents and eviction of ryots in masses. Mr. Herschel observed: "Twenty-five thousand notices of enhancement of rent have been issued in this Zilla (Nuddea), and the close of the year only in April prevented the number from being greater. At the present moment it is hard to say what is the limit threatened, seventy or eighty thousand is a low estimate." In the following paragraph he adds:—"An exceedingly great number of suits for ejectment have been instituted. Many thousands of bigbhars of chur lands on which ryots have squatted for a generation have been swept clear, and at the least two or three thousand ryots in all parts of the country have been ejected from the land they believed to be theirs in a certain sense."

12. Such a revolution as this, attempted to be carried out in one or two years in an agricultural district may well produce differences between landlord and tenant, and it does not at present appear that any other sources of difference exists formally.

13. The question arises how is the special commissioner for reconciliation to deal with these differences? One thing certainly he may do unobjectionably at least, and probably in some cases with beneficial result. He may exhort the planter zemindar to moderation; for at all times, and in all things, moderation is good. And he may impress upon ryots the necessity of submission to legal proceedings. But if it is found that this is the only function which a special commissioner can discharge with fairness, the question arises whether such an appointment is expedient for this sole purpose, because the exhortations of the numerous local officers acquainted with the parties, and the general nature of their disputes should be more effected. Mr. Herschel, it will be observed, anticipates no success from any endeavours to conciliate the existing differences, otherwise than by their settlement in regular course of law. He believes that the district is going through an irresistible course of re-settlement; and if the result of an attempt at reconciliation, as Mr. Herschel expects, is to be a failure, harm rather than good would result from the adoption of so exceptional a measure as the appointment of a special commissioner for reconciliation. The Landholders and Commercial Association assures the Government that the planters are willing to come to fair and reasonable terms for their lands; the expression, however, seems to imply the design of a general re-settlement, and every individual planter may act as he thinks best himself. The only fact known is that 25,000 notices of enhancement have been issued for the past year, and 70,000 or 80,000 are expected to be issued before the end of the year now current. When the number of families interested in the above number of suits for enhancement is considered, the advantage of permanent and final settlement is obvious; but upon the vital importance to each family of the manner in which its case is settled is considered, it seems equally obvious that permanent and final settlement must be authoritative—that is to say, by legal decision.

14. The Governor-general in Council will observe that, as Mr. Herschel remarks, there is now no mere question of feeling involved, but a question of property affecting deeply the rights and interests of numerous zemindars, and the rights and interests of scores of thousands of ryots for themselves and their heirs for ever. That such a question is to be settled over a district containing a million of inhabitants by the exhortation of one officer having no authority in the matters does not seem to the Lieut.-governor a reasonable expectation. No officer can fairly exhort a single individual, whether he be a zemindar or a ryot, to abandon his right, or can fairly make any recommendation to him in such a matter till he is satisfied of what those rights are; and to ascertain those rights would be equivalent to making the settlement of a district.

15. The Governor-general in Council is aware that the question of rates affects three distinct classes of ryots. The first class have a right to hold their lands for ever at fixed rates; the second class have a right to hold their lands for ever at rates which may not be enhanced beyond limits, to be prescribed by the Courts on certain fixed principles, the application of which may vary in every instance; and the third have no right beyond the year. But to which of these classes, in respect to each field he cultivates, any individual ryot belongs, and what is the limit of enhancement in the case of any particular ryot of the second class, are questions incapable of decision otherwise than by a judicial action in every instance. This being the state of things, it would seem that any attempt to settle them in masses by an officer having no legal authority to interfere would be futile; or if in practice so conducted as not to be futile, then it would be likely to fail in point of justice as between man and man.

16. These are the difficulties of the question, and upon the whole the conclusion of the Lieut.-governor upon it is, that the objections of Mr. Herschel and of the commissioner to the proposed measure are sound. He agrees with Mr. Herschel that, where moderation and fairness are not departed from, neither party is open to blame, for both are claiming or defending, as they believe, their own. He believes that Mr. Herschel is right in saying that something approaching to the re-settlement of the district is unavoidable, and ought to be provided for; but no appointment of an officer having no authority, or no sufficient authority to act in the business, will be an adequate provision for the purpose.

17. The Lieut.-governor, therefore, supports Mr. Herschel's plan, with the valuable addition recommended by Mr. Schaleh. The plan consists in the appointment of a single officer, who is to exercise the united powers of a collector, of a judge, and of a commissioner, under Act X. of 1859. Such an officer will have the appellate jurisdiction in all suits relating to the differences to be settled and the general superintendence of all the courts of original jurisdiction in such suits. Such an officer the Lieut.-governor would be prepared to appoint in each of the two districts named. In Nuddea the services of such an officer are certainly required immediately. At present no information is before Government to show that there are the same difficulties, to the same extent, in regard to the district of Jessore as there are in Nuddea. The total number of suits of all descriptions under Act X. pending in Jessore, according to the last returns was only 322, which is much less than the number in other districts of equal extent, where the question of ryots willfully withholding payment of their lawful rents has never been raised.

18. The only remaining question, which has not been touched upon by the orders under reply, but which has been strongly insisted upon by the Association in their letters both to the Government of India and to this Government, is the excessive arrears of rent. The actual amount of this difficulty, however, should not be exaggerated. From the statement appended to Mr. Fergusson's letter, it appears that, taking the collections of 1859 as showing the normal state of things, where Rs. 10,01,774 ought to have been collected, Rs. 7,77,057 only have been collected, showing an abnormal arrear of Rs. 2,25,717 accruing upon the several states of twenty-one concerns lying in no less than five districts. This is a considerable arrear; but, considering the vast extent of country in which the estates are spread, it does not support the representation made in the first part of paragraph 20 of your letter under reply. Nor can the amount stated be taken as representing accurately the actual amount of arrears of rent improperly withheld by ryots from planter zemindars. The Lieut.-governor would draw the attention of the Government of India to the account contained in the Commissioner of Nuddea's letter, No. 4, dated the 7th instant, of his interview with Mr. Tripp of Bamundee, from which it would appear that the dispute between that gentleman and his ryots is almost entirely on account of certain cesses claimed by him in addition to the rent. These cesses, in every case tried, have been judicially pronounced to be illegal, and Mr. Tripp has always submitted to the judgment without appealing; but nevertheless he continues to demand them. In this particular instance the ryots seem to be perfectly right in refusing to pay "the rent demanded by the Tehsildars, which includes these cesses," while the planter who has not preferred any appeal against the decisions pronouncing them to be illegal seems to be in error in continuing to demand them. The arrears in Mr. Tripp's (the Bamundee) concern stand high amongst those in the list furnished by Mr. Fergusson compared with the amount of annual collections; but the knowledge we happen to have in this case (which is the only case of the merits of which we have as yet any knowledge at all) shows that this item should be struck out altogether. In the absence of any inquiry it is impossible to say in how many other estates belonging to the other factories in the list the arrears can be justly attributed to similar circumstances.

19. In conclusion, the Lieut.-governor desires me to observe, that if the plan proposed by Mr. Herschel and Mr. Schaleh should be adopted, which he regards as an effective, practical, and legitimate measure, no other description of special commission would seem to be necessary or advisable. At the same time he agrees most fully in the opinion, that whatever can be usefully and unobjectionably done to encourage moderate and reasonable conduct in all parties, and to promote an amicable spirit between them, should be done. What he doubts is the policy of appointing a special commander for reconciliation as a means of advancing the object.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) E. H. LUSHINGTON,
Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

MOSES AND CAPTAIN BARKER.

ALTHOUGH it is not usually within the province of an ordinary journalist to comment on Scriptural matters, we yet hope to be pardoned for alluding to a very interesting paper on the Passage of the Red Sea, read by Mr. Heycock, at a recent meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society. Our motive for departing from the beaten path may not be of the most exalted order, but it is at least disinterested. We do not pretend to throw any light of our own on obscure points in the Mosaic record, nor have we the slightest intention of inditing a dissertation on the nature of miracles. Our object is simply to claim for the Naval Service of the Honourable East India Company the credit of corroborating through their scientific labours the truthfulness of the Mosaic narrative of the escape from Egypt. As the result of patient and laborious surveys, Captain Barker and his comrades ascertained the existence of a sandbank stretching from Addajah point, right across the sea, which is there between four and five miles in breadth. On either side of this bank, which is about a mile in width, there is a depth of eleven fathoms, whereas the shoal itself is not much over four fathoms deep. The first thing, of course, to be proved is the fact of the arrival of the Israelites at Addajah point, and this is done by Mr. Heycock in a perfectly satisfactory manner. He shows that the fugitives could only have struck the sea at that very spot, coming, as they did, through the great desert to the east of Egypt. The only passage through the mountains leads into the Wadi Mousa, or Valley of Moses, which extends from east to west, about eighteen miles, and exhibits a frontage to the sea of about twenty miles. When, therefore, Pharaoh had heard that the Hebrews had entered this valley, he might naturally be expected to exclaim, "They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in." They were, in fact, enclosed in a cul-de-sac. Before them were the depths of the Red Sea; on either side rose lofty and precipitous mountains, while in the rear they were hotly pursued by the Egyptians. Escape seemed impossible, without a subversion of the laws of nature, and the people not unreasonably murmured against Moses for bringing them into a pass whence there was no practicable outlet, and where fight and flight were equally unavailable. But deliverance was at hand, without violating the apparent laws of nature, and by only a temporary departure from the ordinary routine of natural phenomena in that particular district. All night long the wind blew from the eastward with extraordinary violence, so that the waters were driven down from the upper part of the sea until the sand-bank already alluded to was left comparatively dry. Over this bridge, as it were, the Israelites hastened without a moment's delay, while the tower-like hill, named Migdol, screened their movements from the observation of Pharaoh's host, encamped in the upper part of the valley. On their right hand and on their left they were protected by the deep waters above and below the shoal, as by a wall, and the only chance of overtaking them was by pursuing the path they themselves had taken. But the passage of so large a multitude must necessarily have rendered the sands almost impassable, so that the chariots and horsemen of Pharaoh slowly floundered on as through

"That Serbonian bog,
Betwixt Damiata and Mount Casius old
Where armies whole have sunk."

Then, as the east wind went down the sea would rapidly return to its bed, and the struggling and panic-stricken host would be swallowed up as in a quicksand, until "there remained not so much as one of them." Local tradition, says Mr. Heycock, confirms this narrative. "The valley is called Wadi Mousa, or Valley of Moses, the neighbouring mountain is called Jibbel Attakah, or Mount of Deliverance, whilst the point of land jutting into the sea is called Ras Addajah, which is a corruption of Ras Attakah, or Point of Deliverance." To Captain Barker and Mr. Heycock is, therefore, due the credit of removing an ugly obstacle from the path of many an honest inquirer, and of giving a rational explanation of an event that has so long puzzled the scientific world. Artists, indeed, may complain that they can never again introduce those gracefully curling waves which seemed like hounds straining at the leash and eager to be let loose. But, on the other hand, picturesque effects will not be wanting in the morning sun shining fierce and red through the sand-wreaths borne from the eastern desert, in the plashing shoal, in the foam-covered waters on either side, and in the mingled joy, astonishment, and fear of the confused and hurrying multitude, jostling each other in selfish haste to reach the further shore.

A SILVER AGE.

THE Iron Age is now at an end, we trust, so far as India is concerned, and a brighter era is beginning to dawn upon that mighty empire. If an unbroken peace be too great a blessing to expect, there is at least no immediate prospect of any military operations of a more formidable character than those at present being conducted against the hill tribes on the borders of Bengal. Internal wars are almost impossible so long as an overpowering European force is maintained in the country, and perfect faith is kept with the native princes and potentates, our feudatory allies. However little they may love the British Government they hate each other more, and will more patiently endure a foreign yoke that presses lightly on all alike, than submit to the supremacy of one of themselves. The recent policy of Lord Canning has especially tended to give them a personal interest in the stability of the British power, and to inculcate a taste for the arts of peace and industry. The improvement of agriculture, the working of mines, the construction of roads and canals, the introduction of European skill and machinery, are all causes which, acting in combination, will gradually overcome even the most inveterate prejudices, and open up the path of progress and civilization. Such a consummation must, of course, be the work of time, and more than one generation will probably pass away before the return of the Saturnia regna and the golden age of peace, contentment, and ready obedience to the law. But it is, at least, a matter of congratulation that the inauguration of a silver age should seem to be at hand, and that the new Viceroy commences his reign under the most favourable auspices. For the first year all that can fairly be asked of him is to keep up the impetus imparted by his predecessor, and to carry out the important measures which he had the merit of originating, though denied the opportunity of giving them full effect. The two resolutions authorising the sale of waste lands and the redemption of the land-tax will ever be honourably associated in men's minds with the name of Earl Canning, but their practical working and success will mainly rest with Lord Elgin. The extension of the permanent settlement to the Upper Provinces, and perhaps also to the minor Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, will probably be the first distinction of the new administration, as there is little doubt that it would have emanated from Lord Canning could he have remained another year in the country. There are other measures, such as the opening of the new Law Courts, which will find a place in the history of the present vice-royalty, though virtually they belong to the one that has just closed. But there is much still left for Lord Elgin to devise and claim as his own, so soon as the novelty of his position has worn off, and personal experience shall have rendered him partially independent of his official advisers. He is not likely, indeed, to fall into the absurd if amiable delusions to which Lord Cornwallis was subject, nor do we expect him to exclaim, with that well-meaning and simple-minded nobleman, "Before I have been a year in the country I will take care that every one of those poor fellows"—pointing to a group of naked coolies—"shall have a coat to his back." No vulgar errors of this kind are to be feared on the part of the present Viceroy, but there are others of not less grave importance to which every new Governor-general must always be liable. It is no easy matter, in the first place, to exhibit perfect impartiality towards the conquerors and the conquered. A generous mind will naturally lean towards the latter, and seek by empirical legislation to destroy every vestige of social inferiority. The task, however, is as hopeless as to whiten the skin of a blackamoor, or to melt an iceberg by a lecture on Caloric. It is only by education and the moral elevation of the native character that any radical improvement can be effected, and this will never be accomplished until women are duly recognised and take their proper place in native society. But considering the great changes that have crept in during the last few years, it would be unpardonable to despair of even the highest proof and triumph of civilisation, or to renounce as impracticable the work of a nation's regeneration. Another stumbling-block before the very threshold of Government-house is the traditional jealousy that prevents a right understanding being brought about between the official and the non-official European communities. Lord Canning's Minute on the Rent question, and the retirement of Sir J. P. Grant, allow some hope, indeed, of the gradual extinction of this insensate estrangement of fellow-countrymen residing among aliens, far from their native land. But there is always the danger that a new Governor-general may, unconsciously perhaps, derive his views and opinions from those around him, and so imbibe their prejudices as well as benefit by their special experience. We can only trust, therefore, that Lord Elgin will profit by the conclusions arrived at, however tardily, by his predecessor, and will hold himself aloof and far above all petty strifes and personal antagonisms. And while he displays the same favour to all good citizens, whatever their rank, religion, or colour, and the same inexorable justice to all evil doers, he will do well more particularly to direct his attention to the inevitable necessity of furnishing the natives with a legitimate career. This they are fully entitled to demand, and the soundest policy dictates a ready acquiescence in whatever is right and equitable. Thus, and thus only, will the future peace and prosperity of India under British rule be firmly assured, and Trojan and Tyrian alike be interested in the stability of the empire and the happiness of its countless inhabitants.

MADAGASCAR.

THE Parisian journals have of late so persistently and emphatically spoken of the preference shown by the King of Madagascar for a strict alliance with France, that it may be worth while to glance for a moment at the actual state of affairs in that island. The last King, Radama I., was a man of an enlightened mind, who fully understood the humanising influences of Christianity, and the advantages arising from free intercourse with foreign nations. During his reign many thousands of his subjects embraced the new faith, and submitted themselves reverently to the teaching of the excellent missionaries who had taken up their abode in the midst of them. Unfortunately this good and sagacious monarch died in 1828, and was succeeded by his widowed queen, a woman of a cruel and relentless disposition, and a bigoted persecutor of the Christian converts. Hundreds of men, women, and children were tortured and put to death by this human fiend, and foreigners were subjected to all manner of slights and ill usage. An injudicious and unsuccessful attack by an Anglo-French squadron upon the fort of Tamatave in 1845 converted into positive hatred Queen Ranavaloo's previous prejudices against Europeans, and from that time the persecution of her Christian subjects raged with inconceivable fury. Her only son, Rakoto, was, however, well disposed towards these unhappy creatures, and strove earnestly to mitigate their sufferings. It seems that he himself had been instructed in the principles of the Christian faith, and it is even said that he had made open profession of his belief. This is, probably, an exaggeration, but it is certain that his own life was frequently in danger from the machinations of the intolerant opponents of Christianity. In the year 1853 the Mauritius merchants succeeded by the payment of 15,000 dollars in inducing the Queen to allow trade to be reopened between the two islands, nor has it since been interrupted. The French, it is well known, have signally failed in making converts to Romanism, as the natives always demanded a copy of the Scriptures for their own guidance, and for which they had been encouraged to ask by the Protestant missionaries. A French merchant, however, working upon Prince Rakoto's apprehension of a violent death, prevailed upon him to write to the Emperor Napoleon III., entreating him to take the island under his protection. This happened shortly after the conclusion of the Crimean war, and for a time it was currently reported that a French expedition was about to be despatched to establish freedom of worship in the kingdom of Madagascar. The rumour was probably unfounded, and in any case the end proposed would not have been achieved without a fearful loss of men and money. But all things human have an end, and even Queens are only mortal. Thus it came to pass that in 1861 her diabolical Majesty Ranavaloo was removed by death, and Prince Rakoto reigned in her stead by the title of Radama II. Almost immediately after his accession, the new King intimated to the Governor of Mauritius that all import and export duties at the different ports were entirely abolished, and that a congratulatory Mission would be received with the highest honours and consideration. Mr. Stevenson, therefore, at once deputed Lieutenant-colonel Middleton and a few other gentlemen to wait upon his Majesty with some valuable presents, and to express the friendly sentiments of the British nation and Government. Nothing could be more satisfactory than the reception accorded to this little Embassy. They were treated with the utmost kindness and hospitality, and the King repeatedly assured them of his earnest desire to cultivate a cordial intercourse with the great country which they so humbly represented. Colonel Middleton further distinctly contradicts the statement put forth in certain of the Parisian papers, that a Frenchman had been appointed to fill an important Executive office. "Such a step," he adds, "would be entirely opposed to the spirit of the Madagascar Government." His Majesty more than once expressed his intention to send Commissioners and samples of the produce of the island to the International Exhibition, and requested that a British Mission should be present at his coronation in August next ensuing. It is very desirable that this request should be gratified. There is still ample time to direct Lord Elgin to despatch a brilliant embassy loaded with rich and useful gifts, and with instructions to confirm the King's friendly disposition towards the British Government. There is scope, too, for our missionary societies, as one of the chief wants of the islanders is a supply of Bibles—their old ones having been much damaged by being buried in the earth during the years of persecution. Madagascar itself is naturally very fertile, and admirably adapted for the growth of all kinds of cereals. It also abounds in grazing lands of excellent quality, on which are reared herds of singular beauty. Iron ore of great purity is extensively worked, and it is believed that goldfields exist in the interior. Be this as it may, there cannot be two opinions as to the expediency of cultivating the closest relations with King Radama II., and of affording him every assistance in improving the moral and material condition of his people. As it is of the highest importance to counteract French intrigue in every quarter of the globe, and above all to the eastward of the Cape, it is only good policy to strengthen the hands of the new monarch, and enable him to carry out the wise and beneficent views he has already enunciated.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that during the half-year an additional length of seventy-two and a-quarter miles was opened in Bengal—namely, an extension of the colliery line three and a-half miles, and from Rajmahal to Bhaugulpore, sixty-nine miles. There were also opened 120½ miles in the North-West Provinces. Since the opening of those lines the railway has been completed to Monghyr, 303 miles from Calcutta, so that the company has now at work 359½ miles in Bengal and 243½ miles in the North-West Provinces, making a total of 603½ miles. The Board have every reason to hope that the remainder of the main line will be finished by the end of the present year. The Board have determined to proceed with the works on the Jubulpore line, the first twenty-seven miles out of Allahabad being already under construction. The average length of line at work during the half-year in the North-West Provinces was 218½ miles. The permanent way and works have been maintained at a cost of 9d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 37·31 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ending the 31st of December last have been £79,324 against £32,063 in the corresponding half-year. The gross receipts for the year 1861 have been £143,008, against £90,424 in 1860. The average number of miles at work in Bengal and in the North-West Provinces during the year 1860 was 306, and the net receipts £170,087, or £10.13s. 9d. per mile per week; the average length of line at work during the year 1861 was 432 miles, and the amount of net receipts £263,025, or £11.14s. 2d. per mile per week. The total amount of capital estimated to be necessary for completing the line to Delhi, with a single line of rails—£10,700,000—has now been issued in shares and debentures. The capital account to the 31st of December in England, and the 31st of October in India, shows that £17,158,530 had been expended, leaving a balance of £1,767,785 unexpended.

The revenue account for the half-year ending the 31st of December last showed that £174,675 had been received in the Bengal district, and £94,475 or 54·09 per cent., leaving a balance of £80,200. The revenue account for the line in the North-West Provinces for the half-year amounted to £79,323, and the expenses to £29,593, or 37·31 per cent., leaving a balance of £49,730. The interest account showed that the amount of interest paid and payable by the Government of India to the 31st of December last was £3,580,811, and that the amount repaid from revenue to the same date was £353,019, leaving a balance of £2,727,792.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the section of eighty-seven miles from Nassick to Chalesgaum, on the north-east division of the railway, was opened for public traffic on the 1st of October last, making the number of miles worked 437½. The traffic of the opened portions of the railway continued to increase steadily. During last half-year the number of passengers who used the railway was 1,217,595, against 831,864 in the corresponding period of the preceding year, and the quantity of merchandise carried was 116,263 tons, against 85,103 tons for the corresponding period. The whole of the traffic between the Concan and the Deccan had to be passed over the gaps in the railway at the Bhor and Thull Ghâts, on the ordinary public roads, by the very inferior means of conveyance of the country. In consequence of this much of the traffic continued to follow former channels of communication, while that which was intrusted to the company involved, for its transport at those points, a high expenditure, utterly disproportioned to the through railway rate received by them. The expenditure in working the traffic of the last half-year across the Ghâts amounted to £30,000, being equal to 25 per cent. of the whole receipts on revenue account, and to 44 per cent. of the outlay in working the railway, exclusive of the Ghâts. Through railway communication upon the south-eastern division would soon be effected, as the works of the Bhor Ghât incline were now fast approaching completion. The receipts on revenue account amounted to £112,115 after deducting from the gross receipts the expenditure at the Ghâts. The outlay in working the railway was £88,280, leaving £23,835 as net profit to be carried to the credit of the interest account with the Government. If to this net profit were added the expenditure of £30,000, which would have been avoided, had uninterrupted through working been possible, and a sum of £10,000, estimated as the saving that would have been effected upon the consumption of fuel, with the railway completed to the coal fields from which the supply would be derived, the aspect of the company's net profits would be entirely changed. It was expected that a further distance of fifty-eight miles from Chalesgaum to Julgaum, on the north-east division, would be completed in the course of the ensuing summer. The entire line to Jubbulpore was now in hand, the new contractors for the line between Bhosawal and Jubbulpore having severally commenced operations. It was estimated that the company's undertaking would be completed for a capital of £11,000,000, of which £2,000,000 would be raised on debentures, and £9,000,000 on shares. The report of Mr. R. W. Graham, the engineer, stated that the length of railway now under construction was 675½ miles, of which thirteen and a-quarter miles were on the Bhor Ghât incline, nine and three-quarter miles on the Thul Ghât incline, seventy-two miles from Chalesgaum to Bhosawal, 243 miles from the latter place to Nagpore, and 337½ miles from Bhosawal to Jubbulpore. The capital account to the 31st of December showed that £8,187,734 had been received, and £7,452,825 expended, leaving a balance of £734,909.

GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the first portion of the line was opened on the 15th of July last, from Negapatam to Trivalore, fourteen and a-half miles, and the second on the 2nd of December, from the latter place to Tanjore, thirty-four miles—making forty-eight and a-half miles. The remaining portion of the line from Tanjore to Trichinopoly (thirty miles) was opened for traffic by Sir W. Denison, the Governor of Madras, on the 11th of March, thus completing the first section, seventy-eight and a-half miles in length, undertaken by the company. The revenue account showed that, within the five and a-half months during which the line had been partially opened, there had been carried 66,898 passengers—namely, 68 first-class, 2,221 second class, and 64,614 third-class. It was only since the 2nd of December that a first-class carriage had been attached to the trains. The total receipts for the five and a-half months' traffic amounted to £3,471, and the expenditure to £1,647, or 47·44 per cent., leaving the net profits £1,824. The receipts averaged 3s. 10½d. per train mile, the expenses 1s. 10d., and the net profit 2s. 0½d. per train mile. Since the opening of the railway petitions had been received from native merchants for three additional stations—namely, at Sickle, Koradacherry, and Ammispetta. A station at Sickle, three and a-half miles from Negapatam, had been sanctioned, and the two others were under consideration. The amount of interest received from the Government by the company, including that for the half-year ending the 31st December last, was £12,606. With the view to the economical working of the line, and as an experimental measure, the directors had authorised the agent to run only two classes of passenger carriages over the railway, at the following fares—for carriages with seats, 10 pie per mile; and for carriages without seats, 3 pie per mile. The Government of Madras had given their sanction to this experiment being tried for six months from the date of opening the line to Trichinopoly. The directors had obtained permission from Sir Charles Wood to survey that part of the extension line from Madras to Tuticorin, through the well-known cotton district of Tinnevely. The expense of the survey had been limited to £3,000, and it had been stipulated that the cost incurred should be transferred and charged against the capital that might be raised for the construction of the proposed extension line in the event of its being undertaken. The capital account showed that £551,963 had been received, and £344,794 expended, leaving a balance of £7,169.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARRIVAL OF LORD CANNING.—The ex-Governor-general of India arrived at Dover on Saturday afternoon, accompanied by Lord and Lady Sydney, Lord Harris (who had been waiting at Marseilles to receive Lord Canning), Sir Charles and Lady Mary, and Miss Wood, Mr. Serjeant Alexander, &c. On arriving at the Admiralty pier, his lordship and party proceeded to the Lord Warden Hotel, to have some refreshment prior to their departure for London. At the hotel Mr. Birmingham, the Mayor of Dover, was introduced to Lord Canning by Capt. Smithett, when the chief magistrate informed his lordship that a complimentary address had been prepared by the corporation, to be presented on his reaching the shores of England; but his unexpected arrival that afternoon, and the short interval of time his lordship would remain at Dover, obliged him to represent the corporation on the occasion. The mayor then expressed the unanimous congratulations of the town and port of Dover on his lordship's successful career of Governor-general, and the glorious results of that policy that had established on a firmer basis than ever the British rule in India. His lordship warmly thanked the mayor, and begged he would convey to the Corporation of Dover his expressions of gratification at the compliment the mayor, on their behalf, had paid to him. Lord Canning and party proceeded to London at four o'clock.

SCINDE RAILWAY.—The proprietors of the Scinde Railway have unanimously sanctioned the proposal for raising £2,500,000 additional capital for the extension of the Punjab line to Delhi, a length of 280 miles.

Official Paper.

SIR J. P. GRANT'S REPLY TO LORD CANNING.

No. 253a.

From E. H. LUSHINGTON, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, to the Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Home Department (Judicial), Fort William, Feb. 4.

SIR,—With advertece to the projected appointment of another special commissioner in the indigo districts, which question forms the subject of the second part of your letter No. 187, dated 8th ult., whereof the subject of the first part has been treated in my separate letter, No. 252a, of this day's date, I am directed by the Lieutenant governor to submit, for the consideration and order of H.E. the Governor general in Council, the papers noted in the margin,* with the following remarks.

2. This appointment is projected in accordance with an application from the Landholders' and Commercial Association, dated the 6th of December last, made to the Governor-general in Council immediately. Some complication has arisen in consequence of this application having been acted upon by the Government of India without any communication with the Bengal Government, as must frequently be the case when business is conducted in two distinct channels. The Lieut.-governor, before your letter under reply was written, had received from the same association a letter dated 16th December (which he found here awaiting his return from Darjeeling), recommending to the Bengal Government the same measure which it had recommended to the * Letter from Commissioner of Nudda, No. 4, dated Jan. 7, 1862.

Letter from Commissioner of Nudda, No. 89, dated Jan. 13, 1862.

Letter from Commissioner of Nudda, No. 98, dated Jan. 23, 1862.

Government of India immediately. The Lieut.-governor, knowing nothing of the recommendation made under date the 16th December to the Governor-general in Council, and not anticipating that H.E. in Council would come to any conclusion upon the subject, and would communicate that conclusion to the association without previous communication with him, issued upon the application made to him the orders which will be found in my letter No. 3,180, dated 28th December last, to the Commissioners of Nudda, Rajahahye, and Dacca, copy of which was sent to the association.

3. In those orders the Lieut.-governor observed the necessity of taking all proper measures for remedying the evil of increased arrears of rent, which was the specific evil insisted upon in the letter from the association. He requested the commissioners' opinions upon the proposed reappointment of a special commission; he also expressed his own opinion that more immediate good would result from energetic action in the way of exhortation, and explanation, and personal influence on the part of the several sub-divisional officers on the spot, by reason of their neighbourhood and local knowledge, than from the exertions of a single special commissioner in a district; and, in the meanwhile, he directed the issue of strong injunctions, in the above sense, to the collectors and subdivisional officers within whose jurisdictions the several factories complaining of arrears are situated.

4. In reply to those orders the report of Mr. Schallch, enclosing the very instructive and able report of Mr. Herschel, has been received. As both these officers advance very strong objection to the proposed appointment of another special commission, objections which, proceeding from officers of great judgment and intelligence, of whom one has a thorough knowledge of the state and temper of his district, cannot be passed over without consideration; and, as a special commissioner, if appointed, cannot enter upon his functions without precise and specific instructions from the Government of India upon points which do not appear to have been considered by, or even known to, the Government of India when their orders were issued; the Lieut. gov. has found it necessary to submit the whole matter, in a complete shape, for the determination of H.E. in Council before taking action in it.

5. The Lieut.-governor understands from your letter that the design of the appointment of a new special commission is not that an officer should be sent into the districts, vested with any authority to settle disputes, to put down combinations, or to enforce payment of rents; but that an officer should be sent who, by systematic and persevering attempts to bring about a complete settlement of all differences between planter and ryot in an amicable way, apart from the action of the civil courts, by bringing the ryots of each recusant village into direct communication with their landlords, by striving patiently to effect a categorical adjustment of the points of difference in each case, by exacting promises of strict adherence to the terms of adjustment made, and by supporting, by his counsel and influence, the action of the law when the law is resorted to, shall effect a considerable advance towards a settlement of the existing disputes, and towards a restoring the mutual confidence and good feeling which ought to exist between landlord and ryot.

6. To look at this matter in a definite and business-like manner, as it must be looked at by the special commissioner when he comes to give practical effect to his general instructions, it is necessary to have a clear perception of what those differences essentially are, which it is the object to reconcile. When this is done it will be found that the officer employed would derive no assistance from such general instructions as are above extracted from your letter. The matter of difference is too substantial, and of too vital an importance to the permanent interests of the parties, to be blown away by the commonplaces of reconciliation, however ably and sincerely pressed upon them.

7. When, in the course of last year, Messrs. Montresor and Morris visited the districts of Nudda and Jessor, they found that the indigo question was at the root of differences; and the first instruction which a special commissioner for the reconciliation of the differences will ask, what course he is to take, wherever he may find that same matter still at the root of the differences which he is expected to reconcile; if a special commissioner be appointed, it is necessary for the Government first to make up its own mind upon this point, and then to give the special commissioner instructions in relation thereto, in such precise and positive language as shall be open to no question hereafter. Hitherto it has been the dis-

ADVERTISEMENTS.

INDIA OFFICE, 21st April, 1862.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
in COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE,—

That, until further notice, sealed Tenders will be received at the Chief Cashier's Office, at the Bank of England, up to Two o'clock on the FIRST WEDNESDAY in each month, commencing with the ensuing month of MAY, for BILLS of EXCHANGE, payable on demand, to be drawn on the several Governments in India, at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, for the sum of Rupees 30,00,000 in each month, of which not more than Rupees 7,50,000 will be drawn on the Government of Bombay, and Rupees 2,50,000 on that of Madras.

Power is reserved to issue Bills for any smaller amount than Rupees 30,00,000 in any one month, and to carry over the difference to the succeeding months.

No Tender is to be for a sum less than Rupees 10,000, and one-eighth of a penny per Rupee is to be the smallest fraction tendered.

Each Tender must specify the rate of Exchange at which the applicant is prepared to purchase a Bill, or any number of Bills, and the lowest amount of any one Bill is to be Rupees 5,000.

The Secretary of State will not be bound to accept any Tender, and reserves the right of accepting the whole or any portion of a Tender.

In the event of two or more Tenders being equal, and the amount remaining to be allotted not being sufficient to supply both or all, the Bank will be instructed to allot rateably.

On the day following the receipt of the Tenders at the Bank, the parties will, on application at the Chief Cashier's Office, be informed whether their Tenders have or have not been accepted.

If accepted, the amount of payment must be lodged at the Bank on or before the 15th day of each month.

Those applicants whose Tenders shall have been accepted, will be furnished with a Form to be filled up with the particulars of the Bills required, and the Bills themselves, drawn in Duplicate, will be delivered on the day following the payment.

THOMAS GEORGE BARING.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.

TO LADIES.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, an Eastern botanical preparation, for improving and beautifying the complexion and skin.

This rovaly patronised specific is distinguished for its extremely bland, purifying, and soothing effects on the skin; while, by its action on the pores and minute secretory vessels, it promotes a healthy tone, always every tendency to inflammation, and thus effectually dissipates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, and softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, its capability of soothing irritation, and removing cutaneous defects, render it indispensable to every toilet.

It mitigates all the effects of Climate on the Skin, whether with reference to cold and inclemency, or intense solar heat.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

* * Ask for "ROWLANDS' KALYDOR," and beware of spurious and pernicious articles under the name of "KALYDOR."

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—when, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in his pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. The following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horsemanship is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsemanship is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, considerably lower than those now charged by this or any other Company, but differing from the old system in respect that no reduction takes place on the insured returning to Europe or proceeding to any other part of the world not chargeable with an extra premium.

According to this method, the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

The following are Specimens of the New Rates:—

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last, with her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £40,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Kanemooddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 30,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,
 First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,
 Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7. 10s.) to be made after three months,
 Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7. 10s.) to be made six months after allotment, Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

As the public will naturally expect to have some particulars of the bulk of the Capital required for this undertaking, the Directors, after examining the books of the Firm and from other sources of information, believe the following figures to be nearly correct; but the Company will not be bound by them until they have been correctly ascertained:—

|  | Rs.       | £.     |
|--|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                               | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies                | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|  | 3,825,000 | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                         | 3,50,000  | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                        | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                   | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, Gas, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                         | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                 | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                        | 13,800    | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                      | 65,500    | 6,550  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Kanemooddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE more detailed accounts received by the Bombay Mail of the 12th of April modify and restrict the telegraphic report of the fall of Herat, and the march of the Persian army on Candahar. In the first place, though it may be accepted as true that the Persians have made a hostile demonstration against what used to be called "The Key of India," nothing whatever is known on the subject except on the doubtful authority of a native newswriter, who is in the habit of supplying the Delhi Gazette with the gossip of the Affghan Court. But not even this quaint and somewhat imaginative chronicler ventures to state as a fact that Herat is in the hands of the Persians. He speaks, indeed, of a terrible battle between 50,000 Persians and an unknown number of Affghans, in consequence of which the latter were reduced, after three days' hard fighting, to only 16,000 men, but who still presented a bold front to the foe. It is evident, however, that as wide a margin must be allowed for Oriental as for Yankee exaggeration, and probably nothing more serious has occurred than a few petty skirmishes. That Dost Mahomed has applied to the British Government for aid is only what might be expected, and he is even entitled to do so by treaty. What answer Lord Elgin will return it is idle to speculate upon; but it will certainly be very provoking if the Indian finances are again to be disturbed by a fruitless and objectless war. At the same time, public faith must be maintained at any cost; and it is to be hoped that the Persian Court will be amenable to reason, even unsupported by Armstrong guns. We do not, of course, for a moment suspect the Russian Government of being in any way accessory to this movement on the part of Persia, the true motive for which will most likely be traced to the necessity of finding employment for a restless and ill-paid soldiery.

Lord Elgin has fairly settled down to his new duties. His Excellency presided in Council for the first time on the 18th April, and on the 25th held his first levée. Various addresses have also been presented, which elicited vigorous and appropriate replies. The death of the Hon. William Ritchie has called forth expressions of deep regret from all parts of India. This sad event makes a vacancy in the council, and likewise in the coveted appointment of Advocate-General.

Sir Bartle Frere was expected to reach Bombay about the 20th of April, as successor to Sir George Clerk. Her Majesty's steamer Auckland had been despatched to Beypore to meet the new Governor, who had intimated his intention of proceeding from Calcutta to Madras, and thence by rail across the peninsula.

It is satisfactory to learn, though few ever doubted it would happen otherwise, that the petition of the Rajah of Mysore for the restoration of his country has been peremptorily rejected. This decision of the Indian Government was made known to his Highness by Mr. Saunders, as almost his last act as Commissioner of Mysore.

We regret to record the conviction of an English gentleman of the crime of forgery. Mr. Thomas Buckland, a son of the late Dean of Westminster, and an attorney of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, has pleaded guilty to the charge of forging his brother's name to a draft for 5,000 rupees. He has consequently been sentenced to eight years' penal servitude—we presume, in the Neilgherry Hills.

Sir Hugh Rose arrived in Simla on the 3rd April, having fairly earned a brief period of repose after his arduous inspection of the frontier.

The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce having memorialised the Governor-general in Council, praying for an early reduction of the Import Duties, the Bombay Chamber have presented a counter-memorial, protesting against such a measure, on the ground of the loss it would inflict on the mercantile community of that Presidency.

The Assam Tea Company expect to receive, as the product of the coming season, from six hundred and fifty acres about 195,000 lbs. of tea, which at a profit of 9d. per lb. will yield a total profit of £7,312, being more than 24½ per cent. on the capital.

CALCUTTA AND THE HOOGLY.

There is hope for Calcutta. Its citizens seem to be at last aroused to at least a languid interest in schemes the realisation of which is required to arrest its annually increasing unhealthiness, and to supply it with the ordinary conveniences of civilised life. Plans which we have suggested or described during the past three years seem on the eve of discussion, and even in some cases of accomplishment. A Bill is now before the legislature to give the city a self-governing municipality. Far more slowly and much more expensively than its projector at first anticipated an experimental system of drainage is advancing towards completion. A crowded audience has twice been found to listen to a lecture on the subject, in which the gravity of so solemn a theme was pleasantly relieved by the play of a boisterous wit. There are rival plans, involving an expenditure of from eight lakhs to eighty, for supplying the city with clean water, a blessing not a hundredth part of its residents enjoy throughout the whole course of their lives. Some adventurous spirits have been so bold as to venture on an inspection of the site of the auxiliary port on the Mutlah, which will rise in public estimation the longer sanitary, municipal, and commercial reform is delayed in Calcutta. There is a general desire to avert from the metropolis of India the fate of Gour, that capital of a hundred kings, which a pestilence depopulated just two centuries ago.

While striving to avert that fate we would ask the merchants of Calcutta to study one fact memorable in the history of the ancient city. Standing at the head of the network of navigation known as the mouths of the Ganges, Gour was protected from its ravages by a stone embankment which stretched for fifteen long miles. This gave to the old capital an aspect of wealth and magnificence, while it afforded to the traders of those days a most convenient means of shipping and landing cargo. Whatever other improvements may be denied to Calcutta, some such work as this must be carried out. Within thirty years the external trade of the port has risen from two to thirty-two millions sterling in value, and its population and wealth have increased in proportion. Yet the river bank has never been improved—has annually deteriorated. It is a source of pestilence to the natives who live close to it, and to the ships that are moored beneath it. Filth and garbage, dead dogs and dead men, float lazily up and down with each tide among the moorings. The bank, left dry by the receding tide, is one mass of corrupt mud which no man can cross, polluting the surrounding atmosphere. Even higher up, where the tide does not reach, we find pools of stagnant water, lakes of seething pitch, dust heaps and dunghills, goods scattered in glorious confusion, palanquins, hackeries, ponies and bullocks with festering sores, flies, dust, and steaming human beings, all mixed promiscuously. Slowly, in a tropical sun, English sailors "shoot out" cargo into native boats, which again throw out the goods on to the shore, at a cost of from seven to ten shillings a ton. There are no wharves, no floating piers, no fixed embankments, no wet docks. As the stranger looks on the scene, he finds it difficult to believe that this is the metropolis of India, a city of palaces and merchant princes whose trade is thirty-two millions a year.

Long has an improvement in this state of things been talked of, after true Oriental fashion. The time has come for something to be done. A committee was long ago appointed by Government to consider the subject, but of their number one is dead, and the other has left India. Capt. Reddie, who acts as marine secretary, is eager to see progress. Some of the merchants, too, have moved, endeavouring to establish a private company for erecting wharves. The object of having easy, safe, and cheap communication between ships and the bank can be accomplished in one of three ways. Piers may be run out on screw piles, wet docks may be constructed, or a stone wall, as at Gour, may be built. The first, it seems to us, is a miserable expedient, destitute of permanence, cleanliness, or effect. The second will secure only the one object of convenience to the shipping, without adding to the appearance of the city or the comfort of its inhabitants. The third will secure every purpose of both beauty and utility, it may be at a greater expense, but with more lasting results. A more important question is—how is the work, on any plan, to be carried out? It would be a short-sighted policy to entrust it to any private company with whom self-interest, and that alone, would be an object. Government, we understand, will give no guarantee, nor itself undertake the work, which is not to be regretted in the present unreformed state of the Public Works Department. The success of the Clyde River Trust furnishes Calcutta with a plan ready made. The Clyde Trustees, consisting, we believe, of "River Baillies," with the Lord Provost chairman, raise money at five per cent. by public advertisement, on the security of the shipping dues. These dues are levied under Act XXI. and XXII. Vic. Cap. 149, at very moderate rates, being for coasting vessels 1½d. in and 1½d. out per registered ton; for steamers 1d., and for foreign vessels 4d. The Trust is a favourite investment, all profit being spent in improving the river. The accounts are published quarterly in the local papers. By similar means many of the British ports are managed and improved; but Glasgow affords the most remarkable instance of prosperity due entirely to this plan. In 1775, acting on the advice of Smeaton and other engineers, the corporation built upwards of a hundred jetties at various parts of the river, and so lessened its width, but increased its depth. Sixty years ago that depth was only five feet. The trustees worked on year after year in hope, with the surplus of the dues, till now the frontage of the quay extends upwards of 10,000 feet, loaded vessels of 1,000 tons and steamers of 2,000 tons are ranging nine tiers in depth off both quays, and from Glasgow to Dumbarton "the bed and banks of the river are as carefully prepared as in a ship-canal." The revenue received by the river trustees rose from £3,320 in 1800 to £86,580 in 1854. We have no later figures.

Yet the customs duties and tonnage of Glasgow are only a third of those of Calcutta. Under a Hooghly River Trust, properly administered, to which the State might not be unwilling to advance funds, whose investment would certainly be as popular, because as certain, as Government Securities, the river and the commerce which it bears may be rescued from that fate which seems to be impending over it. Heretofore Calcutta has been swallowed up in Bengal, no separate account of its revenues has ever been made public. As the capital of the empire, not only should all these revenues be spent on its improvement, but, like London in the House of Commons, its interests should form the special care of the Imperial Government. Every civilised government is proud of its capital, which becomes to other nations the symbol of its power and wealth. The one per cent., or fourth of the income-tax of Calcutta, would form a fund for improvements which its citizens do not seem to have thought of. And what a revenue would not a public trust derive from port dues and other charges fixed at even half the present exorbitant rates, and applied to the public good as wisely as those of the Clyde!—Friend of India.

SLEEPERS.

When we announce that railway communication between Calcutta and Ghazee-ood-deen Nuggur, a point twelve miles from Delhi, would be complete next New Year's Day, but for the want of wooden sleepers, the importance of the ambiguous word at the head of this article will be at once understood. Three years ago delay in the construction of the railway was owing entirely to the want of permanent way, which had either not arrived in sufficient quantity from England, or could not be forwarded from Calcutta with the necessary speed. We had to write more than one expostulation on the subject, which put the Home directors on their defence and quickened their action. Now, all the necessary permanent way is on the spot, but wood has failed the engineers. With a rapidity unknown out of the tropics, the best sleepers, even when chemically prepared, rot away in India, so that a continuous supply is required not only for new lines but to maintain the old. The two finest wooded tracts in India were the frontier districts of Oudh which we took from the Nepalese in the last war, and Kasheepore, which fell to us by the treason of its owner. Yet, these were the tracts made over to Jung Bahadoor and the Nawab of Rampore, as rewards for their services. In both there is a practically inexhaustible supply of saut if proper measures of conservation be adopted, but both are now abandoned to the wild beast, and its hardly less savage hunter. We gave away the Nepal forests with open eyes, but were so ignorant of the value of Kasheepore, that on being enlightened we made a vain and humiliating attempt to recover it. For want of sleepers, the supply of which is now completely cut off, the line from Patna to Benares, Mirzapore, and Allahabad, and from Agra to Delhi, will be useless after this year. This is a serious loss to the Government which guarantees interest on capital thus unemployed, to the public who pay that interest and cannot enjoy its fruits, and to the shareholders who see their hopes of a larger return than five per cent. still longer postponed. To meet the want in the future Dr. Claghorn is now on a tour of inquiry in the forest tracts of the Himalayas, and will draw up a scheme for their conservation and improvement. But it will be a quarter of a century till the results of his plans are available. Meanwhile, it has been resolved to adopt iron sleepers of a peculiar construction, but even these must be ordered from England, and the experiments already instituted have proved more expensive than satisfactory.

It may interest our readers to know the present state of the works. All the iron for the Soane bridge having arrived, that gigantic work will be completed in June, and from that point to Benares, and simultaneously up to Mirzapore and the Tonse bridge, the rails could be laid down at the rate of twelve miles a month if there were sleepers. The stations of Gubher, Dildarnugger, Zumeniah, Sikuldeah, and Mogul Serai, the junction, are nearly complete, and the material for the Benares terminus has been prepared. The main line from the Kurumnassa is 50 miles, and the branch 6½. On the 92 miles thence to Mirzapore the stations are all commenced. Thirty-seven per cent. of the brick-work of the Tonse bridge is executed, and of the seven spans of 150 feet, iron work for five has been delivered. The floods during the past season tested the Jumna bridge at Allahabad. The river, equal to the level of 1832, the highest recorded, ran for 15 days 50 feet above low water mark, at the rate of 8 miles an hour. The three completed piers bore the test well. Of this 38 per cent. of brick work is finished, and much of the iron work has been delivered. Passing over the line open for 244 miles to Shekoabad and that to be opened immediately to the Toondla junction, 24 miles and thence to Agra 13, the 41½ miles from Toondla to Allyghur wait only for sleepers. The stations at Burhun, Jaleysur, Hattrass and Palee are springing up. On the 82 miles from Allyghur to Delhi the earthwork is complete, and next June 70 miles would be ready, but for sleepers. Before the rains the whole of the piers and abutments of the Hindun bridge, with its 7 arches and 70 spans, will be carried up to the springing of the arches. Thirty-five per cent. of the Jumna Bridge at Delhi, with 12 spans of 205 feet, has been completed. For nearly 400 miles from the Kurumnassa to Ferozabad near Agra, the telegraph is in working order. There are 26 stations through which 47,899 messages passed last half year against 86,828 in its predecessor.

The success of the railway in Bengal has been decided, and we are glad to be able to furnish figures showing how popular it is in the North-Western Provinces, under the management of Mr. Cecil Stephenson. In the last half of 1861, the line was open for 209½ miles to Etawah, and for six weeks 243½ miles to Shekoabad. No less than 143,035 third-class passengers took advantage of it, to 3,208 second-class and 1,786 first-class, the whole paying Rs. 3,04,733. The goods traffic yielded Rs. 5,29,943, of which the greater part was paid by the public. The working expenses may be estimated at 41 per cent., though they were really much less, as the line from Cawnpore to Shekoabad is maintained during the first year out of capital. We entertain the hope that Indian railways, with fares so low as those of the East India Railway Company, will always pay higher dividends than their English models, when they have been completed throughout. Meanwhile, since the want of sleepers alone will delay through communication from Calcutta to Delhi, we must either prate less of the boundless resources of India, or blame more the folly of those to whom their conservation is entrusted.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MARCHING EXPENSES.—"We thought," says the Lahore Chronicle, "we knew everything, until we discovered just now that on one point we were ignorant, an ignorance in which, doubtless, the majority of our readers participate, and is equally shared by the ruling authorities, military and civil. When European soldiers march from one station to another they have to pay out of their own pockets the travelling expenses of their wives and families. This disgraceful fact came accidentally to our knowledge, by reason of our being told that the married men and women of H.M.'s 19th Foot at Meeran Meer were at the present moment suffering great pecuniary distress, in consequence of the expense they have incurred through having had to pay the hire of the carts and bullocks by which the women and children travelled from Cawnpore, upwards of 700 miles, they having previously come partially by the same mode of conveyance and partially by rail from Benares, 200 miles further, the whole journey having occupied nearly three months." The writer proceeds to show that the cost of a hackery and pair of bullocks is Rs. 15 a month, while the monthly allowance for a soldier's wife is but Rs. 5. It is monstrous that the soldier should have this burden cast upon him; the expense should be borne by the State.

THE SALT TRADE.—"Very few years ago no salt was imported into this country; the people were supplied from the Government manufacture, and an enormous revenue was raised from a duty, paid on the salt as it passed from the Government warehouses. By degrees the Cheshire merchants, seeing that there was an opening for a profitable trade, shipped salt to this country. Government encouraged this importation by every means in its power; the imported salt was of course subjected to precisely the same duty as the Indian; ample accommodation was provided for bonders, and every facility for placing this trade on a firm basis was given by Government. In the last few years the Government manufacture has decreased, and large profits were realised by importers. These large profits tempted every merchant in the country to try his hand in the salt trade, and the consequence has been that, during the past year, an amount of salt three or four times in excess of the demand has been brought into Calcutta. The natural result has been a fall in price from Rs. 120 per hundred maunds, to Rs. 63 per hundred maunds—and when we state that it costs no less than Rs. 85 per hundred maunds to lay it down at this port, it is clear that fearful losses must have been sustained. Government salt is now exposed in the market at a rate very much in excess of the Liverpool salt, and consumption has not decreased by a pound; it is certain, therefore, that the salt merchants have no one but themselves to blame. The worst has yet to come, for in spite of the enormous stocks of salt in the market they are still shipping it to this country."—Indian Empire.

THUGGEE IN THE PUNJAB.—A case has recently been brought to light by the Thuggee Department of the Punjab which fully equals in extent and atrocity that of the murderer Martin Dumollard, whose notorious deeds occupy so prominent a place in the French and English journals received by the last mail. The similarity between the two cases is very striking in many important particulars, and the offences committed by both extend over nearly the same period of time. Dumollard's victims, however, were females; while those of Mootsdec's were males. The former decoyed his prey under the pretence of procuring them situations as servants in respectable families; the latter inveigled his dupes by promises of contracting marriages. The main object of both was the same, viz., robbery. The case to which we refer was tried by the Commissioner of the Trans Sutlej States on the 31st Jan. last, when the prisoner was charged with being a professional Thug, and with having committed eleven distinct cases of poisoning, seven of which terminated fatally, while four recovered. The detection of the culprit was owing to the merest accident, being caused by the inquisitiveness of a child above five years of age. It seems that in March, 1861, the prisoner came to the house of one Tredoo, a Zemindar of the village of Chumal in the Goordaspoor district, and represented himself as a prohib employed by his judgment, in the Jummo State, for the purpose of contracting a marriage for the judgment's daughters. He remained two days with Tredoo, making arrangements for his proceeding with him to contract a marriage for his son. On the 11th of March Tredoo was ready with Rs. 200 to go with the prisoner, who went out in the evening, leaving his traps in Tredoo's house, when a boy of Tredoo's—a boy about five years old—playing about the house, happened to open the prisoner's bundle, and finding some goor ate a small quantity, on which the child was taken ill with vomiting and purging. Tredoo, suspecting there was something wrong, took the prisoner's bundle and goor to the thana of Chumal, and the prisoner was seized. The thanadar gave some of the goor to a dog, which died shortly after eating it. The case was sent up by the police, and from thence to the deputy commissioner, who ordered some of the goor to be sent to the civil surgeon, by whom it was forwarded to the chemical examiner here, who reported that it contained a poisonous quantity of white arsenic. Subsequent to the prisoner's arrest he voluntarily confessed to the commission of no less than twenty cases, in addition to those with which he had been charged, out of which fifteen had terminated fatally, and it must be observed that this confession was made after he had been distinctly informed that no promise of pardon, or any other inducement, could be held out to him. There remains, therefore, we think, but little doubt that he must, during his long career of crime, have committed numerous murders other than those which he has thought proper to disclose. His usual method of doing business appears to have been to call on his victims, to whom he represented himself as a prohib of some great Rajpoot or other family, employed to negotiate marriages for its daughters. In most instances he succeeded in making the marriageable males of the family into which he introduced himself believe his statement, and to accompany him, taking with them a sufficiency of money to defray the expenses of the journey. On their way he would seize an opportunity when cooking of placing some powerful poison into the food, which speedily made his victims in-ensable, when he would either despatch the unfortunate wretches by stoning them to death, or allow the poison to do its own work.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE BENGAL CONSTABULARY.—At last the long delayed constabulary force for Bengal is likely to be embodied. Mr. C. F. Carnac is inspector-general of police for the lower provinces. Major R. L. Thompson is deputy-inspector-general for the Bhaugulpore division. Major J. R. Pugh is deputy-inspector-general for the Burdwan division. Major H. Raban is deputy-inspector-general for the Patna division.

THE KURTUPORE RIOT.—A very unpleasant affair, to speak of it in the coolest terms, has occurred at Kurtupore, in the Jullundur Doab, and as it has been reported in full to his Excellency the Commander-in-chief, we may give the circumstances as far as they have reached us. This Kurtupore, about fifteen miles to the north of the station of Jullundur, is in the territory of an independent or quasi-independent Goroo, with whom and his people there was holiday time, when the facts which we are about to relate occurred, about the middle of March. It would appear that a number of British officers of H. M.'s 19th and 51st regiments, stationed at Jullundur and Lahore, went, upon pleasure intent, to Kurtupore, and amongst other amusements, were present at a native nautch there. Further, it appears that these officers behaved in such a manner, at or after this nautch, as not to "conciliate the natives;" but on the contrary, excited a considerable commotion, and were roughly handled and made prisoners. At the time when these occurrences took place, the deputy commissioner of the district was out on duty; and his tents being pitched near Kurtupore, it appears that the Goroo sent to him to ask for permission to march the British officers, as prisoners, into Jullundur, which was accorded! Consequently they were marched into Jullundur, escorted by some of the Goroo's rabble. There was a rescue somewhere, by British soldiers, of these officers, but at what particular point of the drama we do not know. We hear that the Lieut. governor of the Punjab has expressed himself in terms of the strongest condemnation of the conduct of the Deputy Commissioner, and, as we have said above, the whole affair, having been handed up to his Excellency the Commander-in-chief, will be fully investigated and decided; when if all we have heard be true, it will appear that the new army of the country does not through its officers "conciliate the natives" as did the old.—Englishman.

THE EASTERN FRONTIER.—We (Englishman) learn from Jynteah that notwithstanding the very laudable efforts made by the authorities, especially by Colonel Richardson and Major Rowlett, the attempt to suppress or crush at once with a strong hand the rebellion in those districts was ineffectual. The paucity of troops, either employed in the hills or obtainable from other quarters was most severely felt, and so general was the rising and so strong the hands of rebels, that to separate the few soldiers collected with so much difficulty and trouble was looked upon as highly inexpedient. That it would have been so there can be no doubt, as the entire force under Colonel Richardson in the hills at no time exceeded two hundred men. The danger of detaching small bodies of troops in a wild, unknown, and inhospitable country, was clearly exemplified in the attack made on the Hersildar party when it was so enormously out-numbered, and so many of its number were placed hors de combat. As it was, Colonel Richardson and Major Rowlett found themselves forced to suspend active hostilities until the arrival of reinforcements should enable them to operate against the enemy with force sufficient to make themselves felt. The enemy are reported as being in force, and well covered by stockades, at Sumayseen. On this point no impression can be made by the small force now at the hills, but so soon as the reinforcements now on their way join Colonel Richardson, vigorous, and, doubtless, conclusive measures will be adopted. Our correspondent further advises us that a movement was being made in the direction of Unwai, the deputy commissioner having left Jowai for that neighbourhood, accompanied by a force of fifty Cossyah sepoy. It was said that the Rajah of Nustung, with whom we are in friendly alliance, had also proposed to the British authorities either to make a diversion in their favour, or else to place at their disposal a force of Nustung Cossyahs.

BHOOTAN.—It would appear that the Bhootese are likely to have to pay for the attitude they have of late had the temerity to assume towards the British Government, nor is the fact of the Deb Rajah having solicited assistance from Nepaul, and when these attempts had failed, from Lassa, unknown to the authorities. More, too, has of late come to our knowledge, and there is now little doubt but that to Bhootanese influence and promises of support is due the rising of the hill tribes of Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar. We are as yet uninformed as to what influence it may be due, but there is reason to believe that a movement of the tribes bordering on the Dihong river, and even up into the Tsan-pho valley, is taking place, it is supposed with the intention of entering Assam by or near the former river, which joins its waters with those of the Brahmaputra, to the north-east of Dibrughur, where it forms the eastern boundary of the Luckimpore district. Seeing, however, that, urged to it by the Soobah of Dalimkote, the Deb Rajah had laid before the Llama Thibet the proposal made to him by the disaffected chiefs in the north-west, we may not unfairly attribute the gatherings said to be taking place on the Dihong and Tsan-pho rivers to a desire on the part of the Llama to be prepared for any and every eventuality. In the meantime, it has been proposed to Government to detach two companies of the 18th Regiment N. I., from Julpigoree into the Cooch Behar territory. Lieutenant-colonel Biddulph, who has offered the suggestion, has been desired to operate in concert with Colonel Stisted, commanding the Darjeeling field force, and after communicating with him and the Bengal Government, to direct the movement of the proposed detachment into Cooch Behar. The object of this is not only to comply with the request made by the Cooch Behar Rajah some short time since for two companies of native infantry with European officers to be sent to aid him in repelling the attacks of the Bhootanese, but to secure a ready means of access into Bhootan at any moment. Should the gatherings on the northern border of Luckimpore within Thibet assume a threatening attitude with reference to our possessions in the Brahmaputra valley, a diversion can be at once made by entering Bhootan, and by disposing of the principal instigators of the whole movement. It is time that the Government took some steps to resist the insults of the Bhootanese, and the sooner they are taken the sooner may we look for a pacific termination to the present disturbances in Assam.—Englishman.

THE RAJAH OF KUPPURTHULLA ON CHRISTIANITY.—An American gentleman recently sent a Bible to the Rajah of Kuppurthulla, whose reply, written in good English, is noteworthy. He says, "The Bible, and religious books have been widely circulated, and the people of India begin to know more than they formerly did, of both the science and religion of the West. I am most anxious to extend this knowledge, and for this purpose invited the Loudiana Mission in our midst. This, as you are aware, has been done, and I hope in due time to see a new generation of men grow up, who will be wiser than their fathers, and who in their day may help to improve the condition of native society around them. There is, however, a great deal to be done in this country as yet, and I trust your people will never relax their efforts for our good." After expressing his regret at the American war, he informs him that he will send him a copy of the Grunth. "The Grunth is a very remarkable book, and contains a great many most excellent moral precepts. Its whole spirit is opposed to idolatry, and were the people to act up to its teachings, their morality would be very much like that taught in the Bible. Had Guru-Nanah (the writer of the Grunth) been acquainted with the teachings of the Bible, I think it is very likely he would have believed in them, for he was a very good man, and seemed to desire earnestly to know the truth." We are glad to see that the Rajah is about to establish a mission on his Oudh estates at his own expense.—Friend of India.

DELHI, March 23.—Some, I believe two, cases of concealed arms have lately been brought before the authorities. In one case, which I consider somewhat serious, several descriptions of weapons were found—and one a pistol loaded.

This is, to say the least of it, significant, and brings to mind in the most forcible and least agreeable form the last words of the murderer Mogul Beg. I cannot help recording my opinion that a mere fine of fifty rupees is a very moderate punishment for such a breach of the law, but I suppose it is deemed the best policy to show leniency as long as possible. I will only add that if every cook-room in Delhi were searched, to say nothing of the private dwellings of the loyal citizens, the result might be such as would open the eyes of our authorities. The number of gunsmiths, skilignurs (armourers), and others cunning in contriving arms laid loose in the city by the abolition of the arsenal, is something worthy of note: and when I tell you that some of these clever artisans can make up a gun, to all appearance as serviceable and as useful as the best Sam Smith or Westley Richards, you will perhaps wonder that the Act regarding the concealment of arms has not been infringed before. But we are "all serene;" turn we now to the antidote. The European troops have been inspected by the General and pronounced "perfect," or as near perfection as it is possible for a regiment to be after I don't know how many years of detachment duty. Truth to tell, the 82nd, Prince of Wales' Own Volunteers, are well worthy of their name; a finer or better conducted body of soldiers never trod in shoe leather, and the way in which they have picked up during the short time they have been in Delhi, proves that they are composed of the right sort of stuff to confound the Queen's enemies. The Khilati-Ghizies, too, are wonderfully efficient, and present a fine specimen of the loyal native element. I am certain that General Wheeler will leave Delhi with a very favourable impression of the brigade. We have had a lot of notabilities here of late; the Inspector-general of Post-offices is still here. Colonel Pott, ditto, and Col. Thuillier is expected on the 26th. Mr. Melvill, our Commissioner, does not go after all. I believe the cause of his remaining is the extension of leave taken by Mr. A. A. Roberts, Judicial Commissioner of the Punjab, which leaves one less to provide for in the Punjab Commission. Here we are to have several changes. Mr. Murphy, extra assistant commissioner, is to leave almost immediately, and has, I believe, already "shut up shop." Lieut. Bewster, assistant-commissioner, will probably go towards the frontier. Mr. F. McNaghten is here as assistant-commissioner, and Lieut. De Kantzow, of high repute, is coming, if he has not already arrived. The great want here, houses to shelter Europeans, will be felt more than ever. Our museum has received some valuable additions at the hands of Mr. Cooper, C.B., and Lalla Choona Mull. The collection of articles from China and Japan is perfectly wonderful, especially considering their fragile nature and the distance they have travelled. Never before was such a series of groups of deformities, most admirably conceived and executed, presented to the eyes of astonished natives; and I am not wrong when I say that in India the like, with reference to taste in selection and liberal display, was never before seen. No wonder the museum attracts crowds daily. The weather is becoming warm; Grant's patent punkahs are being slung in the new barracks in the Fort, and private houses will soon be disfigured by the old creaking affair; call it cold comfort if you will, it is a nuisance nevertheless.—Englishman.

PUNJAB JUSTICE.—The Lahore Chronicle affirms that there is a man in the Central Gaol of Lahore who has been confined there for ten or twelve years, without trial. "He is a native of an independent State, and is supposed to have been implicated in the murder of Mr. Tapp, of the Customs Department, some years ago."

REDEMPTION OF LAND-TAX.—We are glad to learn that in all cases of redemption of the land-tax it is not intended to exempt zemindars from future taxation, whether local or general. The educational cess of one per cent., and the road cess of one per cent. which are so valuable, though the latter is badly administered, will still be maintained. The native idea of redemption is that it confers a right to exemption from all taxation, of whatever kind.

INDIAN KAFIRS.—No race on our Indian frontier has excited so much interest as the so called Kafirs of the Indian Caucasus. In 1859 Major Lumsden tried to raise a corps of Kafirs at Murdan, and succeeded in securing only three, who were examined at Peshawur by Dr. Trumpp, of the Church Mission, with the aid of Muhammed Rusal, whose ancestors were Kafirs, and who brought them down. The three found the heat so insupportable that Dr. Trumpp could keep them for only a few days, and then only by feeding them with sweetmeats. The Kafirs have not, as has been supposed, blue eyes, nor light hair, like the Saxon race, nor a white skin either; they are in all respects like the natives of the upper provinces of India, of a swarthy colour, dark hair and dark eyes, only their faces are more reddish, which may be easily accounted for by their liberal use of wine; for when Colonel Edwardes asked them what they wished to eat and to drink, they answered, "A mashak of wine every day!" They are clearly of Hindoo origin. Their name has been applied to them by the Madomedans in contempt, but they call their own country Wamasthan, of the same root as Bamasthan, or Bamian, famed for its enormous idols, meaning "the country of light." Their tongue is a pure Prakrit, separated from its sister dialects since the irruption of the Mahomedan power, in the tenth century of our era. It is of the greatest importance to Indian philology, as we have a very imperfect knowledge of the common dialects then in use in India. Like the French, the Kafirs use the numeral twenty, and not ten, to multiply by, eighty being four times twenty. When Dr. Trumpp was making his philological experiments on them, they often broke out into a hearty laugh when he asked them to repeat this or that word or sentence, or when repeated by the missionary, to assure himself of the right pronunciation, which seemed to delight them greatly.—Friend of India.

CONVICTION OF JOYKISSEN MOOKERJEE.—The Bengal Sudder Court on the 31st of March sentenced the well-known wealthy zemindar, Joykissen Mookerjee, of Ootterapara, in the vicinity of Calcutta, to imprisonment for five years, and a fine of Rs. 10,000 in lieu of labour, for abetting the forgery of a lease by his former servant Petumber Bose, who is now suffering a similar term of imprisonment. The case is so peculiar, and affords such an insight into life and in the government of Bengal, that we shall review it at length on the publication by the judges, Messrs. Trevor and Bayley, of their decision. The prisoner's evidence before the Indigo Commission will be remembered. The case has lasted just a year. It has excited much interest among natives, several of whom, we hear, intend to apply to the Lieutenant Governor, for pardon on the ground of want of evidence. Mr. Newmarch, one of the prisoner's counsel, is about to visit England with the prisoner's son, a Koolin Brahmin, to move the Privy Council to take up the case in appeal. If he succeeds, he will for the first time establish a precedent. Appeals in cases of felony to the Privy Council have never been known.

DEATH OF MR. CHAPMAN.—The Englishman mentions the death of S. Chapman, Esq., C.S., late Collector of Customs at Calcutta on board the Colombo, by which vessel he was proceeding with his family to the Neigherries. Mr. Chapman had long been seriously unwell, but appeared better previous to his departure on Sunday morning, March 23. In the evening of the same day he ate with good appetite at dinner, was seized with a fit some two hours after, and never rallied, dying in a very short time from congestion of the brain. His remains were put on board the Celerity and conveyed to Diamond Harbour, where they were interred on the Monday morning.

THE LATE HON. MR. RITCHIE.—At a meeting of the Committee of the Trades' Association on the 27th March, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—"That this association desire to place on their records their regret at the loss they consider the Government and the public have sustained by the lamented decease of the Hon. W. Ritchie."

SUMBULPORE.—With reference to the late disturbances in Sumbulpore, we learn that after a patient and careful inquiry into the conduct of each individual Gurjah chief, the Commissioner of Cuttack, while admitting that several have rendered themselves liable to severe punishment, advises that, with one or two exceptions, no further steps should be taken. The chiefs have nearly all come in, and have tendered their allegiance; but while fully admitting the offences charged against them, they have pleaded in extenuation the treatment they had been subjected to. Those who have not already done so are expected to surrender within a short time, and the Commissioner has recommended, that though he considers it may be necessary to take severe measures with regard to a few of these men, those who have voluntarily come in should not be charged with the expense of maintaining the Bildar Levy, as recommended by the previous Deputy-Commissioner of Sumbulpore, but that a share of the expenses incurred in the suppression of the late disturbances should be charged to each ratably, and the payment made to extend over one or more years, according to the means of the several chiefs. It may be desirable to teach these semi barbarous chiefs that if they either cause any disturbance themselves, or are the means of enabling those who are in opposition to the Government to avoid its officers and the penalty of their acts, they will have to bear the expense of any measures taken for the restoration of order. We therefore think it would be advisable, if these chiefs are to be made to pay at all, not only to charge them with the expenses already incurred, but to oblige them to provide for the payment of this Bildar Levy, until such time as they shall have given some guarantee for their future good behaviour. It is very well to allow rebels in some instances to plead extenuating circumstances, but as a rule it will not answer. Insubordination needs invariably to be checked promptly and with decision; and though in the present instance it may not be desirable to take any stringent measures, it can do no harm to show the chiefs the result to their incomes in aiding and abetting rebellion.—Englishman.

NATIVE NOTIONS.—We know too little of the natives, and few Englishmen have such good opportunities of knowing them as the missionaries of the rural districts. In a report on the Dacca mission for last year, showing much truthfulness of observation, the Rev. Messrs. Bion and Robinson give the following incidents of their tours in the district. At the close of an address one called out, "We have heard you over and over, your religion is true and good, but we cannot renounce ours and follow Christ." Near Bowal a Hindoo remarked, "Sahib, we have fallen between two stools; we do not understand our own religion and cannot receive yours." And why? "Because our shastras forbid it, and pronounce it a great sin to abandon the religion of our fathers." Some said to our native preachers in the bazaar, "Government is now collecting the value of the books which you have distributed because the Padre Sahib could never collect such sums of money from us." This was an interpretation of the income tax. At night another Hindu came and called out: "Tell me, are there two Christs in the world?" "Only one," was the reply; "Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world; and there is a Krishna, who was king of Mathura, but he is viler and more wicked than you are. This Krishna can never save you. Him forsake and forget." At the Ghât of Jalspur the people said: "You upset the whole country with your preaching and the distribution of your books. Many have gone mad by thinking over what they heard of this new religion." Some Mussulmans at one time got so angry that one of them, shaking his fist in the native preacher's face, said: "It is well for you that the English Raj is in the land, for had we our own way, we would strike off your heads now for preaching such blasphemous things."—Friend of India.

ALLAHABAD, March 27.—We have been favoured up here with some illuminations lately in the shape of barracks being burned down. At about ten o'clock the night before last, two of the Clydesdale ones caught fire, and last night at about midnight one of the Wellington. Strong suspicion rests upon a contractor here, a very wealthy man, who at one time had the contract for thatching the barracks, but from whom, for some reason or other, it was subsequently taken away. I believe he was heard by the Assistant Engineer to utter some threats, and on this suspicion he has been arrested. Bail to the amount of two lacs was offered, but not accepted. The barracks in question cost Government forty-five thousand Rs., i. e. fifteen thousand each. The North West Gazette was sold on Monday last, and the same day the late editor, Mr. Stewart, died.

THE LORD BISHOP OF CALCUTTA has intimated to Government his desire in the next cold season to complete the primary visitation of his diocese by going through those parts of Central India which belong to it; and in the meantime, he wishes to visit Purneah, Darjeeling and Senehal. He hopes to go to Darjeeling during the present month, stopping at Purneah on his way to spend the hot weather and rains there; and then to go to Dinapore, Mozuffarpore, Benares, Jubbulpore, Gwalior, Agra, and back to Cawnpore and Allahabad.

THE "WHIPPING" BILL provides that persons above sixteen years of age may be punished with not more than fifty stripes, and under with not more than ten. Females will not be whipped. In the case of an adult, the punishment of whipping shall be inflicted on the bare back with a cat-of-nine-tails, and in the case of a youth it shall be inflicted in the way of school discipline with a light rattan. The punishment shall be inflicted in the presence of a justice of the peace, or of an officer authorised to exercise any of the powers of a magistrate, and also, unless the Court which passed the sentence shall otherwise order, in the presence of a medical officer. The Criminal Law Consolidation Statutes, passed in the last session of Parliament, provide for the punishment, by whipping, of persons under sixteen years of age, for larceny, felony, and other crimes. The crimes for which it is proposed that the punishment of whipping may be awarded, are the same as those to which it was made applicable by the former Bill, with the addition of Dacoity.

CENSORSHIP OF THE NATIVE PRESS.—The Englishman says the Bengal Director of Public Instruction has been consulted by the Government of India in reference to the long pending question of the censorship of the native press. In reply he proposes that a library be established, to consist exclusively of works published in India, whether written in the Vernaculars or in any other language, and that a librarian be appointed, part of whose duty shall consist in submitting periodical reports to the Government on the statistics and character of the native press. He must also at any time be ready to send up a translation of any article which it might be desirable to bring under the notice of the authorities. The Lieutenant-governor approves of the plan. It seems feasible, and all the more that a room is likely to be devoted to the official records, the librarian of which could attend to both duties.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA.—While the cholera commissioners were at Meeran Meer Lieut.-col. Gawler was deputed to inquire of the married women whether they were comfortably lodged and fed, and whether they had any complaints to make. On first inquiry they appeared quite satisfied, and had no complaints, but when the gallant colonel pressed them to unburden to him their secret wishes, one of the females remarked, "that they would like very much to have a keg of brandy always on the tap in the married quarters, if Colonel Gawler could manage it for them."

ALLAHABAD, March 21.—The opening of the line to Agra has again been deferred till the 1st April, Mr. Strong, the resident engineer of the Jumna bridge works, goes home; he has made over his duties to Mr. Stock, from Mirzapore. Mr. Cecil Stephenson also goes home, the deputy agency being conducted by Mr. Barton, from the C. out a office.

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALIA left Calcutta on the 27th March, for his own estates, under the usual salute. We trust the rumour is true that the Rajah of Kupporthulla will be asked to sit in the Legislative Council.

A FATAL TAX.—The Oudh Gazette states that "the natives have a curious belief, that neither health nor luck of any kind will attend the labours of our councillors so long as the Income-tax remains unrepealed," and notices the fact in connection with Mr. Ritchie's lamented death, and the illness of Mr. Beadon and Mr. Laing. It is quite possible that some such absurd notion may get abroad, but we do not see that it can do much harm.

MADRAS.

THE CHINCHONA EXPERIMENT.

Twenty years ago Dr. Royle recommended the introduction of the chinchona into India, and, in 1842, he sent to Calcutta several seeds of the Calisaya variety procured from the forests of Bolivia by M. Weddell. The seeds failed to germinate in the Botanic Gardens, but next year Mr. Fortune brought out six plants, when on his way to China. They were exposed near Darjeeling at too high an elevation. Dr. Falconer also took up the subject, and, in 1855, Dr. Anderson, at present superintendent of the gardens, returned to it. Meanwhile the mutiny intervened. But in 1859 Lord Stanley sent Mr. Markham to South America to procure plants. Mr. Markham succeeded in carrying off four hundred plants, which he himself introduced into the Neilgherries, but all of which perished. Still defeat was not confessed. Application was made to Mr. Spruce, a botanist who had lived twelve years in Bolivia, and he sent to England and the West India Islands a quantity of seed of the Succirubra variety, under the care of Mr. Cross, a practical gardener. At the same time other seeds were sent to the Kew Gardens by an agent of Mr. Markham's. Sir W. Hooker entrusted packets of the seed to Dr. Anderson for trial in India, while Mr. Cross managed most successfully to convey plants to Ootacamund. The result is, that five hundred and seven plants, the stock on the 31st of May last, had been so skillfully propagated, that they had increased to eight thousand six hundred and thirteen at the end of 1861. Only a few, however, are planted out in open air nurseries; the rest grow in conservatories, under the influence of artificial heat.

Thus far the experiment has been successful, but to be of any use it must enter on a new stage. The plants must grow naturally in the open air. On the 5th of October last Dr. Anderson was accordingly despatched to Java, where a similar experiment has been tried ever since 1854. In that year a Mr. Hasskarl brought plants from South America, and they were entrusted to the gardener in charge of the Botanic Gardens at Buitenzorg, the Governor-general's seat. The experiment was such a failure that in 1856 Dr. Junghuhn, a well-known botanist, took charge of it, and Dr. De Vrij, a chemist, was appointed to assist him. The result is that 8,000 healthy plants of Calisaya, more than half a million of Paludiana, and large numbers of other species flourish luxuriantly in the open air. Dr. Anderson was received with the utmost courtesy by the Dutch authorities. In a country where forced labour is the law, he had "ample relays of coolies" for his Wardian cases, he was himself supplied with post-horses, and the botanist, chemist, and all the necessary officials accompanied him in his visit to the plantations. Let us follow Dr. Anderson. In the Southern portion of Java the Kendeng and Malabar range of mountains rise from the plateau of Bandung, which is 2,000 feet above the sea, to an elevation of from 6,000 to 7,000 feet. They are covered to their tops by a dense forest of gigantic trees, broken only by the crater of an active or extinct volcano. As we ascend we leave the rice fields of the plateau, pass through plantations of coffee with stems thirty feet high, covered with mosses and orchids, and then enter forests choked with an undergrowth of tree-ferns, wild plantains, and scendant shrubs. At an elevation of 5,000 feet the rhododendron, and the oak, types of a temperate flora, begin to be visible. Occasionally the vegetation becomes scorched and stunted, as the craters of active volcanoes are reached. The trees are dripping with moisture, spongy mosses entwine their roots, and the traveller is hidden from the sun. Here, at 6,500 feet, is the new home of the Cinchonas. The soil is volcanic dust, the mean temperature is from 62° to 66° deg., and the place is as rainy as the west of Scotland, the fall varying from 180 to 250 inches, and continuing from September to June, but occasionally the whole year.

The Dutch gardeners proceed thus. On a cleared space long and narrow raised beds of earth are arranged in terraces and protected by low sheds. A joint of a bamboo forms a pot filled with rich soil, on the surface of which a Cinchona seed is placed, the pot being put under the shed. In sixty days the seed germinates, and the young plant, when large enough, is put out in the forest. When twelve or eighteen months old, and twelve inches high, it is permanently planted out, and covered over by strong posts to protect it from injury. The work is done in each nursery by one European gardener and native labourers. In the forest all side lights being shut out, the plant is drawn up by the sun directly over head. When six years old it is thirty feet high. The full height of sixty or seventy feet, with a corresponding thickness, is not attained under forty or fifty years. The plant bears seed at an early period, but not as yet with regularity. Many years elapse until wood with bark is found fit for use, but the roots contain a larger proportion of the alkaloid than the bark. Instead of waiting, therefore, till the trees are fully grown, Dr. de Vrij is about to experiment on the roots of trees four years old. This will necessitate their destruction, but the plants are so numerous that the experiment is now out of danger. Dr. Anderson returned from Java on 11th November. He had the advantage of the company of the geologist Baron Von Richtofen, of the Prussian Embassy. He had an interview with Baron Von Sloet, the new Governor-general, to whom he will send some of our valuable specimens in return for his courtesy. And Messrs. Jarline, Skinner, and Co., Apear and Co., and the P. and O. Company, conveyed his plants in their Wardian cases free of charge. He has introduced his precious charge into the Neilgherries, where he studied the sites. He had in the Calcutta Botanic-gardens, a month ago, two hundred and eighty-nine plants, of which sixty-five were from Java.

Dr. Anderson's most successful embassy, as we may call it, to Java, has resulted in the following conclusions, which he establishes. So important an experiment must be under scientific superintendence. Where, in Java, the meteorology, botany and geology of the hills are known, there is little difficulty in selecting proper sites. The "successful rearing of the Cinchonas in the green-houses at Ootacamund is no more a proof that the climate of Neilgherries is adapted for their cultivation, than the fact that many thousands of seedlings as well as cuttings are now existing in perfect health in the Cinchona nursery at Kew, would lead us to expect that the plants will grow in the open air in England." In the present Ootacamund sites there is a want of moisture and shade; the rain fall at Ootacamund is only forty-eight inches, and the average in the Neilgherries ninety, while the mean temperature is 56 deg. 5 min. There are localities suitable for less temperate species of Cinchona. But for such as will withstand a slight fall of snow, "we must look for a proper home in the moist region of Darjeeling and the damp deep inner valleys of Eastern Kumaon." Dr. Anderson is accordingly now in Darjeeling, where he proposes to obtain 1,000 acres of land on the lower and outer ranges. Copying the Dutch system, he will establish a nursery under a European gardener, and promises not only to supply the Dutch with plants next November, but to have enough to commence a nursery for the more tropical species in the Khasia Hills. He begins with the Calisaya, Succirubra, and Paludiana varieties. The whole cost for the year is estimated at only £722. It has been proved in the Neilgherries that Cinchonas flourish in a hot-house. It remains to be seen if they will be as luxuriant in the open air, in the damp valleys of the Himalayas; otherwise the experiment will be a failure. Dr. Anderson has all the qualifications, and will be furnished with all the means to ensure success.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LED BY THE NOSE.—It is said that knowing old natives in Madras can tell, though blindfolded, any locality in the place simply by the nose. It must no doubt, says the Times, "require long and intimate acquaintance and considerable nasal acuteness thus to discriminate the villainous varieties of filthy effluvia which brood over every road and street and lane in this city. But all who come and go, still more, all whose unhappy fate has fixed them within the sickening range of these steaming, reeking exhalations can attest their disgusting pungency. In these days of handbooks by every body on every thing, some enterprising man of fœtid propensities, with a scientific mind and a sensitive nose might acquire fame to himself and confer a benefit on science by writing a popular treatise on these mephitic modifications, a sort of handbook on fœtorology. He would have abundant materials and a stimulating theme; the bazaars, with their varied yet uniformly disgusting smell of betel nut and burnt oil; the drains, and channels, and cesspools, with their rank, reeking effluvia; and, above and beyond all, 'that lovely river,' as Sir Charles Trevelyan called it, that black, winding, tortuous, long-drawn cesspool the Cooum, with its putrid, fermenting, muddy waters, leading the air and poisoning the lungs with its disgusting exhalations. In its deadly, slimy course, it passes through the busiest haunts, or skirts the most densely-inhabited portions of the outer city. It skirts or intersects every road; it abuts on every hospital, workshop, or penitentiary, and coils round Government House itself."

THE HYDERABAD ASSIGNED DISTRICTS.—A perusal of the Administration Report of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts for the financial year 1860-61 must impress the general reader with the very satisfactory results attending our administration during the period that their management has been vested in our hands. Colonel Davidson observed (Sec. VII., "Finance" paras. 68, 69, 70); "The financial position of the districts has been improving year by year. The revenues have steadily increased, and the expenditure carefully watched over and economised. Had the Raichore Dooab and the Dharaseo districts not been restored till the end of the last financial year—that is, the 30th of April, 1861—the large uncollected balances of the Government demand for the year, amounting to Rs. 10,50,000, would not have been appropriated by the Nizam, and deducted from the revenues of the Assigned Territory, and we should have therewith liquidated every claim due by the Assigned Territory, leaving a surplus of Rs. 2,06,000 for payment to the Nizam, agreeably to the treaty of 1853. The balance against the Nizam at the end of the year 1860-61 is Rs. 5,45,718-15-5½. This includes the balance, Rs. 3,25,198-9-10½, due by the Nizam at the end of 1858-59, and that at the close of 1859-60 Rs. 2,55,407-12-3½, so that there was actually a surplus in the two districts of Berar for the year of Rs. 34,887-6-8½ of receipts over disbursements. A much larger surplus in favour of receipts may be anticipated for the year 1861-62, a fair average of crops will, it is believed, yield a surplus revenue of Rs. 1,80,047-0-0. This is very cheering, and great credit is due to the head of the local administration, as well as to all the officers serving under his orders, for their unremitting exertions, to effect a result so satisfactory. But the public is not aware of the numerous taxes remitted in the assigned districts during the period of our administration, without any diminution of revenue being incurred, and I will now proceed to enumerate those which have been so remitted.

Grand Total...3,86,672 15 10

It may be assumed that an equal amount of taxes have been remitted in the districts which have been restored to his Highness the Nizam. The revenues thus relinquished amount to nearly 8 lacs of rupees, yet during the eight years of our administration, under all sources, the revenue has increased from Rs. 39,71,678, to Rs. 52,23,218, and Lord Canning has it in his power to restore to H. H. the Nizam, as a reward for his adherence to us during the rebellion of 1857-58, districts yielding Rs. 21 lacs. The total amount of revenue in the first year of assignment was rupees 39,71,678. This included the 8 lakhs of taxes since remitted. One may fairly thus conclude that the actual increase during our eight years of administration was Rs. 20,51,540, as noted below:—

|   |       |           |
| Receipts in 1853-54   | Rs.   | 39,71,678 |
| Deduct yearly amount of taxes relinquished                            | ...   | 8,00,000  |
| Balance actually collected  | ..... | 31,71,678 |
| Revenue in 1860-61  | Rs.   | 52,23,218 |
| Actual Revenue in 1860-61 over and above the sum collected in 1853-54 | ..... | 20,51,540 |

The districts retained by us in Berar yielded a net revenue of 24 lacs yearly, but to meet treaty engagements 32 lacs of revenue was necessary. H. H. the Nizam therefore transferred to us crown lands, &c., adjoining our old districts in Berar valued at 8 lacs, thus completing the demand of 32 lacs. In handing over the districts to the Nizam, Government has acted very liberally in making over to his Highness all local funds and uncollected revenue, amounting to upwards of 11 lacs of rupees of the revenues for 1860-61. Compensation was also paid to officers and others for houses, this charge being debited to the revenue of the districts retained, and the houses directed to be made over to the Nizam's Government. In the districts received from the Nizam, adjoining the Berars, the Talookdars had forced every rupee of revenue for the year from the cultivators. It has been remarked by a writer in the Englishman, under the name of "Capsule," that "the roads in Berar are well adapted for the conveyance of cotton throughout the districts, and that beyond bridging a few of the deep and rapid streams, and preventing the cultivation from encroaching upon the road, nothing further is required." This is now the opinion of all those best informed upon the requirements of Berar. As far as I can gather from inquiries instituted among the wealthy and opulent Lahoreans, all the cotton required for use within the districts is purchased, picked and despatched previous to the monsoons, at which season only are the roads in bad order. Any extent of metalled road, therefore, will not ensure a greater supply of cotton. Population is the great requirement, and I am credibly informed that thousands of the inhabitants who had emigrated previous to British administration are flocking back. We may, therefore, anticipate, from the increased number of hands that will be available for cotton sewing and gathering, an abundant supply of this staple commodity. The advantages resulting from our administration, are sufficiently obvious, and before many years are over, I feel assured that the revenues of the Berars will have doubled. It is estimated that there are 1,493 square miles of waste land capable of being cultivated within the area of the Assigned Districts. The revenue survey is progressing rapidly; many acres of land which have escaped assessment hitherto, from collusion between native assessors and the cultivators, will be brought under permanent assessment; and thus, as the survey of each Talook is completed, increased revenue will be received into our Treasury. That we have done our duty as faithful stewards I trust I have shown; and of the extent of Colonel Davidson's labours, and the magnitude of his exertions, the public can now form something like a just estimation.—Times of India.

LIEUT. F. C. TAYLOR, of the Madras Staff Corps, has been appointed to superintend the construction of the road between Neemuch and Ahmedabad, the expenses of which are to be borne by the Odeypore Durbar.

COFFEE CULTIVATION.—It appears from the Madras Times that Verajenderpet, situated in the province of Coorg, is already exhibiting capabilities for coffee cultivation, in which a commencement was made four years ago. The climate and temperature are said to be favourable. Within five miles the German mission have established themselves, and are cultivating coffee successfully. Their efforts to effect the conversion of the natives have hitherto failed in respect to the Coorgees, but have met with considerable success amongst the Yeraver tribe—a poor enslaved people over whom the Coorgmen exercised an irresponsible power. The profits of the mission cultivation are set aside for the support of the converts. The "Qarunbady estate" is said to be second to none in Coorg, rice being its principal production. The natives are much attached to their little coffee gardens. Scarcity of roads, as in the Wynad, is the great impediment to progress.

LORD CANNING'S REPLIES TO ADDRESSES FROM BOMBAY.

"CALCUTTA, March 18.

"Sir,—I beg that you will do me the favour of communicating to the native inhabitants of Bombay the accompanying reply to the address forwarded with your letter of Feb. 27, and that you will accept my thanks for that letter.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

"CANNING.

"To Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., &c., Bombay."

"CALCUTTA, March 18.

"Gentlemen,—I have read your address with much gratification.

"I accept thankfully your weighty testimony that the policy pursued by the Government of India in the evil days through which India has lately passed has restored the stability of the British rule, and won the respect and attachment of the native community.

"I thank you sincerely, gentlemen, for your friendly expressions of regard for myself personally, and I bid you heartily farewell.—I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

"CANNING."

"CALCUTTA, March 18.

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 7, forwarding to me an address on the part of the Bombay Association, and I beg that you will do me the favour of communicating to the Association the accompanying reply.

"I shall have much pleasure in complying with the request that I should sit for my bust, on receiving, after my return to England, an intimation of the wishes of the Association to that effect.

"I have the honour to be, sir,

"Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) "CANNING.

"Juggonath Sunkersett, Esq., Bombay."

"CALCUTTA, March 18.

"Gentlemen,—I receive with much pleasure the address which you have forwarded to me on the part of the Bombay Association.

"I am glad to know that you appreciate the great principles of justice and moderation which it has been my duty, as the head of a Christian Government, to uphold during a time of rebellion and anarchy; and I receive with pleasure your testimony that those principles have borne fruit in the loyalty and attachment to the Crown of the people of the Bombay Presidency.

"Although I do not learn it for the first time, I am glad to receive from you a further assurance that the recognition and confirmation of the right of adoption in certain princes and chiefs, and the admission of gentlemen of the native community to assist in making laws for their country, have given general satisfaction.

"You speak of the hardship inflicted by the income-tax. The Government of India has already, by the repeal of the license-tax, given proof of its desire to lighten taxation as much and as promptly as possible when the state of the finances permits it.

"For your good wishes towards myself personally I thank you heartily.

"I shall have much pleasure in acceding to your request that I should, on my return to England, sit for my bust.—I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) "CANNING."

"To the President and Members of the Bombay Association."

MAJOR WALKER, Superintendent of the Tannah police, will probably succeed Mr. Forjett as Deputy Commissioner. Major Walker has had nearly fifteen years' experience in the police department, and is well known as a most efficient and zealous officer. The Queen's approbation of his able and energetic conduct during the mutinies was expressly conveyed to him by the Secretary of State, and his selection for this appointment, therefore, is highly satisfactory, both as a merited recognition of past services, and as a guarantee that Bombay will not suffer from the retirement of Mr. Forjett.

THE REV. J. E. CARLILE.—"It is with regret," says the Guardian, "that we announce the departure of the Rev. Mr. Carlile, pastor of the Free Church, who is compelled by failing health to leave for England via the Cape. It is hoped that this voyage may be the means of restoring Mr. Carlile's health, so that he may return at the beginning of the next cold season. We trust, for the sake of the church where his ministrations have proved so acceptable, and for the sake of the religious interests of Western India generally, that this expectation may be fulfilled."

THE UNCOVENANTED DEPUTY COLLECTORSHIPS of the Bombay presidency are to be divided into three classes on salaries of Rs. 500, 400, and 300 respectively. Messrs. Showell, Nana Morjee, Dracup and Nowrojee Byramjee are to have the first-class places.

MR. F. HUTCHINSON has been appointed agent for several native companies on a salary of Rs. 1,500 per mensem, and returns shortly to England in that capacity. While he was in London an offer was made to him to be the manager of one of the Bombay weaving and spinning companies, on Rs. 800, which he had accepted. He has now succeeded in obtaining a better appointment.

MR. J. W. ORR has been appointed Prothonotary and Ecclesiastical Registrar of the Supreme Court, and Mr. A. Sangster as Clerk of the Insolvent Debtors' Court. These appointments are temporary, during the absence of Mr. Spencer Compton on leave to England.

MADAGASCAR.—Intelligence has arrived at the Cape of an important nature from Madagascar. An outbreak had occurred which had taken the form of civil war. It originated in the attempted assassination of the King by his cousin the Pretender. The king, seeing the blow aimed at him with a poniard, and fortunately being armed, drew a revolver and shot his assailant dead on the spot. The rival parties rushed to arms, and, up to the date of the vessel leaving with the news, they were still fighting. The feud was not considered likely to last long, as the King's party was by far the strongest, and the rebels had lost their chief. The Christians have appointed sixty-two men to be preachers of the Gospel, and they meet for worship in public places as well as in private houses.

MR. ANSTEY.—We regret to learn that the Bombay Bar will shortly lose one of its most distinguished ornaments by the retirement of Mr. Chisholm Anstey, who returns to England by the mail steamer of the 27th April. Ill-health is, we believe, the cause of Mr. Anstey's retirement; and it is said that he will not again return to India.

SURAT, April 2.—Cholera still prevails among the Hindoos, and the average number of deaths per day exceeds thirty! This disease has broken out in the civil gaol of this station, and twelve prisoners have already fallen victims. The heat continues to be oppressive.

RAJKOTE, Feb. 20.—Our usually peaceful station was much disturbed, a few days back, at the intelligence brought in of poor Captain Elliott's sudden death at Joonaghur. His remains were conveyed into camp, and deposited in the Christian burial-ground. Captain Elliott was an officer of great promise, who had been tried in various appointments, and had never been found wanting. Industrious, painstaking, and exceeding zealous, he chose to die at his post rather than avail himself of a medical certificate to Europe which the doctors had given him to recruit a frame much worn by repeated attacks of fever, and a mind sadly depressed by late departmental supercession—two causes which made him fall an easy victim to cholera then raging at Joonaghur.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, March 29.—The weather during the greater part of the fortnight has been fearfully hot, very trying to flesh and blood, and, for that very reason, specially favourable for the preparation and shipment of coffee. Accordingly, a considerable addition has been made to our exports, by the sailing of four ships for London with 37,378 cwt. of coffee, in the proportion of 28,314 plantation, and 9,064 native. Our total exports are thus brought up to 368,000 cwt., so that our faith in our estimate of 500,000 to 30th September is greatly strengthened. If 368,000 cwt., or at the rate of more than 61,000 cwt. a month, have been despatched in the first half of the season, it is not to be supposed that 138,000 cwt., or at the rate of 23,000 cwt. a month, cannot be made up in the concluding six months. There is the Ouval coffee to come in, and, as in other seasons, the first droppings of the new crop in July and August. Indeed, all the appearances at present are in favour, not only of a good, but of an early crop, the jasmine-like blossom of the coffee shrub having, within the past week, whitened a large proportion of the Hill sides of the Interior, gladdening the planter's eye, and rejoicing his heart. "Next year" is fast emerging from the cloudy realm of the mythical, and we feel sure that the figure 7 with five ciphers following it will be required to represent the export of 1862-63. That will involve (allowing for local consumption) a total production of three-quarters of a million of cwts.

The great bulk of our crop still finds its way to London; while as nearly as possible one half of our exports are consumed in Britain, the rest (apart from the small shipments to Australia, &c.) finding its way to the Continent, especially to the North of Europe, where our finer qualities are much sought after on account of their ability to bear what the poet of Ceylon Coffee Planting would call "mixin." Our Mountain Coffee stands a deal of Chicory. Our exports of Plantation Coffee to date are 45,000 cwts. in advance of the corresponding period of the last two seasons, and 67,000 above 1858-59. Native, too, is likely to come up to a fair average, having already reached 94,000 cwts., against 68,000 last season, and 110,000 and 130,000 in the previous seasons.

Our exports of cinnamon, like our exports of coffee, are above the average, and even cocoa nut oil is now creeping up. Though far below the large figures for this time last year, it is quite up to the mark of the previous two seasons. The latest accounts from England respecting our three great staples are encouraging, even cocoa nut oil having shared in the advance. Shipments from Colombo, as from Cochin, are limited by the short crop of nuts. At Cochin, too, the export of oil is greatly affected by the large exports of copperah to Calcutta, Bombay, and other Indian ports, where the raw material is expressed into oil, burnt in temples, and even eaten by the natives. Copperah is, doubtless, apt to become a little rancid, and cannot be very digestible; but its use as an article of food ought not greatly to surprise Englishmen who enjoy "high" grouse, and luxuriate on walnuts and filberts. The export of Ceylon copperah is insignificant when compared with oil. In 1860 we sent to India 13,766 cwts. of copperah, valued at £8,260. We also exported, mainly to India, 2,295,770 cocoanuts, valued at £6,904. Our export of oil, on the other hand (strictly Ceylon produce), reached 124,000 cwts., valued at £154,000.

Our Governor, with a large portion of the leading members of Government and society, is on the Hills, away from the sweltering heat of Colombo (83 degrees in a room in the fort at midnight). Many changes in the civil service are on the tapis, and a local journal has made the astonishing announcement that the Ceylon Rifle Regiment is to be gradually extinguished. There is probably as much truth in this statement as in that of another journalist, that troops intended for India are to be stationed in the mountain wildernesses which surround Newera Ellia.

We regret to say that the health of some parts of the country is not good. Small-pox is prevalent, and some cases of cholera have occurred at Colombo. In Jaffna, up to the 25th instant, 143 cases of cholera had been reported, with the usual proportion of deaths at the outset of this epidemic, in this case eighty-four, somewhat over two-thirds of the seizures. Cholera, too, is reported to have broken out amongst some two thousand or so of return coolies collected near Manaar on their way to the continent of India. Government promptly despatched the Pearl to carry the coolies across to Paumben, the vessel having also carried a medical man and a supply of medicines.

The Pearl had been previously engaged in a survey of the Pearl Banks, the result of which has been the satisfactory announcement that over a space of four miles in extent, off Aripo, oysters of all ages exist in great abundance, giving promise of fisheries for three successive years (commencing with next year), and yielding in all not less than £150,000. If that does not help us to a railway, it will at least aid us in finally extinguishing the railway debt.

Meantime we are glad to notice that although the Customs revenue for the first two months of this year is not so good as could be wished, the sum derived from tolls has risen to £60,000. This is about half the sum which Government can at present spend on roads, apart from the proceeds of the road ordinance, some £36,000 per annum.—Colombo Overland Observer.

Death of the Hon. W. Ritchie.

Home Dept., Fort William, March 22.—No. 1,527.—The Hon. William Ritchie, Fifth Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-general, died this afternoon at four o'clock.

The Gov. gen. in Council notifies this mournful event to the community with the deepest regret, and he requests that the officers of Govt., civil and military, will attend the funeral of the late Mr. Ritchie, assembling for this purpose at his residence on the esplanade at five o'clock to-morrow evening.

H.E. in Council has directed the flag of Fort William to be lowered to half mast high during the whole of to-morrow, and that fifteen minute guns be fired at the time of the funeral from the ramparts of Fort William.

By order of the Gov. gen. in Council,
W. GREY, Sec. to the Govt. of India.
Republished by order of H.E. the Gov. in Council,
T. PYCROFT, Chief Secretary.

Military Letters.

AMALGAMATION OF GENERAL AND FIELD OFFICERS.

The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 47, dated 18th ult., and the Royal Warrant therein referred to, are published in G.O.:—

I forward herewith, for the information of your Govt., and for publication in G.O., copies of a Royal Warrant, dated Jan. 1, 1862, [War-office circular, No. 735.] prescribing the mode in which the amalgamation of the general and field officers of the Indian armies with the general and field officers of the British army, and the promotion of the officers to higher rank, shall be carried into effect.

CIRCULAR No. 735.

VICTORIA R.

Whereas we have judged it expedient to approve of the amalgamation of the general and field officers of our Indian armies with the general and field officers of our regular army; our will and pleasure is, that such amalgamation, and the promotion of the officers to higher rank, shall be carried into effect in the manner prescribed in the regulations hereunto annexed.

Given at our Court at St. James's this first day of Jan., 1862, in the Twenty-fifth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's command.

REGULATIONS.

1. The existing general officers of either army shall continue, as at present, on separate lists.

2. All colonels, either army, who attained that rank prior to Feb. 17, 1861, shall be continued on separate lists as at present, and shall succeed on separate lists to the rank of major-gen., lieut.-gen., and gen., under the regulations now in force for each army respectively; but if all the cols. on one of the separate lists shall have become maj.-gens., while some of the cols. on the other separate list are still unpromoted, those cols. shall have the benefit of vacancies occurring in the list of gens. of either army, and cols. so promoted shall be placed on an amalgamated list of maj.-gens., from which promotion shall be made by seniority in succession to all vacancies in the higher grades, whether of the British or Indian service.

3. All officers in either army who shall have attained the rank of col. on or after the 17th day of Feb. 1861, shall at once be placed, according to the dates of their commissions, as cols. on one general list, from which so soon as the separate lists of cols. are exhausted, promotion shall be made according to seniority in succession to all vacancies in the establishments of general officers, whether of the British or Indian service, and cols. so promoted shall enter upon the amalgamated list above provided, from which promotion shall be made by seniority in succession to all vacancies in the higher grades, whether of the British or Indian service.

4. All promotions in the lower grades, in consequence of vacancies amongst general officers, shall, until the general fusion hereinafter provided, fall in each case to that service to which the officer creating the vacancy belonged; and such promotions shall be made under the regulations now in force in either service.

5. When all the colonels on the separate list of the cavalry, guards, and line of the British army, and on that of the Indian army, shall have become maj.-gens., the whole of the field officers, including those of the artillery and engineers of both armies, as well as field officers of the royal marines, shall be placed on one general list, from which all promotions shall be made up to rank of lieut.-col. inclusive, in succession to vacancies on the general officers' list; and from that time the senior Captain of the United Army and Royal Marines shall succeed to a Brevet Majority, under the 15th Clause of the Warrant of the 14th October, 1858.

6. Promotion to the rank of General officer in the Royal artillery and Royal engineers will continue to be carried on under the regulations now in force, until all the colonels of artillery and engineers, as the case may be, on the separate list of the Indian armies, shall have become Major-generals; then the general officers of the artillery of the Indian army shall be amalgamated with those of the Royal artillery; and in like manner, the general officers of the engineers of the Indian army, with those of the Royal engineers; promotions to the rank of general officer in the ordnance corps being made subsequently to their respective amalgamations from one list of colonels of the Royal and Indian artillery, and from one list of colonels of the Royal and Indian engineers.

7. The present establishment of general officers of H.M.'s Indian artillery and engineers was fixed at the rate of one officer for each battalion, [Indian Artillery.—4 Generals, 8 Lieut.-generals, and 12 Major-generals: 24 Indian engineers.—2 Generals, 3 Lieut.-generals, and 6 Major-generals: 11;] but as these corps are now being incorporated with the Royal artillery and engineers respectively, it is necessary that the proportion of generals to combatant officers, adopted for H.M.'s forces, should be extended to the brigades and battalions now being added to the artillery and engineers respectively. Eventually, therefore, the establishment of general officers of the brigades and battalions now being transferred from the Indian service will be fixed at twenty-six for the artillery and twelve for the engineers respectively. [Artillery.—5 Generals, 8 Lieut.-generals, and 13 Major-generals: 26 Engineers.—2 Generals, 4 Lieut.-generals, and 6 Major-generals: 12.]

8. If at the time of the amalgamation of the general officers of artillery and engineers provided in the 5th paragraph of this warrant there shall be more general officers of the Indian artillery or engineers than the proportion fixed as their establishment, viz., twenty-six for the artillery and twelve for the engineers, (a circumstance which might arise from all promotions to the rank of general officer in the Indian service being now made on one general list, which includes officers of all branches of the service), the excess shall be absorbed before a colonel of the branch concerned can be promoted. Or, if there be less than the established number, promotions shall be made to supply the deficiency, from the general lists above mentioned, of colonels of Royal and Indian artillery and engineers respectively.

9. Upon the transfer of the present twelve regiments of European cavalry and infantry of the Indian Army to the British Army, a like number of general officers will be taken off the Indian establishment, and will, as colonels of such regiments, be transferred according to the dates of their commissions to the fixed establishment of general officers of the British Army.

But as the number (12) of general officers thus brought from the Indian establishment is less than the proportion (15) of general officers due to the number of combatant officers, belonging to the transferred regiments, an addition of three general officers shall, on this account, be made to the unattached list of the British Army at the time referred to in paragraph 8 of this warrant.

And in making these additions to the list of general officers, the proportions of the different grades of general officers now on the establishment of the British Army shall be maintained.

10. The field officers coming to the British Army with these regiments shall take their position on the general list of field officers, according to the date of their army rank, by which their future promotion shall be governed.

11. The amalgamation of the lists of general officers, in accordance with these provisions, will in no wise affect the system which regulates the succession to the colonelcies of regiments of the British Army, or to the colonels' allowances of her Majesty's Indian forces.

12. The present establishment of general officers of the Indian Army, inclusive of artillery and engineers, consists of 25 generals, 50 lieutenant-generals, 145 major-generals, which numbers are, however, liable to reduction.

But the proportion of generals maintained on account of the Indian establishment shall at all times be governed by the principles adopted in respect to the British forces, both as to numbers and gradation.

And reductions shall be made by gradual absorption; and by the promotion of not less than one colonel for three vacancies amongst general officers, until supernumeraries are exhausted.

RETIREMENTS.

The following paras. of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 44 of Feb. 8, 1862, are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your letter dated Dec. 9, 1861, No. 346, forwarding correspondence relative to the position of officers who, having entered the staff corps and obtained promotion, may retire on the additional annuity.

2. You will have learned from my despatch, No. 399, of Oct. 16 last, that it was the intention of H.M.'s Govt., as expressed in para. 20 of my despatch, No. 320, of Aug. 10, 1861, to give to officers who might have elected to join the staff corps or the new line regts. the opportunity of reconsidering their position, and of availing themselves of the annuity to which they would have been entitled had they not elected to join either of those corps.

3. You will therefore cancel the appts. to the staff corps and new line regts. of all officers who shall have retired under the annuity scheme lately published, after appt. to either one or the other. Such officers will then be precisely in the same position as if they had not applied to join either of those corps.

Intestate Estates.

No. 274.—In conformity with G.G.O. No. 144 of 1852, the following Statement of Deposits made in the General Treasury, during the month of February, 1862, on account of the Estates of deceased European commissioned, non-commissioned, and warrant officers and soldiers of the Indian military forces of her Majesty, is published for general information. And it is hereby notified that claims to the estates in question, which shall not be preferred to the sub-treasurer by executors and administrators before the conclusion of twelve months after the date of decease, cannot be attended to in this country, as the money, after that period, will be remitted to, and made payable by, the Secretary of State for India:—

Rules Regarding Prize Money.

The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased, with the view of payments of prize money being made in England, concurrently with payments in India, to lay down the following rules:—

I. That no officer or soldier shall receive his share in England so long as the head quarters of his regiment shall be in India unless he produce a certificate, in the case of an officer, showing that his share has not been paid in India; or unless his name, in the case of a non-commissioned officer or soldier, be found on a roll of unpaid shares forwarded from India.

II. That, on the embarkation of the head quarters of any regiment or battery from India, payments in India shall cease; nominal rolls shall be forwarded to England, and thenceforward no payment shall be made in India to officers or soldiers of that regiment or battery but upon the production of certificates that their shares have not been, and will not be, paid in England.

III. With regard, however, to corps already proceeded to England which, before embarkation, drew prize money for all except volunteers to other regiments in India, the foregoing Clause shall be in abeyance for two months from this date; claims on behalf of the volunteers are to be submitted within that period by the officers of the corps which the volunteers have joined.

IV. As regards corps proceeded to England with or without having drawn prize money, and in which corps officers have assigned their shares to individuals residing in India, the shares in question will cease to be payable in India on the expiration of two months from this date, at the end of which period, if not claimed in this country by that time, they will be included in a list of unpaid shares for transmission to England. The same rule will apply to officers of regiments in India who have left the country, but have assigned their shares to individuals residing in India.

V. In all cases of deceased officers and soldiers who have left no representatives in India, as also of soldiers who returned to England prior to the commencement of distribution, and of officers who similarly returned without having assigned their shares in India, the fact of their decease or of their having so returned is to be notified in a complete copy of the prize rolls to be forwarded by the general prize committee to the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital.

VI. In the case of regiments which returned to England prior to the commencement of distribution, similar complete rolls will be sent to India. These rolls will specify in every case whether the shares are to be paid in India or by the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital in England.

2. To enable the general prize committee to send to the home authorities the list of all unpaid shares, including those of men of both line and local forces who may leave India while the distribution is being made without having received their shares of prizes, officers commanding regiments and batteries are requested to send to the said committee, within a fortnight of the receipt of this order, prize lists of non-commissioned officers and men invalided and discharged and sent to England, and of deceased men who have left no heirs in India, and whose estates have been sent to England.

Education Department.

Financial Dept., Allahabad, Feb. 25.—No. 174.—The foll. notification, issued by the Govt. of India, in the Home Dept., is republished for general information:—

No. 845.—The foll. despatch from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State is published by order of the Gov. gen. in Council:—

India Office, London, Dec. 9, 1861.

To H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOV. GEN. OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

My Lord,—I have to acknowledge paras. 2 and 3 of your public despatch, No. 42 of 1861, which forward a memorial from Messrs. Woodrow, Lodge, and other members of the Education Department, praying that they may be placed upon the same footing as principals and head masters of colleges and schools in regard to their being eligible to pensions if incapacitated by age or infirmity after the same length of services as law officers and native judges.

2. The appointments held by these gentlemen are those of inspectors, principals, professors, and head masters, and as professors are of a grade higher than head masters and inspectors than either principals or head masters, I sanction the grant to the memorialists of pensions on the same terms and conditions as were authorised for the last named grades in para. 4th of the Financial Despatch, dated July 20, 1853, No. 23, subject to the usual limitation applicable to the pensions of the Uncovenanted Service.

* Extract from the Financial Despatch from the late Court of Directors, No. 23 of 1853, dated 20th July.

Para. 4. "Our attention has again been given to the subject, and we have resolved now to withdraw the restriction as respects this valuable class of public servants (Servants of Government employed in the Education Department) and to sanction their being admitted to participate in the privileges of the Pension Rules of 1831. We have also determined, with a view of showing our estimation of the importance of their services, that the Principals and Head Masters of Colleges and Schools shall be ranked in the same class with Law Officers and Native Judges, and in a manner with them be qualified, if incapacitated by age or infirmity [vide Clause 3 Rule 5 of the Pension Rules of 1831], to receive pensions equivalent to one-third of their average monthly salary after fifteen years' service, and to one-half after a service of twenty years or upwards. The privilege must be confined to Principals and Head Masters. With regard to all other educational servants a service of twenty years will be a necessary qualification for the minimum rate of pension."

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

Fort St. George, March 28.—It is hereby notified that Government have sanctioned the formation of a first department in the Civil Engineering College, in which the course of instruction will be regulated to fit officers of the army and other gentlemen of liberal education for the position of assistant district engineer in the department of Public Works, and those who may desire it, for the degree B.C.E. (Bachelor of Civil Engineering) in the University of Madras.

2. Candidates for admission to the first department must be commissioned officers of the army below the rank of field officer, or must have passed the matriculation examination of the Madras University.

3. Officers who are candidates for admission must be qualified by acquaintance with their military duties, and by having passed the examination in one of the native languages for charge of a company, and they will be required to undergo an entrance examination in the whole of arithmetic, the first three books of Euclid, and algebra as far as simple equations.

4. The number of officers is for the present limited to five, and of civilians to seven.

5. Civil candidates must be over sixteen years of age, and must produce satisfactory testimony of good character.

6. All students are now resident.

7. Applications from officers should be addressed through commanding officers of regiments to the principal of the college, who, after satisfying himself that the candidates are fully qualified under paragraph 3. and are likely to profit by the course of study, will forward the application for the approval of H.E. the C. in C.

8. Admissions to the college will usually take place at the opening of the session on Aug. 1 in each year, and, on the present occasion, an entrance examination will be held in the month of May, prep. to admission on Aug. 1, 1862. The places at which this examination will be held, and the dates, will be notified hereafter.

9. The principal of the college may, at any time, recommend to H.E. the C. in C. that an officer may be remanded to his regt.

10. Officers who obtain permission to study at the college will be considered "absent on duty," and will be so reported in the regimental returns.

11. All students will be required to pay a monthly fee of 16 rupees.

12. All students will be required to provide themselves with the text books in use, also with a case of drawing instruments and colour-box.

13. It is to be distinctly understood that the Government do not in any way promise or guarantee employment as assistant engineers, or in any other capacity, to gentlemen who may pass the examination prescribed for assistant engineer, or who may take degrees in the University of Madras.

By order, T. PUCKERT, Chief Secretary.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, April 29.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers of H.M.'s Indian forces, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their names, viz.:

Lieut. Thomas Cadell, the late 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers, for having, on the 12th of June, 1857, at the flagstaff picket at Delhi, when the whole of the picket of H.M.'s 75th regiment and 2nd European Bengal fusiliers were driven in by a large body of the enemy, brought in from among the enemy a wounded bugler of his own regiment under a most severe fire, who would otherwise have been cut up by the rebels. Also, on the same day, when the fusiliers were retiring, by order, on Metcalfe's house, on it being reported that there was a wounded man left behind, Lieut. Cadell went back of his own accord towards the enemy, accompanied by three men, and brought in a man of the 75th regiment, who was severely wounded, under a most heavy fire from the advancing enemy.

Lieut. Edward Talbot Thackeray, Bengal engineers, for cool intrepidity and characteristic daring in extinguishing a fire in the Delhi magazine enclosure, on the 16th of September, 1857, under a close and heavy musketry fire from the enemy, at the imminent risk of his life from the explosion of combustible stores in the shed in which the fire occurred.

SIR J. P. GRANT'S REPLY TO LORD CANNING.

From V. H. SCHALCH, Esq., Officiating Commissioner of the Nuddea Division, to the Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal, No. 89, dated Jan. 13, 1862:—

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 3,180A, of the 28th ult., and I have directed the collectors of Jessore and Nuddea to depute their sub-divisional officers to inquire into the relation existing between the planter zemindars of those factories, mentioned in the list furnished by the Secretary to the Landholders' and Commercial Association, which may be situated within their jurisdictions, at the same time impressing on them the necessity of their acting in the spirit of the orders contained in your letter, and of their endeavouring to promote a more healthy state of feeling between the parties.

2. That there exists a decided indisposition on the part of the tenantry to pay voluntarily rent to their zemindars, when these latter are also planters, is undoubted. From what I have been able to ascertain in conversation with both parties, and from inquiries from the local authorities, the position of the parties appears to be this:—The planter zemindar, finding the repugnance of his tenants towards the cultivation of indigo in most instances invincible, has in some estates sought to reimburse himself for the loss of the profit he has hitherto obtained from the manufacture of the dye, by raising the rents generally throughout his zemindary under the facilities afforded him by the recent rent law, and has also exercised largely the power of ejecting those who held as tenants at will for the purposes of taking their lands into his own hands for the cultivation of indigo.

3. From notes by me I find that over 22,000 notices of enhancements of rent have already been issued by the planter zemindars noted in the margin,* while in the estates in which recourse had not been had to this measure, it will, it is well known, be largely enforced in the ensuing year. Of the number of ejectments I have no reliable data, but they are, I know, very considerable.

4. Though in thus exercising their right, the one party may have acted fully within the law, yet the sudden and wholesale manner in which these measures have been carried out, has naturally united the other in a bond of sympathy and common interest.

5. The ryots believe that these proceedings have been instituted with a view to punish them for their refusal to cultivate indigo, and that a compliance with the planters' wishes to resume the cultivation would at once cause their cessation. Determined to avoid all connection with that obnoxious crop, and irritated at the enhancement of the rent at which they have for years held their tenures, and at their ejectment from some of the most valuable land, they combine to cease the voluntary payment of rent, trusting that delay in receiving their rents and the consequent difficulty of meeting the Government demand for revenue, will drive the planter to pursue a more lenient course towards them.

6. The ryots further allege, in extenuation of their conduct, the demand in some estates of illegal cesses; but they more generally urge that, having little confidence in the teh-sildars appointing the rent, they prefer incurring the costs attending a suit in court, and thereby acquiring an unimpeachable acknowledgment of the payment of their rent, to risking the possible repudiation of the receipts they would receive on a voluntary payment to the teh-sildars.

7. While, then, the ryot has, to a certain extent, fair grounds for refusing payment where an enhanced rate or unauthorised cesses are demanded, no valid excuse exists, as far as I am able to judge, for the more prevalent refusal, founded on the alleged unwillingness of the teh-sildars to receive the rent when offered, or on the fear of the possible repudiation of the receipts they may grant.

8. Such being the position of the two parties, I do not think that any officer of Government acting as a mere mediator, armed with any extraordinary powers, and authorised by either to determine the terms of any agreement would be successful in bringing about a settlement between them. Self-interest would probably suggest more weighty arguments in favour of an amicable arrangement than he could bring. While as exponents of the views of Government, as expressed in your letter under reply, as a means of bringing the parties face to face, the local authorities would prove equally efficient, and their action would be more immediate and simultaneous.

9. As far as has lain in my power I have taken every opportunity to explain to the ryots the false position they are assuming, and to urge them to show no factious opposition to their landlords.

10. I purpose visiting the neighbourhood of the more extensive concerns in both districts within the next month or six weeks, and shall lose no opportunity of giving expression to the views of His Honour the Lieut.-governor on the subject. The arrangements which either have been, or now are in progress, for the location of a sufficient number of revenue officers to dispose, without delay, of rent suits, will greatly facilitate the recovery of the large arrears now outstanding.

11. Should, unhappily, the exhortations of the authorities and their endeavours to induce in both parties a more conciliatory spirit prove unsuccessful, and the measures adopted for enforcing prompt payment of rent through the court have no admonitory effect, I shall then, I trust, be in a position, after receiving the reports of local officers, and after consultation with them, to submit, for the consideration of Government, such suggestions as may appear expedient to meet the difficulty.

12. I will bear in mind the permission conditionally granted in the 4th paragraph of your letter to allow time for the payment of revenue where good cause for such indulgence may be fully established.

From V. H. SCHALCH, Esq., Officiating Commissioner of the Nuddea Division, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 93, dated Jan. 23, 1862.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, in continuation of my letter No. 89 of the 13th instant, in original, a report from the collector of Nuddea, submitting his views of the state of things as regards the rent question in his district, and the measure he would propose to effect a settlement of the question.

* J. Hills, Esq., 7,500; A. Hills, Esq., 2,000; H. Sibbud, Esq., 3,000; T. Kenny, Esq., 1,600; — Smith, Esq., 6,000; J. White, Esq., 1,300.

2. The report contains so full and clear an exposition not only of the present aspect of the question, but of the causes which have induced it, founded on a thorough knowledge of the past and present circumstances of the district, that I have deemed it advisable to submit it in full for the information of his Honour the Lieut.-governor.

3. Mr. Herschel's views, it will be seen, as to the present position of the parties, the causes which have led to it, and the probable success attending the appointment of special commissioners, agree in all material points with the opinion I had in those respects expressed in my letter above quoted.

4. Having been but for a short period connected with this division, I did not consider the amount of information I had hitherto been able to acquire of the conflicting interests represented by the planter zemindars and their ryots sufficient to warrant my suggesting any practical remedy for the amelioration of the relations at present existing between them, until I had, by personal intercourse in my tour through the districts, obtained a better insight of the views and arguments of both parties; but when I find that the opinions I had formed on this subject are so fully in accordance with those independently arrived at by an officer of Mr. Herschel's sound judgment, general ability, and perfect knowledge of his district, I have no hesitation in urging on the Government the acceptance of the remedial measure proposed in Mr. Herschel's report.

5. He proposes, in place of the appointment of a special commissioner, as suggested by the Landholders' Society, to act as a mediator between the parties, the appointment of an officer exercising the united powers of a collector, and of a collector and of a civil zillah judge under Act X. of 1859. I would further recommend that he be also vested with the powers of a commissioner of revenue under that Act.

6. By this arrangement the entire executive management, and the judicial control of the machinery for working the rent law, and for the determination of all questions connected with that law, would be united in the one officer, and thus economy and efficiency of power simultaneously secured with uniformity of action. The union of these powers would in no way clash, nor be productive of deprivation of any of the rights and privileges of appeal conferred by law. Additional judge, as he might be termed, could restrict the exercise of his powers as collector to the decision of certain appeals from the deputy collectors, refraining from adjudication of original suits in which, as collector, his decision would be final, so that no right of appeal would be lost. Vested with the powers of commissioner he would dispose of cognate suits under Sections XXV., XXVI., and XXVIII., relative to the ejectment of tenants, measurement of land, and assessment of invalid Lakhiraj tenures, which, though intimately connected with the other suits under the rent law, have been ruled to be of an executive nature, and therefore not judiciously cognisable; and he would be further enabled to distribute his subordinate staff according to the requirements of the district of which his experience, as the general and sole appellate authority (subject, of course, to the supervision of the Sudder Court and the Board of Revenue), would keep him fully informed.

7. That an appointment such as that now proposed would tend to the early and final settlement of the rent question as anticipated by Mr. Herschel, I feel confident, and I am sanguine that the proposal now submitted will be approved of because it affords a practical, and, I believe, certain means of accomplishing the desire of the Government to settle justly and with as little delay as the interests involved will admit of, the dissensions existing between many of the landlords and their ryots in the Nuddea and Jessore districts, for in the latter also would I recommend the appointment of an additional judge similarly vested.

8. I trust that, in recommending these appointments, I may be absolved from all suspicion of desiring to evade any responsibility connected with the office I hold; but the aspect the rent question has assumed, and the importance attached to its early and satisfactory settlement, must sooner or later force on the Government the adoption of exceptional measures to meet the difficulties involved in it, and I can safely affirm that, even if relieved of all connection with it in these two districts, the other duties which I shall, as commissioner of revenue and circuit, have to perform, will fully occupy every moment of my time.

9. Mr. Herschel supplements the proposal for the appointment of an additional judge by another, for the enactment of a penal clause for the withholding of rent, and for a reconsideration of the law relative to the measurement of lands.

10. Some time must elapse before these alterations in the existing law could be effected, and I would not delay the proposed appointment of the additional judge until this could be done. On the contrary, the experience that such an officer would very shortly acquire would be brought to bear most beneficially on the discussion of these questions, and the results attending his appointment would clearly indicate how far the proposed measures would be required.

From W. J. HERSCHEL, Esq., Collector of Nuddea, to the Commissioner of the Nuddea Division, No. 183, dated the 18th January, 1862.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter, No. 206, dated 10th inst., enclosing copies of correspondence which has passed between the Government of Bengal and the landholders, and Commercial Association.

2. I have seen also in the daily papers copies of correspondence which has passed between the Supreme Government and the Government of Bengal and the Association. I learn that His Excellency the Governor-general entertains a strong impression that some steps should be taken to bring to a close the enormous litigation which is going on, and has suggested for this purpose the re-appointment of Special Commissioners, whose duty it shall be, as far as possible, to act as mediators between the contending parties, and where that is not sufficient to place the disputed point before a Court of Justice.

3. The correspondence has come to me with instruction from his Honour the Lieut.-governor of Bengal (in anticipation, apparently, of any resolution on the general question) to use, to the utmost, the influence in my power to check the evil complained of. This I shall of course do. Meanwhile I avail myself of this opportunity of submitting to you my views upon the state of things at the present moment, believing that, within the last one or two months, the matter has assumed an aspect which admits of a definite action of a kind, perhaps, not exactly such as is contemplated, but which I believe to be necessary.

4. The general impression which the correspondence raises is, that the planter zemindars are beginning to be overwhelmed with the mass of suits which they institute, and that a continuance of such a state of things must end in their succumbing, and that, consequently, they are desirous to submit their cause to arbitration. There is nothing in the correspondence itself to show how far the ryots and the other party in the question are desirous of a similar reference; but I can safely say that they also are weary of the contest, and would be glad of any means of arriving at a settlement; but whether they are equally desirous, with their zemindars, for a reference to special arbitration, is a question which I am unable to answer. They have expressed no opinion upon it, and in the absence of any satisfactory means for their doing so, their wishes on the point cannot be known. Under these circumstances I fear that the success of any attempt to arbitrate between the two parties must be very problematical. How much soever it may be desirable that the questions at issue should be settled in an amicable way, it would, I think, be a grievous blow to the authority and influence of Government if another attempt to arbitrate were followed by results comparatively so slight as were attained by Messrs. Morris and Montresor.

5. I venture to express a decided opinion that any such attempt will fail as the last attempt failed, and for the same reason—viz., that the wishes of one of the parties will not have been consulted beforehand. However excellent the choice may be, the appointment will be looked on with suspicion by those who had no voice in determining the line of conduct adopted; the ryots may yield to the temporary show of authority which sends them such an arbiter; but the sensation will pass away, and the reaction will be worse than the original evil. It has been so in one instance, and I cannot entertain the faintest hope that it will be otherwise this time.

6. Some censure has fallen from his Excellency as to the failure of the last experiment, on the ground that sufficient time was not given to the attempt to conciliate. The attempt, however, is one of the difficulties which are far greater than is believed. I have failed so utterly myself in all attempts of the kind, that I feel that the censure is as applicable to me as to any one, and if I have long ago given up all such attempts, it is not, I can assure the Government, from any want of sympathy with the disputants, but because I have learned the real evil (and it is nothing less) of making them. They are not only hopeless; they cause a wider breach than before. The interference is necessarily at the request of one party, and no delicacy of handling avails to disguise this fact. The other party submits, but does so with a grudge. It is not possible from such a position to speak to the ryots otherwise than in a tone of command as contrasted with the tone in which advice is suggested to an European gentleman. The difference cannot escape the keen perception of a native. There is no real weight in such an order, and the advice is not always acted on. It is a very short time, indeed, before both are neglected, and the Government officer has a reward for his pains in the mutual distrust of both parties.

7. I must ask the fullest indulgence which can be allowed to a subordinate officer, when I express my earnest hope that all further attempts at conciliation be abandoned, and that, instead thereof, the voice of authority, if any at all, be adopted as the only one which can meet the difficulties of the case in a special way.

8. The difficulties of the case I believe to be greatly different from such as can be met by any attempt to smooth them down. They are real questions of right and wrong, in which the feelings of the parties are kept excited by the magnitude of the interests at stake, and not by the recollection of former disputes. That this has much to do with it is, of course, impossible to ignore, and it doubtless does add energy to the contest, but it does not support it. The ryots are not naturally a vindictive race, that they should have undergone the tremendous pressure upon them of the last few months for the sole purpose of getting finally rid of their opponents in the late struggle. Such a feeling may have, and I have no doubt that it did prompt the first resistance to the planters' usual demand for rent. But it has long ceased to be operative (except where it is kept alive by the continuance of a very slightly reformed system of indigo advances). It was the mere stepping-stone from the indigo to the rent question. All such feelings have been absorbed in the interest attaching to the present one. The zemindaree question is one in which the ryot is a hundred-fold more interested than even that of indigo, and if any cause be sought for the intensity of the present struggle it is not, I think, necessary to look further than to the questions which it has brought to the surface.

9. They are excessively numerous, and it is hard to say which is most important. Neither party can be blamed, in my opinion, for mooring them. If the initiative, on the close of the indigo questions, did lie with the ryots at first, I think there are grounds for saying that, for some four or five years previous to that, a general tendency on the part of the planters had been shown to extend the exercise of their zemindaree rights. Enhancements of rents had been (so far as the cases in court throw light upon the matter) more frequent of late years. After the first check which the ryots received, the planters have steadily taken the initiative. Twenty-five thousand notices of enhancement of rent have been issued in this zillah, and the close of the year only in April prevented the number from being greater. At the present moment it is hard to say what is the limit of the number threatened; 70,000 or 80,000 is a low estimate.

10. An exceedingly great number of suits for ejectment have been instituted. The Ootbundee tenure of the ryots has been challenged and defined in the courts with a precision hitherto unknown, and the definition has been adverse to the ryot, who has learnt that he has not, nor can ever have, any rights of occupancy on such lands. Under this definition many thousands of begahs of chur land, on which ryots have squatted for a generation, have been swept clear; and at the least, 2,000 or 3,000 ryots, in all parts of the country, have been ejected from the land they believed to be theirs in a certain sense.

11. A tactical mistake has been committed by almost every planter, which has, perhaps, done more to encourage the ryots than any other single cause within the present question. In suing for arrears of rent nothing has been omitted from the claim which could possibly be hoped for in the decree. All the petty little ceases and abwabs that have long been levied were included, and in almost every instance thrown out. Late decisions have pronounced every instance inadmissible. The value of this discovery to the ryots must be measured not by its novelty, for it is no new discovery to them, but by the fact that, coming at this time, the decision of the question is practically final, which it has never been before. Again, the power of the zemindar over waste land has been enforced to an extent which is unprecedented; and partly in pursuance of the general design, and partly in consequence of the law of limitation, an attack on a large scale has been made upon the Lakhiraj holders. The whole of the ryots have been alarmed, too, by the determination generally come to by every planter to measure his estate, and by the rigorous precision with which this has been carried out wherever possible.

12. Then, again, the zemindaree accounts have been examined, and large sums have been claimed in court for arrears of rent, some of such old standing as to make the interest many times larger than the original sum.

13. It appears to me that all this constitutes a tremendous reform, to undertake which immediately after such a desperate struggle showed great confidence in the power of the law, such as the existence of the heavy arrears exhibited alone need not shake. I do not see how it was to be expected that so great a step should succeed, under such circumstances, without very heavy arrears. Their existence must be weighed against the progress made in the revision of the system, and the ultimate profit to be expected.

13½. By the ryots a considerable reform has been insisted on, but in a loose and desultory manner, and with only partial success. They have held and are still holding out against the demand for abwabs and cesses, and have succeeded. They have held and are still holding out against a claim of the zemindar to measure with a rope of his own choosing; they have required that in measuring the Amcen should act, not independently, but in accord with themselves. In some cases this has been conceded, but not always. Lastly, they have strenuously struggled for the concession of reliable receipts, but rarely with success as yet. Before several of the deputy-collectors there are still large numbers of ex-parte cases which owe their origin entirely to this difficulty. In one instance, after calling on a deputy-collector to inquire into the origin of these cases, he sent one up; the written declaration of the ryots, that they preferred paying costs under decrees in this way to paying the money to the Gomastah. They stated as their reason that they could not trust him because they were kept out of their receipts too long. Another point of minor importance for which they are struggling (though going the wrong way about it) is for a separation in the receipts between moneys paid on account of different tenures. They have discovered the protection against the sale that is given to one class of tenures above another, and require the receipts to be distinct accordingly. I have not heard whether this has been granted.

14. Looking at all these questions, and at the importance of them, I cannot wonder at the severity of the contest for their settlement. What appears to me more worthy of consideration is that, after such a mass of litigation, they are not yet all settled.

15. This I believe to be the real cause of the perpetuation of the contest, and I believe that the fault lies neither with the planter nor with the ryot, but that it is to be sought partly in the fact that the authority of the legal decisions of the deputy collectors has been weak compared to the interest at stake, and partly in the fact that sufficient time has not been allowed for them to take hold.

16. The former is the main reason I believe. The judicial authority of the courts has been frittered away in the sprinkling of deputy collectors over the country moving about from place to place. The double appeal, partly to the collector and partly to the judge, puzzles the ryot. Under present circumstances it is particularly unfortunate that such a divided jurisdiction should exist. The employment under pressure of suits for a short time, of the moonsiffs at another of the Small Cause Courts, and the distinction in the powers allowed to different courts, have introduced an element of uncertainty, not only in the conduct, but also in the decisions of suits, which the ordinary process of appeal has not sufficed to rectify, and which no amount of supervision within my power has ever enabled me to hear of in time to rectify.

17. This confusion of authorities has been increased very greatly by the appointment of an additional collector, whose decisions do not always agree with those which I had passed. They are more carefully considered, and, therefore, sounder, and doubt is thus thrown upon points which were partially settled.

18. And not only are the people restricted with the cumbrousness of the machine which undertakes to decide their cases, but there is no one officer in the district who is in a position to see the whole state of affairs at one view. The two Appellate Courts see each as much as I do, but neither of them, nor I, can properly see the whole, or judge of the relation of the parts to each other.

19. What the district at present requires is, I believe, the appointment of an additional judge, to officiate also as additional collector, who should have the sole and entire control of all deputy collectors whose cases he should choose to take up. In the double capacity of judge and collector he would alone decide all appeals. What is wanted is a single head, and all authority combined in that head. Influence cannot, I believe, exist without authority; and I may be pardoned if I say, that even an exceptional appointment without positive power is inferior in efficacy to an appointment of recognised power specially created to meet an emergency.

20. Because the judge so appointed is a judicial officer I do not see why he should not consider the cases instituted as indicative of the requirement of the district, and direct their arrangement accordingly. A single appellate officer could do what is impossible now, arrange the order of the original trials and of appeals to himself in such system as to combine the strictness of individual decisions which the general force of executive orders. By receiving constant reports from the deputy collectors, beside the appeals and ordinary references, he could make his authority felt all over the district in a very short time; and if he were, generally, vested with that peculiar power which it is proposed should be given to the special commissioner, of "directing the institution of a suit," I think he would combine all the authority which is necessary to a settlement of the rent question in this district.

21. But here I venture to repeat my impression that any attempt to arbitrate any question, before pronouncing a judicial decision, will totally destroy the influence of the judge. He must hold a strict hand over the deputy-collectors, and not allow them to do amateur arbitration, or to receive any overtures for the purpose, though their reports to the judge should supply him with all information they may have. To ascertain what are the points in dispute on which he should raise issues, the judge should confine himself to receiving written petitions, and calling upon the opposite party for an explanation on such points complained of as he may see fit to treat in this manner, which, of course, would only be points of general interest, in which it is alleged that a legal right has been violated or refused. He should exercise this power with the utmost discretion, refusing to raise issues which appeared either frivolous or out of place, or even those which would involve reforms which (just themselves) could be very wisely deferred for a time; this of course without any bar to the right of individuals to claim such reforms by the institution of suits themselves. But, above all, this power should be exercised without the slightest pretence of amicable interference, but solely from a clear perception that, if the issue be not taken in hand in this manner, it must come to a head in a mass of litigation. If a few issues be treated in this way and thus settled, a refusal to treat others so will have a real effect in stopping the discussion of them.

22. He should, I think, be stationary, or at least move about slowly, and only to head quarters of sub-divisions. He should not, I conceive, at any moment abandon the character of a court of high power. His progressions should be somewhat ceremonial rather than the reverse. The courts of the deputy-collectors, too, should be made much more dignified than they are at present. Lastly, he should remain in office for two years certain.

23. But, besides this, I beg to press still the necessity for a penal law for the withholding of rent, and for a reconsideration of the measurement law. In the hands of a judge, whose whole attention is given to the rent question, and whose control over the deputy collectors would be effective, a law for the imposition of a fine of 25 per cent. could never lead to injustice. It might be made co-temporary with his appointment, and co-extensive. It would give notable weight to his appointment if simultaneously published, and would be only a fair balance to the exercise of his power of aiding the ryots to a correct solution of questions which they now wish decided, but the decision of which they are too ignorant to enforce except by passive resistance.

24. I do not overlook one result of such an appointment as this. It would recognise officially the existence of a rent question to be made at last taken in hand, judicially tried, and decided in a special manner. It would amount to an admission that the ryots have forced on a reform of the zemindaree system, and thus the example of Nuddea might have had a more rapid spread of the question than is convenient.

25. I have no fear of this result; but even if I had, I do not think it possible to refer the settlement of the question of zemindaree reform in this district without actual injustice. It has gone too far already; the position which the ryots have already—small though their gain be compared to the advance of the planters, is to them one of inestimable value, and has already given them the greater part of what they had a right to expect. It is a position strictly within law, and no measure that I can conceive short of actual repression can prevent their advance practically, to the full limits of the law. It is, I think, better to admit this at once, and then to consider the consequences, the principal of which is that the power of the zemindars will also be exercised to the full.

26. It is, I firmly believe, to the simple attempt of each party to attain these two ends without reference to each others' interest that the continuance of this dispute is owing. However weary they may be, the struggle will never end till all the main points are clearly established and recognised, not in theory only, but in practice. The example to neighbouring districts will come sooner or later, and it cannot, I think, be put off more than a year. Meanwhile, it is the manner in which it is being conducted, the heat of feeling that is kept up, which is doing the real mischief. Of the result itself I have no fear that it will lead to a too rapid spread of the question, for, on the contrary, I think ryots must be peculiarly the sufferers in the eyes of their neighbours. On this ground I think a speedy and decisive settlement of the whole matter most desirable. The sooner it is really known and practically exemplified, what are the relations which the Act guarantees and can enforce, the better for every one. Great though the hardship must be to those who set the examples, I think it would be cheaply endured on the whole; and, as I said before, I think that the greater part of it has already been borne, and that there is no possibility of avoiding the remainder.

27. Before closing this report I think it right to draw attention to the present state of the indigo question. Its influence on the rent question cannot be ignored. It is wrong to say that the latter stands entirely on its own merits, while the former continues to be an object with one of the parties. Putting aside all questions of price and of system, it cannot be denied that, as a body, the planters are still endeavouring to induce the ryots to take advances. It can hardly be said that those ryots who think of doing so treat the question on sound commercial principles. Ease, not profit, is the consideration, and it would be mere affectation on my part to say otherwise. The terms offered may or may not afford a handsome profit; but as a body the ryots do not look at the offer from this aspect, and no argument can alter this fact. It may be that the Association treats their landholding and their commercial interests on totally different grounds. But the ryot is not in a position to do this. His commercial transactions are nil. His landed interests are all in all to him. The planter zemindar derives profit in two ways, the ryot can only do it in one way, and, in considering his conduct, it is unreasonable to require that his relations to the zemindar only should be considered, and the existence of simultaneous relations with the planter be ignored. If it were the fact that all these relations should have been broken off and put out of sight, there would of course be no ground for my argument. But it is not so, and the simple omission on the part of the Association to refer to its existence is sufficient to show that its extinction cannot be asserted. The reverse is rather the fact, for there are clear symptoms that the ryots are yielding at last to the necessity of their case, and are inclined to take advances, or otherwise just about to ask for them. That any interference should be exercised to prevent a culmination of this tendency is too absurd an idea, I hope, to be attributed to it. Any measure which shall tend to facilitate it, otherwise than by rectifying what is wrong in the present machinery of the law, or deficient in the law itself, will not only wear an appearance of injustice, but I am thoroughly convinced that it will fail of its real object, and will weaken the influence of the Government by its failure. ## THE INDIAN COURT.

WE shall not yet attempt to describe the many beautiful objects laid out in the Indian Court of the International Exhibition. Our present object is simply to bear witness to the admirable taste and judgment evinced in the arrangement of the many valuable specimens of Oriental art that are there displayed to view. It is no light matter to unpack some hundreds of cases in the midst of the direst confusion, to assort their contents, and finally place those so that each article shall tell its own tale. But this arduous task has been most successfully accomplished by Dr. Forbes Watson and Mr. Moore, and on the opening day no Court in the whole building was in a more advanced state than that which represented the natural and artificial products of British India. Great praise, therefore, is due to these gentlemen for their intelligent and indefatigable exertions, and loud and emphatic were the expressions of admiration uttered by hundreds of visitors as they gazed with delight on the priceless shawls of Cashmere, the gorgeous scarves of Delhi, and the matchless brocades of Benares. Others were attracted by the jewellery, and were naturally surprised by the close imitation of European designs. For others, again, the case of arms possessed greater fascinations, while not a few preferred the Punjab silks, the Calcutta needle-work, or the steel inlaid with gold from Goojerat. Though not so pleasing to the eye, the large collection of natural products may, possibly, prove the most useful from the economic point of view, and it may easily be imagined that many an eye will be anxiously directed towards the specimens of Indian cotton. In future numbers of this journal we shall enter fully into details, but when such high compliments are lavished upon those who were not ready on Thursday last, it would have been the height of injustice not to have alluded to the praiseworthy achievements of Dr. Watson and Mr. Moore, and their intelligent and hard-working assistants.

ROMANISM IN INDIA.

Two very remarkable addresses were sent to Europe by the last mail from Madras—the one to the Pope, and the other to her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. It would be a very comical, were it not an exceedingly serious, matter that the present occupant of the dilapidated See of Rome should have had the insolence, and the late King of Portugal the supreme impertinence to conclude a Concordat with reference to the ecclesiastical patronage of British India. We desire to speak of Pio Nono with the piteous forbearance usually exhibited to "unprotected females" when venturing out of their depth in the rushing stream of every-day life. But it is a little too absurd that this poor, obstinate, feeble-minded priest, on the verge of the grave, and with his temporal power dependant on foreign bayonets, should so far forget himself as to hand over the patronage of the Romanist Church in British India to the sovereignty of a petty State whose very existence is due to British valour and magnanimity. It would be idle, of course, to look for gratitude from any nation for whose benefit we have lavished both blood and money, but it might, perhaps, have been expected as a matter of taste that a monarch allied by blood to our own Royal Family would have hesitated to offer an insult to his benefactors and kinsfolk. However insignificant may be the influence of Portugal in temporal matters in time of peace, it is quite possible that in the event of internal disturbances in India, or of a war between England and an ally of that power, grave inconveniences might arise from this otherwise ridiculous Concordat. And what will the Romanised natives think of British supremacy if they find it incapable of preventing themselves from being bestowed like a flock of sheep upon the sovereign of a strip of sea-board? As to Pio Nono, the world has been too long accustomed to his puerilities to be surprised at any eccentricity he may think proper to perpetrate. In all times the bishops of Rome have sought by fair means and foul to extend their spiritual domination, in the hope of improving their temporal income, and it is unquestionably no new thing to find them interfering with the rights and prerogatives of independent potentates. But it speaks well for the Romanist inhabitants of British India, whether Europeans or Natives, that they prefer their allegiance to Queen Victoria to the reverence they owe the Pope. It seems that until the year 1835 the Romanists of the Madras Presidency were utterly unprovided with religious teaching. Portuguese was little understood, and British clergymen were unknown.

"Little instruction," say Sir Charles Wood's memorialists, "was then to be had from books or from the pulpit in the Portuguese language, and none at all in the English language, though the latter was the chief medium through which we sought our livelihood, and was then very generally cultivated by all classes of the community, though not so extensively used, nor so well understood, as at the present time; a small English prayer-book, casually offered for sale, was known to have been eagerly bought up for ten times its original price. Catholic gentlemen of undoubted faith and attachment to the Catholic Church felt ashamed to avow their connection with the then existing state of things, contenting themselves with the performance of such exercises of religion as might be done in private."

Petitions were accordingly forwarded both to the Pope and to the British Parliament, and priests of the latter nation were at once despatched to the East.

"Portuguese priests," continue the petitioners, "are much more unsuited to our wants now than they were in 1834, on account of the rapid progress of all classes of the community, in the knowledge and use of the English language during the last twenty-seven years, and the corresponding neglect of the Portuguese language. Out of 20,000 persons who profess the Catholic religion in our presidency town—viz., 16,260 natives, and 3,740 Europeans and East Indians, exclusive of the garrison of Fort St. George, not more than 920 East Indians adhere to the Goanese priests; they take no interest in the Portuguese language, whilst all—even these and the native adherents of the Goanese (about 2,960 in number) cultivate the English language to the utmost of their abilities and opportunities. It may not be out of place to state that in all British India, out of an aggregate Catholic population of 883,165 souls, the adherents of the Portuguese priests amount at the present day to 91,599."

The British Government has lost no time in notifying to the Portuguese Ambassador in London that they would not recognise the King of Portugal as the protector of the Romish Church in British India; but something more than this must be done to convince both the Pope and the Portuguese monarch that the time has fled, never to return, when the Bishop of Rome could parcel out the kingdoms of the earth by a Bull. Probably the best course would be to induce Portugal to give up whatever territory or influence she may still possess in India in consideration of an equivalent elsewhere. In any case it is absolutely impossible that an effete and imbecile priest, three centuries behind the age, should be permitted to barter the spiritual peace and welfare of well-nigh a million of British subjects for the sake of such miserable advantages as he can obtain from a third-rate sovereign, whose only asylum in time of danger is the deck of a British man-of-war. Whatever may be their shortcomings in other respects, the present Ministry are by no means likely to humour the untenable pretensions of the Papal See, nor do we for a moment anticipate that this ludicrous Concordat will be carried into execution. The very attempt, however, proves that the Romish Church has lost nothing of its aggressive characteristics, and that, however low it may be reduced, it is ever looking around, not merely for a door of escape from present troubles, but for the opportunity of future aggrandisement and increase of wealth.

THE RENT QUESTION.

THE Indigo Question has assumed a different phase, and now obstructs the path of Government in the form of a Rent Question. In other words, the European planters, finding it impossible to cultivate indigo without imminent risk to person and property, have been compelled to enhance their rents in order to obtain a fair return for their capital invested in land. So long as their tenants were willing to supply a certain quantity of plant at a fixed price, they were content with an almost nominal rent, and even that was allowed to fall into arrears. But now that the mischievous interference of the Bengal Government has destroyed their legitimate calling and occupation, there is no choice left to them but to insist upon their rights as ordinary landlords. Naturally enough the ryots demur to paying more than they have hitherto done, and invent all manner of excuses for declining to comply with the increased demands of the zemindars' agents. The consequence is that numerous ejectments have already taken place, and very many more will follow, unless the enhanced rentals are quietly agreed to. In one district alone at least seventy thousand notices have been served, and it is much to be feared that the ryots will combine to offer a passive resistance to their European landlords. Their object is plain enough. By keeping back the payment of their rents they hope to incapacitate the planters for meeting their own liabilities, and thus force them to reduce their claims or encounter inevitable ruin. It is obviously impossible to recover by legal process the value of each insignificant holding, however large may be the sum they amount to in the aggregate. The costs and the annoyance attending the institution of such suits deter the planters from having recourse to a remedy that only aggravates the evil from which they have already suffered so much; while those who do venture to claim the protection of the law have little reason to congratulate themselves on the result of their public spirit. The victory may be theirs, but the advantages rest with the defeated, for it is just as easy to draw blood from a stone, or to rob a Highlander of the garment he does not wear, as to extract money from a ryot against his will. This, then, is the state of things in the province of Bengal after a century of British rule. There is no standing ground for the conquering race, no security for their capital, and scarcely safety for themselves. It is now upwards of twelve months since the late Governor-general in Council instructed the Bengal Government to depute a Special Commissioner into the disturbed districts, who, "uninterrupted by any other duties whatever," would "be able to devote his whole time and attention to the adjustment of the differences existing between the landholders and their ryots, which it is impossible that either the Commissioner of the Division or the District Officers could do with a proper regard to the many functions which devolve upon them." This primary and immediate object of the proposed Commission was, whether inadvertently or purposely, overlooked by the Lieutenant-governor, who contented himself with deputing two officers to impress upon the ryots the necessity of paying their rents, and to investigate the actual causes of the estrangement that had taken place between the European planters and the native peasantry. There was, of course, no trouble in tracing this ill-feeling to the disputes arising out of the unprofitable culture of indigo, and in some villages the ryots were induced to pay, or promise to pay, what was due to their landlords. In this manner Lord Canning's instructions were fulfilled to the letter: but certainly not in the spirit which they were intended to convey. The adjustment of differences, in the sense of legal claims, was no doubt partially effected, but this could have been done equally well by the deputy collectors to whom such disputes were, after all, usually referred. It must have been perfectly clear to Sir J. P. Grant that Lord Canning meant something more than this mere mechanical discharge of ordinary duties. There was no need of two, or even of one Special Commissioner, to tell the ryots they must pay their lawful debts; or, if such a necessity did exist, it was a disgrace to the Bengal Government that it did not spontaneously adopt measures for the due protection of property and the prevention of fraud. The Lieutenant-governor, however, declares that no other interpretation could be given to the phrase "adjustment of differences" than the settlement of arrears of rent, and doggedly insists that the Special Commissioners fully and explicitly acted up to the Viceroy's original orders, and that had they attempted to do more than they did they would have done what was expressly forbidden by those orders. He admits, indeed, that "the 'first,' the 'principal,' and the 'immediate' object which the Government of India had in the appointment of the Commissioners was plainly missed;" but this he coolly attributes to "the wording of the orders," which was "such that to all persons not otherwise cognisant of what was the main object actually in the mind of his Excellency in Council when penning the orders, all the objects of those orders must have appeared to have been fully carried out by the labours of the Special Commissioners." What sort of answer would Sir J. P. Grant himself return to a subordinate who should presume to address him in this manner? What manner of treatment would the unfortunate official receive who should venture to indulge in the sarcastic tone employed by the Lieutenant-governor throughout his lengthy appeal for the reversal of the censure passed upon him by his disappointed superior? It is true that he has some reason to complain of the delay that occurred after the receipt of Messrs. Morris and Montresor's reports before the Governor-general decided upon recording his marked disapprobation of the manner in which his instructions had been evaded and rendered nugatory. But this cannot be held as any excuse for the slightly-veiled tone of disrespect with which he addresses her Majesty's Viceroy. Very likely Sir John may now be correct in saying that, if another Commission is appointed, it will be necessary to issue very precise and definite instructions, as "the matter of difference is too substantial, and of too vital importance to the permanent interests of the parties to be blown away by the common places of reconciliation, however ably and sincerely impressed upon them." It may be so now, but it does not follow that "the common places of reconciliation" would have been no more than an idle breath had they been tried a year ago. Besides, it is not "common places" that Lord Canning proposed to try. He has himself clearly and emphatically explained what were his wishes and intentions. He desired that a man of mark, of real force of character, and familiarly conversant with native habits and modes of thought and speech, should be sent as an apostle of peace to allay angry feelings on both sides: and while persuading the planters to exercise patience and forbearance in the enforcement of their rights, to impress upon the ryots the necessity of fulfilling their engagements, and of showing ready obedience to the law. Whether or not it is now too late to have recourse to any such exceptional means for restoring order and prosperity to the fertile districts of Lower Bengal is a question we shall not pretend to answer; but the experiment was certainly worth trying twelve months ago.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 28.

LOCAL INDIAN ARMIES.

Colonel SYKES put the following questions to the Secretary of State for India:—"Whether officers of the local armies of India were liable to be removed against their consent from the regiments to which they belong, and to be sent to any station for the performance of general duty; whether compensation would be granted to officers so taken from their regiments and sent to general duty for the loss of regimental, troop, or company command allowances; whether compensation would be given to officers who have subscribed to regimental retiring funds, in the full confidence of their subscriptions being returned to them on their own retirement; and whether the East India Company's late European Artillery and Engineers have become integral portions of the Royal Regiments of Artillery and Engineers respectively, with the advantages of seniority, succession, augmentation, &c.?" Since the conversion of regular regiments of the Indian local armies into irregulars, an officer who had come home on furlough, on his return to India, and reporting himself to the Adjutant-general, might be ordered on general duty. He might be sent to a station where there was no duty for him to do, while his own regiment was elsewhere, and only four or five officers with it. The second part of his question was, whether any compensation would be granted to officers so taken from their duty. The right hon. gentleman had stated that the House did not guarantee allowances, but only the gradations of rank. The hon. and gallant member then read the clause in the Act referring to pensions and allowances, and providing that they should be maintained. With regard to the regimental retiring funds, a practice had prevailed for many years of junior officers making a purse in order to buy out their seniors, and this practice had been permitted by the Court of Directors. The officers who had not retired when the amalgamation of the Royal and Indian armies took place lost the large sum which they would have received on their retirement under the old system, and he wanted to know whether the Government would give them some compensation.

Sir C. WOOD said the hon. and gallant gentleman was one of those who pressed upon the House the necessity of reducing the expenses of India. The great source of expenditure was the military expenditure, and if regiments were to be kept up merely in order that captains might have allowances for being in command of companies reduction would be impossible. The effect of the interpretation which the hon. and gallant gentleman put upon the words of the Act would be this—that until the youngest cadet had gone through all the grades, and received the allowances due to each grade, as they stood before any reduction was contemplated, no reduction of the Indian army could take place. Orders had been given to reduce several native regiments, and the consequence was that many officers could no longer have the command of companies or the allowances due to officers who were in command of companies. When an English regiment was disbanded, the officers were put on half-pay. But in the case of these Indian officers they were kept on full pay, and their promotion was not interrupted. The Government were not prepared to give allowances for commands to officers who were not in command of regiments. As to the performance of duty, Indian officers, like officers in the English army and navy, would be bound to serve where their services would best promote the interests of the public. As to compensation for subscriptions to retiring funds, they had always been told that the great merit of the Indian army was that there was no system of purchase. It turned out that there was a system of purchase in the Indian army, and he believed that the substantial injury to the Indian army would arise from the officers being deprived of the benefit of that system of purchase which they disclaimed. No doubt, a certain loss would be entailed upon some Indian officers by the extinction of an irregular and illegal system of purchase; but the Government had endeavoured to mitigate the evil by liberal offers on retirement. With regard to the last question, the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Artillery were engaged as the Royal Artillery, except that they were not liable to be moved out of India without their own consent, and no change was made in the pay, promotions, and pensions.

Colonel GILPIN said that, as to purchase in the Indian army being illegal, it was sanctioned by a minute of the Court of Directors. It was perfectly right not to give allowances for expenses out of pocket to captains of companies who had ceased to hold commands. But the Government might consider the propriety of increasing the amount of bonus on retirement to certain officers who had passed the best part of their lives in the service.

Sir C. WOOD explained that purchase in the Indian army had been declared illegal by a court of law, but he was aware it was as common as payments in excess of the regulation price of commissions in this country.

Colonel SYKES insisted that purchase was legalised by the order of 29th of November, 1837.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—May 2.

THE TAEPINGS.

Colonel SYKES asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether, as the military defence of Shanghai had been ordered by her Majesty's Government, and joint expeditions of French, English, and Tartars appeared to have recently taken place against the Taepings, provision had been made to prevent the Tartar Civil Governor (Taoutai) of Shanghai from executing prisoners taken in conflict with the Taepings. The hon. member read extracts from journals and letters from China, and urged the necessity of interference to prevent the cruelties practised on Taeping prisoners by the Imperial forces, as described in these communications.

Mr. LAYARD said an inquiry had been made by the naval and military authorities at Shanghai, and they were satisfied that the persons executed were pirates and robbers. The military measures adopted at Shanghai were strictly defensive, and as long as English and French officers were engaged in them the hon. member might rely on it no unnecessary cruelty would be inflicted on prisoners. The Government had sent out instructions that no acts of inhumanity were to be permitted.

Mr. WHITE believed that Government was drifting into another China war. What it had done had provoked the hostility of a powerful party in China, and would not prevent the calamities of the rebellion. He did not participate in the gallant member's feelings of affection for the Taepings; but they certainly cherished a most profound respect for British power, and in the instance of a near relative of his had allowed a British subject to leave their lines in perfect security. They respected British property and allowed trade to be carried on with facility. He thought that the joint occupation by the English and French forces was detrimental to British interests. He would suggest that they should declare Shanghai a free port, and leave the Imperialists and the rebels to collect dues on exports and imports passing into or from their lines respectively. The object was one of great importance, and must on an early day be more fully discussed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE JAPANESE MISSION.—On Friday last the Japanese Ambassadors had an interview with Earl Russell, by appointment, at the Foreign-office. On coming to this country they had at once notified their arrival to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and asked him to appoint a time to receive them. Lord Russell as promptly returned an answer, fixing Friday at three o'clock, and accordingly the three Envoys, with the Vice governor, two of the chief officers of their suite, and an interpreter, by whom they are accompanied to England, with Mr. Macdonald, an attaché of the English Legation in Japan, who is specially deputed to take charge of the Mission, paid the Secretary of State an official visit. An autograph letter from the Tycoon to the Queen had been previously forwarded to her Majesty, as had also to Earl Russell a communication addressed to his lordship by the two Ministers for Foreign Affairs in their own country. The Ambassadors went from Claridge's hotel, in Brook-street, where they are staying, to the Foreign-office, in private carriages. The visit was purely complimentary, and there were present at it, besides Earl Russell, Mr. Layard and Mr. Hammond. In the course of the conversation the Secretary of State told them that he had presented the letter of the Tycoon to her Majesty, and they expressed their grateful sense of the considerate kindness of his lordship for having made arrangements enabling them to witness the ceremony of opening the International Exhibition on Thursday, with which they were greatly delighted. On leaving the Foreign-office they were driven round

Hyde Park, and then returned to their quarters in Brook-street, over which a very handsome flag now floats, and which has been displayed at their special request. The material is of white silk, with a large red disc in the centre, intended to represent the rising sun, their national emblem. It may be well to state that the mission consists of thirty-six persons in all—namely, the three Ambassadors, a Vice-governor, a confidential adviser, eighteen officers, and fourteen servants, besides Mr. Macdonald (not Major, by the way). The principal Minister is a man of fifty-two, and the two others are some twenty years younger. The first two, besides being Envoys, are Governors of provinces in their native country, and the third holds rank there equivalent to an Under-Secretary of State with us. Their primary and ostensible object in visiting Europe is to urge upon the Governments with whom they have treaty powers the gradual and careful opening of the ports of Japan which their Government have stipulated to open for commercial purposes, in preference to an attempt to develop with anything like inconsiderate haste relations of that kind with the Japanese, which might possibly lead to disturbance, and so defeat or unnecessarily retard the ends which enlightened men on all sides have in view. For this purpose they have been empowered to treat with the Governments of France, England, Holland, Prussia, Russia, and Portugal; but they are, over and above, strongly animated with the desire to see as much as possible of the arsenals, camps, dockyards, and the various manufacturing processes in those countries, which they will visit in turn, France now excepted, returning there, however, to embark on their voyage homeward. They will stay with us for about a month, and will visit, among other places, the arsenal at Woolwich, the camp at Aldershot, and several of the manufacturing districts. They have brought with them a number of costly presents for her Majesty, which will be shown in the Exhibition, as will also many of their national products, especially minerals and specimens of their native industry. It may be mentioned that the ambassadors have accepted an invitation to attend the Civil Service Volunteer ball, at Willis's-rooms, this night.—Times.

AILANTHUS SILK.—Lady Dorothy Nevill has published, in an abridged form, a translation of an account given by M. Guérin Ménéville of a species of silkworm, which has been sent to Europe by the Abbé Fantoni, a Piedmontese missionary in China. These worms feed upon the leaves of the alanthus—the tree of heaven, as it has been called—which will grow upon any soil, and flourish well in towns or by the seaside; in a plantation of above fifteen thousand in France not one died, and in England it is equally hardy. The worms make an elastic opening in the cocoon for the exit of the moth. As yet the cocoons have not been spun off in a continuous thread, owing to their filling with water when placed in the basin, and the thread being broken by the consequent weight, but there is no doubt that a remedy for this will soon be found, and among the fabrics made from the alanthus silk, and sent over by Father Fantoni from China, there are some made with silk in one continuous thread. At present, however, these cocoons are treated like the mulberry cocoons, and yield floss silk, which is manufactured in France under the name of gallette or fantaisie, and of which there is an immense consumption. Mixed with thread and wool, it is largely employed in manufacturing fancy stuffs. The strength of this silk is immense, and to this is attributable the great durability of the Indian foulards, which are composed exclusively of it. Father Lucarville says, "The silk produced by the alanthus lasts double the time of the mulberry worm, does not spot so easily, and washes like linen." Dr. Sacc, the eminent professor of chymistry at Wesserling, speaking of the castor oil silk, says, "One fact which diminishes the value of this silk is its brownness, which prevents its being used for clear colours; this disappears completely with the silk of the alanthus worm, with which I would engage myself to produce white silk. That clever chymist and weaver, M. de Jongh, finds that the gloss of the alanthus silk far surpasses any of the other known kinds of bourre de soi." The habits of the worm and the whole process are described in these pages with remarkable clearness; and Lady Dorothy Nevill, who at Dangstein, near Petersfield, has made the first trial of the alanthus worm in England, and has succeeded with it, has given all requisite information for those who in this country are disposed to undertake this new industry, concerning which she is warranted in expressing the hope that it may be destined to prove a fresh source of wealth for this country, as it already is for France.—Times.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA.—A meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, was held on Wednesday, Mr. T. A. Mitchell in the chair, when the report was adopted unanimously, and a dividend declared for the past half year at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. It was stated that the balance-sheet was taken at an adverse period, the securities being valued at the comparatively low prices of the day, the 31st of December last, and the funds, &c., in India at the then unfavourable exchange. With the view of adding to the stability of the bank, the directors have resolved to recommend the setting aside of a further sum of £5,000 to the reserve, which will then stand at £15,000. Business during the past half-year has been rather unfavourable. The present reduction in the dividend is due to the adverse state of the China exchange, partly owing to the Taeping rebellion, and partly to the state of trade created by the war in America. The last mail, however, brings indications of improvement, and there is a prospect in future of a great expansion of trade both in China and India. The deposits, whence the chief profits of a bank are derived, are now double the amount at which they stood last year. With regard to the liability of £20,000 incurred at Bombay by a former manager contrary to his instructions, the directors have counsel's opinion that in case of loss they can recover against the guarantee society the £5,000 security given by that officer. The parties, however, on whose account the liability was undertaken, remain solvent, and probably no loss will accrue.

THE BOMBAY GAS COMPANY (LIMITED).—The best considered new undertaking that has been brought forward during the week is, beyond question, the Bombay Gas Company (Limited). The scene of operations is a most important one, Bombay being the seat of the Government of the Presidency, and possessing a population of no less than 700,000 souls. As the great cotton port of India, its commercial importance must likewise daily increase. The Government has expressed its readiness to deal with the company liberally, and encourage it in every possible way. As soon as the Eastern coal-fields have been developed, the operations of a company of this kind may be conducted at a large additional profit. In the present instance the direction is of a satisfactory and practical character. The capital is £250,000, of which the first issue will be £100,000. The shares were quoted to-day  $\frac{3}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  prem. The undertaking has been favourably received, and the applications are stated to be both numerous and respectable.—From Money Market Review.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—The annual meeting of the Assam Company was held on the 2nd instant, Mr. H. M. Kemshead in the chair, when a report was presented stating that the crop of the past season amounted to 933,850 lb., being 53,698 lb. in excess of the preceding year, but 39,112 lb. less than the estimate. The crop of the current season, after allowing for an error in the system of calculation, will, it is believed, be at least 1,000,000 lb. About seven-eighths of the produce of 1860 has been sold, and the net value of the whole crop is estimated at £70,815. Owing chiefly to the general quality of the tea not having proved so good as in previous years, the average price has been 1s. 7 $\frac{1}{4}$  per lb., being a decline of  $\frac{1}{4}$ d. A great improvement, however, is looked for in the tea of 1861. The additional land brought into cultivation in Assam during the last season is 52 porahs, and in Cachar 4570 acres. The cost of establishing the latter plantations is wholly defrayed out of income, but, as the gardens have now commenced to yield some return, they are expected soon to become not only self-supporting, but to leave a profit in aid of the dividends. The experimental agency for obtaining labour having proved unsuccessful, it has been discontinued, and the former plan of employing native agents has been reverted to. Much competition has been experienced from the demand by other planters, as well as through foreign and colonial emigration. The net profit for the season of 1860 is estimated at £21,530, out of which a dividend has been fixed at 10 per cent., clear of income-tax. Tea cultivation in Assam is stated to be a rapidly extending enterprise. The new measure for the sale of waste lands in India is expected to prove of the greatest importance to the interests of the company. After some discussion the report was adopted.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The steamer with the outward India and China mail, on the 4th, took £176,337 in specie, distributed as follows:—£400 in gold for Malta, £31,500 in gold for Alexandria, £4,773 in gold for Madras, and £500 in gold and £139,104 in silver for China and the Straits.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

INDIA OFFICE, 21st April, 1862.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE for INDIA
in COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE.—

That, until further notice, sealed Tenders will be received at the Chief Cashier's Office, at the Bank of England, up to Two o'clock on the FIRST WEDNESDAY in each month, commencing with the ensuing month of MAY, for BILLS of EXCHANGE, payable on demand, to be drawn on the several Governments in India, at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, for the sum of Rupees 30,00,000 in each month, of which not more than Rupees 7,50,000 will be drawn on the Government of Bombay, and Rupees 2,50,000 on that of Madras.

Power is reserved to issue Bills for any smaller amount than Rupees 30,00,000 in any one month, and to carry over the difference to the succeeding months.

No Tender is to be for a sum less than Rupees 10,000, and one-eighth of a penny per Rupee is to be the smallest fraction tendered.

Each Tender must specify the rate of Exchange at which the applicant is prepared to purchase a Bill, or any number of Bills, and the lowest amount of any one Bill is to be Rupees 5,000.

The Secretary of State will not be bound to accept any Tender, and reserves the right of accepting the whole or any portion of a Tender.

In the event of two or more Tenders being equal, and the amount remaining to be allotted not being sufficient to supply both or all, the Bank will be instructed to allot ratably.

On the day following the receipt of the Tenders at the Bank, the parties will, on application at the Chief Cashier's Office, be informed whether their Tenders have or have not been accepted.

If accepted, the amount of payment must be lodged at the Bank on or before the 15th day of each month.

Those applicants whose Tenders shall have been accepted, will be furnished with a Form to be filled up with the particulars of the Bills required, and the Bills themselves, drawn in Duplicate, will be delivered on the day following the payment.

OFFICES.

Gresham House, Old Broad-street (E.C.).

This Company is established to light the fort and city of Bombay with gas. Bombay has 400 streets, and a population numbering upwards of 700,000 souls. At once the seat of Government of the Presidency, and the entrepot of the vast and extending commerce of Western and Central India, its limits are continually enlarging, and its population and wealth rapidly increasing. Notwithstanding the urgent need for an economical and brilliant light, the public streets and quays are for the most part unlighted, whilst the fort, the bazaars, and shops, the Government offices, the municipal buildings, the gaols, the churches, the barracks and police stations, railway stations, and private houses, have no other light than that obtainable from oil, the cost of which is much greater than that of gas, and has of late years steadily and largely increased.
An urgent and growing necessity, as well as anxiety, therefore, exists for the speedy introduction of the European system of lighting cities and towns by means of gas.

The present Company having been projected to supply this want, has met with great encouragement from the Honourable the Governor and Council of the Presidency, who have testified their desire to see this undertaking speedily carried out by promising a concession of—

1. The power of supplying Bombay with gas.
2. An exclusive privilege for the first twenty-one years.
3. A suitable site for the erection of the necessary works.

The Government have also expressed their "readiness to take from the Company the lights required for Government buildings and premises."

The Honourable the Governor in Council has undertaken "to recommend to the Legislative Council that an enactment be passed for the incorporation of the Company" in India, and Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India, by despatch of 31st of August, 1860, to the Governor in Council, Bombay, has expressed his approval by assenting to the grant by the Legislative Council of an Act of Incorporation for the Company.

The undertaking will be carried out in sections (commencing with the fort, as required by the Government) when and as the demand for gas increases.

The directors calculate on supplying gas to the fort of Bombay (containing about 80,000 inhabitants) within twelve months from the commencement of the work; and they propose to employ a large portion of the firstly raised capital in constructing such of the works as are necessary for lighting this important section of the undertaking. After duly considering the estimates and calculations made by the company's engineer of the probable cost and returns of the enterprise, the directors entertain the fullest confidence that the undertaking will be more than ordinarily remunerative, and consequently that it offers a very desirable field for the investment of both English and native capital. The directors invite attention to the letter of their engineer, Mr. Hawks-

The Shares of the Oriental Gas Company, established to light Calcutta, are now quoted in the public share lists at a premium of from 35 to 50 per cent., although the Company has only recently come into active operation.

Should a sufficient amount of capital not be subscribed to justify the Directors in proceeding with the undertaking, the deposits will be repaid without deduction.

The Shares will be allotted subject to the provisions of the Articles of Association, which may be inspected at the Offices of the Company.

TO THE DIRECTORS OF THE BOMBAY GAS COMPANY (LIMITED).

Gentlemen,—I have very carefully and very minutely inquired into the prospects of this undertaking, and am of opinion that it is capable of yielding a profit of 15 per cent. per annum, of which 10 per cent. may be properly divided amongst the proprietors, and 5 per cent. be appropriated to the reserve and redemption fund, usually formed by companies interested in enterprises of a similar character.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
T. HAWKSLEY, C.E.
30, Great George-street, Westminster, April 17, 1862.

Prospectuses may be obtained at the Brokers of the Company, Messrs. Crosley, Brothers, 30, Cornhill; and at the Offices of the Company, Gresham House, Old Broad-street
(E.C.), where forms for application for Shares may be had.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo, bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Euston Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £330,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Directors of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company differs very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last. With her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospectus of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotels are individual speculations, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily, and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospectus, not for its completeness, or its board, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the annuities of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £10,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of us around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Report as to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Ranmore Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 30,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,
First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,
Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,
Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,
Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

As the public will naturally expect to have some particulars of the bulk of the Capital required for this undertaking, the Directors, after examining the books of the Firm and from other sources of information, believe the following figures to be nearly correct; but the Company will not be bound by them until they have been correctly ascertained:—

|   | Rs.       | £.     |
|---|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                                | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Debet 15 per cent. for Contingencies                  | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|   | 3,82,500  | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                          | 3,50,000  | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                         | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                    | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                 | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, G.s., Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                          | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                  | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                         | 13,800    | 1,380  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                       | 65,500    | 6,550  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnitude of range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sans Souci," the great success of which was the formation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not replace it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Ranmore Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to account on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most important intelligence received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th of April relates to the proclamation of martial law in the Jynteah district. No one is permitted from the first of that month to carry arms on his person, whether defensive or offensive, except the civil and military officers of the Government, or others specially exempted by the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner. Brigadier Showers, Lieut.-col. Richardson, and Major Rowlett have been vested with extraordinary powers for the suppression of "the state of rebellion" which, according to the official Gazette, now exists in Jynteah. Reinforcements have also been forwarded to strengthen their hands.

An impression appears to be gaining ground that the recent disturbances in Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar have been chiefly instigated by Bhootanese emissaries. These troublesome neighbours have likewise fomented a feeling of disquietude among the Thibetans on their frontiers and seem determined to bring down upon themselves condign punishment from the long-forbearing British Government.

We learn by a telegram from Jubal, in anticipation of the next Bombay Mail, that the Persians were masters of Furrah. Should this prove to be true, it is quite clear that Herat has actually fallen, as the former town is one hundred and fifty miles to the eastward towards Candahar. What, then, are we to think of the vigilance of the British Minister at Teheran? That an army of fifty thousand men, adequately provided with cavalry and artillery, could not only be collected, but put in motion without his knowledge, seems scarcely credible on the part of such an able and experienced officer and diplomatist as Sir Henry Rawlinson. And yet Lord Palmerston has positively declared that no official intelligence had been received of the march upon Herat, and added that he himself disbelieved the report. One of two things is clear—either our Minister at Teheran has been sadly negligent of his duties, or the Delhi Gazette's correspondent has been instructed by Dost Mahomed to circulate false news in the hope of obtaining a subsidy from the British Government. But the latter alternative is hard to accept, seeing that the truth would certainly be known before the Dost's demands could be either complied with or rejected. We fear, therefore, that Sir Henry has been completely outwitted—for we may not question the strict veracity of the Premier—and that a Persian army has really violated the Afghan territory.

Another telegram sketches the prominent features of Mr. Laing's financial statement, which appears to have been eminently satisfactory, but on that head we must reserve anything we may have to say until the entire statement is before us. For the present we are content to learn that notwithstanding a large reduction of taxation a considerable surplus is confidently expected.

We invite the attention of our readers to an abridged report of the finding of the Sudder Court in the case of the well-known Zemindar Joykissen Mookerjee, whose evidence was mentioned with special favour in the report of the Indigo Commission. This enlightened and Europeanised gentleman has been convicted of forgery and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, with a fine of £1,000 in commutation of labour in irons. Sir Mor-daunt Wells was not so very far wrong after all.

The third reading of the Red Sea Telegraph Bill passed through the House of Commons on Thursday, May the 8th.

In our last issue we inadvertently spoke of the late Mr. Ritchie as if he still held the appointment of Advocate General. The error was the less excusable that in a former number we announced Mr. Thomas Cowie's promotion to that honourable post. We were also guilty of an oversight in not giving due praise to Mr. Aston, deputy-keeper of the Indian Museum, for his intelligent and indefatigable exertions in the arrangement of the Indian Court in the International Exhibition. We have reason to know that his services were most valuable, and were justly appreciated by his superior, Dr. Forbes Watson.

MR. LAING'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

CALCUTTA, April 16 (via Trieste).

Mr. Laing to-day introduced his Budget, which is highly satisfactory.

The financial year commenced with a deficit of £6,000,000. The present estimates show a surplus of £900,000, although nearly £1,500,000 is to be spent on public works in excess of the estimate for the current year. The revenue of the coming year would amount to £885,000 over the preceding year, if calculated on the same basis of taxation. The military expenditure is reduced to £12,200,000. The surplus is disposed of by increasing the Education grant to £500,000, and by bringing the public assignment up to £4,250,000. The import duties on piece goods and yarns are to be reduced to 5 and 3½ per cent. respectively, with immediate operation.

The Paper-duty is abolished. The rates on beer and claret are reduced one-half, and on tobacco to 20 per cent. ad valorem. The Income-tax is reduced to 2 per cent., and, as regards small incomes, is abolished altogether. The total repeal of the tax is promised at the close of five years from its enactment. The cash balances for the year closed at £17,690,000.

BOMBAY, April 27.

(By TELEGRAPH FROM JUBAL.)

Furrah has been taken by the Persians.

It is stated that Nana Sahib's nephews have been captured in Cashmere. In the Maharajah libel case a verdict has been given for the defendant. Sir Bartle Frere has arrived, and Sir George Clerk has left.

Freight for cotton to Liverpool, 62s. 6d. to 65s.

According to despatches received here Mr. Laing's budget shows a surplus of £1,500,000.

The 2 per cent. tax on small incomes has been abolished.

[A telegraphic error appears to have been made in the summary of Mr. Laing's budget, received via Galle, wherein it was stated that the income-tax had been reduced to 2 per cent.]

CALCUTTA, April 25.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO BOMBAY AND FROM JUBAL.]

OUR COAL FIELDS.

In these days of railway and steam navigation extension in India, when coal is likely to form so important an article of consumption, it becomes an interesting question to consider whether the ascertained coal-fields in this country will be able to supply the increasing demand for this valuable mineral. On 1st January, 1860, there were 634 miles of railway open for traffic; on 1st May, 1861, the total length of line opened was 1,063 miles, and at the end of that year it was considered that it had been increased to 1,353, while it is expected that during the present year the aggregate will not be less than 2,600 miles. It will thus be seen that the question is one of no common import; and, if in addition to the coal fields already known, any other extensive coal formations do exist in this immense peninsula, there is every chance of their being brought to light through the exertions of the Geological Survey, comprising a small but talented body of men, under the superintendence of Mr. T. Oldham, who are slowly, but surely, disclosing the mineral resources of India. Before entering upon a description of the various coal fields at present worked in this country, we may mention that the geology of India had at various times attracted the attention of such men as Voyagey, Newbold, Franklin, and others; but it was not before 1856 that the duties of the Geological Survey of India were systematised and extended. The attention of the geologists, it was directed, should be confined to such tracts as had already been surveyed and mapped, by either the Great Trigonometrical or Revenue Surveys, by which it was considered that an immense saving of time would be effected. In 1858-59, a year in which there was a considerable interruption in the work, the loss by deaths, amounting to nearly one-third of the establishment, the extensive coal field of Ranigunj was submitted to examination; in 1859-60 the coal fields of the Damuda, Adjai, and Kurharbari were examined; in the North-West Provinces an investigation of the lower range of the Himalayas and Siwalik Hills was carried on, and in Madras the Trichinopoly and Pondicherry districts were carefully considered. In 1860-61 in Bengal the whole area between Monghyr and the Gya, alluvial plains in the Behar, Patna, and Shahabad districts, and portions of Bhaugulpore, Tirhoot, Goruckpore and Azimghur were examined. In Central India the Rewah district was submitted to examination, while in Madras the districts of Cuddapah and Kurnool and an examination of a portion of the flanks of the Nilgiri Hills was carried out. In the North-West Provinces, the Siwalik and Sub-Himalayan rocks continued under investigation, and in Pegu the Hemzada district was taken in hand, and resulted in the discovery of several petroleum wells and salt springs.

Such is a brief sketch of the progress made by the Geological Survey during the last few years, and it is a progress which has been reported to be in every way very satisfactory. Of all the coal fields at present known and worked in India, that of Ranigunj, a district in Bengal, distant about 140 miles north-west from Calcutta, is the largest, embracing an area of 500 square miles. So long ago as 1774, coal was known to exist, and was even worked in 1777. Notices of this field were made in 1829, and again in 1831 and 1838, but it was not till 1845 and 1846 that it was carefully examined and mapped. In 1839 the number of maunds of coal imported into Calcutta from Ranigunj was 10,00,000; in 1846 it was 25,00,000. Since the opening of the railway the number of collieries has greatly increased, as additional facilities are thus afforded for transmission to the principal market, and we find that in 1860 there were no less than forty-two collieries, producing on an average a yearly supply of 78 lakhs of maunds or 282,000 tons of coal. The most important of those now worked are at Harisipur, Babusol, Tapassi, Parassia, and Nimcha.

At the present time there are at work nearly fifty collieries, divided amongst fourteen proprietors or companies, European and Native. These collieries are of various sizes, from that producing an out-turn of 18 or 20 lakhs of maunds (say 60,000 or 70,000 tons) to small quarries a few feet square, worked by half-a-dozen coolies. There are two methods of working, namely, by pits, and by quarrying on the out-crop of a seam of coal. The water in the mine is raised by the same contrivances as are commonly employed in Bengal for irrigation and for wells. The pits are of comparatively small depth, and are very inexpensive; they are invariably circular, and are generally sunk in pairs; the majority do not exceed 100 feet in depth, and no pit yet sunk exceeds 230 feet. The coal seams vary, it would seem, very much in thickness; the thickest is that at Karta, where the bed is 35 feet from top to bottom. The coal is extracted in galleries crossing each other at right angles, square posts or pillars of coal being left to support the roof. The tools used by the workmen are iron bars, large-sized hammers, and wedges. An opening at the side of the end of the gallery is made, and wedges and crow-bars are driven into the points which bring down the coal from the side of the part cut into. Under proper supervision these galleries are kept of even width and straight, but in some under native management the greatest irregularity prevails, the object being to cut coal any how, provided that as much round coal as possible be got. The quality of the coal in the Ranigunj field has been pretty well ascertained by analysis; it belongs to a variety of non-coking bituminous coal, with a large proportion both of volatile matter and ash. Two good samples from two mines were subjected to analysis, and gave the following results:—

|                     | Sisal. | Ranigunj. |
|---------------------|--------|-----------|
| Volatile ... ..     | 38.5   | 36.5      |
| Fixed Carbon ... .. | 51.1   | 52.5      |
| Ash ... ..          | 10.4   | 11.0      |

This result is considered to be a fair representation of the composition of the best class of coal obtainable from the mines. The coal when cut from the mine is carried to the buckets at the bottom of the pit by boys, and raised in iron buckets containing each from 5 to 7 maunds of coals. In a few of the mines steam-power is used, and every year the number of drawing engines is found to be increasing. The steam-engines are mostly small, seldom exceeding 25 or 30-horse power, and the water in the mines is also raised by the same agency, but the majority of mines in the Ranigunj district contain but little water except when first opened. The workmen employed in the collieries are mostly agricultural peasants, some being Hindoos, Mussulmans, Sonthals, &c. The latter are considered to be the best workmen, but are difficult to obtain. It is this want of sufficient labour which restricts the out-turn of coal, which, it is admitted on all sides, might be much larger, were workmen more easily procurable. The miners' pay is high, and is dependent upon the quantity raised; the price per bucket of 6 maunds of coal in 1859-60 being 5 pice. A good miner can get out three buckets a-day, which is nearly 4 annas, but some miners have been known to make as much as 9 annas. The miner's family can also be made available in the work, for picking coal, &c., and a man, his wife, and say three children, can thus earn about Rs. 9 a month. The advantages of this new and rich district are at present numerous; deep pits are unnecessary, owing to the abundance of the mineral near the surface of the ground, and there is an especial immunity from fire-damp, though there is no certainty that there will be a freedom from this danger when in course of time it will be found necessary, owing to the exhaustion of the surface seams, to sink pits to a greater depth. In the Damuda field one great drawback is the liability of the coal to spontaneous combustion, which renders it extremely unfitted for marine purposes; owing also to the non-removal of small coal in several of the mines, conflagrations are not of unfrequent occurrence, and it thus becomes a matter of necessity to raise all the dust, shale, and small coal, and keep the mine perfectly clean.

Besides the Ranigunj coal field, there is a small one in the Rewah territory to the south of the river Soane, but the out-turn is small. The Nerbudda Valley has long been known to contain coal, but owing to its distance from any available market, it has not been worked to any extent. Some years ago a small quantity was brought down by boats to Broach by the Nerbudda river, but the many dangerous rapids which were met with in the route, render this means of communication impracticable for purposes of commerce. The Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company have, however, commenced operations, and as the railway progresses towards that part of India, they will, in all probability, be able to work the mines profitably. In the North-West Provinces no known workable coal would seem to have been found. Seams of lignite occur along the base of the Sub-Himalayas, but it is very questionable whether it will turn out to be of any practicable use. No coal is known to occur in Oude, and the same may be said of the Punjab, except in so far as patches of lignite are concerned, which are met with as in the North-West Provinces. In Scinde some coal is found in irregular patches of variable size in the Synah Valley, and was worked by means of pits by the Scinde Railway Company. It was first established in 1857, and 45,300 maunds were extracted, after which, owing to its irregularity, it was abandoned. No coal is known to occur in the Presidency of Bombay, nor is there any in the Nizam's territory. A small coal field is known to exist in the Nagpore district near Umret, but as it is on the Nerbudda border, it may be considered as a continuation of the Nerbudda deposits. In Madras no coal is found, though it has been said that it occurs on the Godavery or some of its tributaries. As yet, however, nothing but black shales have been met with, and these will not support combustion; they are considered also to be of a different age from the coal-bearing rocks of India.

The total amount of coal raised during 1860 from all the mines in India, excepting those in the Sylhet Hills and the Rewah territory, is put down at 1,00,88,113 maunds, or 370,206 tons, a very insignificant quantity when compared with our English mines, where the annual amount raised is 72 millions of tons. We must not forget to mention that twenty-eight steam-engines are used in the Indian mines, all, with but one exception, being employed in the Ranigunj field. The Indian out-turn is, however, steadily increasing, and we cannot doubt but that as railways extend throughout the length and breadth of the peninsula, the stimulus for producing coal for their use as well as for many of the arts of civilisation which follow in their train, will be increased in a like proportion.—Times of India.

FLAX IN THE PUNJAB.

None of the Indian Governments, whether local or imperial, show so much for public opinion, or so intelligent a desire to enlighten it, as the Punjab. Whether in the formal returns sent periodically to Calcutta, in the administrative reports published every year, or in the papers called forth by such special events as the famine and the cotton crisis, the Punjab authorities show that they understand what is due to themselves, to India and to England. Their official papers are now doubly valuable, inasmuch as they are free from that extravagance in both statement and style which sometimes distinguished them. The most recent illustration of this is Mr. Thornton's letter to the Calcutta Central Committee of the Punjab contributions to the International Exhibition. The letter is an exhaustive and yet concise Industrial Report, abounding in such information on every product and fabric, as the following, which occurs in an account of the famous Cashmere shawl manufacture: "A woven shawl made at Cashmere, of the best materials, and weighing 7 lbs., will cost in Cashmere as much as £300. Of this amount, the cost of the material, including thread, is £30; the wages of labour, £100; miscellaneous expenses, £50; duty, £70." It is not, however, with such exquisite specimens of art as shawls that we have now to do, but with so vulgar and yet important an article as flax. At present the new exports from India which attract attention are tea and coffee. Soon such fibres as wool and flax will bulk far more largely than they now do. The flax mentioned by Strabo as a staple of the Punjab in his day, promises to become an important article of export now.

By the Belfast Indian Flax Company, whose agent, Mr. Wightman, is located at Sealkote, a quantity of machinery for preparing flax has this season been sent from England. It has not yet been erected, for want of a building, that placed at the disposal of the manager being so small as to be quite unfitted for his purposes. The great iron wheels belonging to the Mecadam flax breaking and scutching machine cannot enter the doors, nor, if they could, would there be any room for them to work. Dr. Jameson, who has lately returned from Europe, and who during his residence there spent much of his time in examining flax cultivation, has been deputed by the Punjab Government to Sealkote to report on the measures most expedient to be pursued in order to encourage the cultivation of the plant, and the preparation of the fibre. As a temporary measure he has recommended a small sum to be placed at the manager's disposal, to enable him to alter one of the buildings so as to fit it for the machinery, otherwise the flax crop of this season cannot, in a satisfactory manner, be prepared. This would be a matter of regret, as it is of great importance to teach, as soon as possible, the natives how to work the machinery, and through it to show them that the flax grown in the country is capable of producing a very fine fibre. In the neighbourhood of Sealkote, and in the adjoining districts, several tracts have been brought under cultivation with acclimated seed, and the crops presented are equal in length of straw to any produced in Ireland, though not quite so heavy. This, however, can be remedied by thicker sowing. The quantity sown by the zemindars was one maund per acre, a proportion too small to insure a heavy crop. In England the quantity sown to the acre is generally two bushels. Along with the flax raised from acclimated seed there were many fields, the produce of native seed. But the stalk was not more than 1 or 1½ feet high, and though it was not full grown yet it was evident plants fitted to give a fibre useful for the home looms could not be expected.

On the imported or acclimated seed alone, therefore, the success of the undertaking depends. So convinced is Dr. Jameson of this that that season he recommended the Government of the North-West Provinces to import a ton of Russian flax seeds, and he was authorised, when in England, to make arrangements for its importation. This seed reached Calcutta in September last, and is now growing at Sharunpore in a most luxuriant manner. Mr. Wightman, concurring with Dr. Jameson, had also recommended his Company to send him Russian seed; and they forwarded fifteen tons packed in casks by the Cape. But it all failed to germinate, and was, therefore, quite useless to him. Dr. Jameson was allowed to adopt any measure he deemed necessary to ensure the arrival of the flax seeds in good order. He accordingly sent orders to Russia for a ton of fresh flax seeds, to be packed in double number bags, and again well covered, the size of each package limited to 1 cwt. In this manner 1½ tons reached London, where it was again packed in wooden boxes lined with tin, and despatched overland. All the seeds, though they arrived late in the season, germinated, proving the advantage of adopting this route.

The acclimated seed, which was sown only last year by zemindars at Sealkote conditionally on an advance of Rs. 4 per acre, was this season taken from the manager, and that most eagerly, on his own terms, which are as follows:—The acclimated seed given, to be returned by zemindars in kind on the ripening of the crop; the sowing to be undertaken without an advance. The surplus seed to be purchased by the manager at the rate of Rs. 5 per maund. The flax to be pulled and rotted by the zemindars, but the straw to be carried to the factory at the manager's expense. All good straw to be purchased, if from Russian seed, at 2½ maunds per rupee; if from native seed at 5 maunds per rupee by the manager. All that is now wanted to make the crop a general one is good acclimated seed in sufficient quantity. To encourage the natives Dr. Jameson has recommended that Rs. 500 be given in prizes by the local civil officers for the best specimens of flax straw, and horned scutched fibre; and in order to induce competition, he has suggested that the prizes be open to all the Punjab and North-West Provinces. By the last mail we have received information that specimens of the flax fibre prepared at Sealkote last season, and forwarded to London by Mr. McLeod, were valued by the brokers at £50 and £60 per ton, and that her Majesty's Secretary of State for India had granted to the Indian Flax Company £1,000 annually for two years to purchase flax seed. The only condition is that the directors undertake to raise a sufficient amount to enable them to continue their exertions in promoting the production of flax in the Punjab, for a period of not less than three years, the amount to be afterwards repaid in the event of the cultivation proving remunerating. These conditions are liberal, and if the cultivation be carried on with activity and energy we doubt not it will be attended with success, and prove highly important not only to the Punjab but also to the North-Western Provinces. The subject has excited attention in Madras also, so that in the course of a few years flax should become one of the most important of our Indian exports.—Friend of India.

TEN LAKHS FOR VERNACULAR EDUCATION.

While in England the most practical thinkers, the most able statesmen, and the most zealous philanthropists are engaged in discussing the question of popular education, in India it is difficult to obtain a hearing on the subject. While in England an Educational Code threatens to become the most exciting question in the House of Commons, in India there is not a member of the Government, except, perhaps, Sir Bartle Frere and Mr. Laing, and not a responsible official in Bengal, who does not despise it. England spends £800,000 a year on education, and India not £200,000 of State money, yet Great Britain has a population of twenty millions, one in every six or seven of whom is at school, while India has a population ten times that number, only five per cent. of whom can read and write, only one and a-half per cent. of whom are properly educated for their position in life. To make the anomaly still more monstrous, the popular education England enjoys had its origin in India, in Dr. Bell, a Scotch chaplain of Madras, who seventy years ago invented the monitorial system, and tested it in the case of young Madrassesees. Mr. Joseph Lancaster copied his plan. Fifty-one years ago it led to the establishment of the British and Foreign School Society and the National Society, at a time when it was impossible to tell how many of the population were at school. In 1818 there was one in seventeen, in 1833 one in eleven, in 1843 one in ten, in 1851 one in eight, in 1858 one in seven, and this year we believe there is one in six, the same rate as Prussia has reached with her compulsory system. Twenty-three years ago the Educational Committee was created, and since 1832 the sum spent by the State has risen from £20,000 to £800,000 last year. These are great results, and as we live in this land which may educationally be well called the land of the shadow of death, we ask—why should a philanthropic Government longer deny the same blessings to the peasantry? We are glad to learn that Mr. Laing proposes to add ten lakhs in his next Budget to the miserable pittance heretofore given for this purpose.

The picture drawn in the "Report and Evidence of the Commissioners on Popular Education" in England, which has led to Mr. Lowe's Revised Code, is most instructive to India. The State helps in the education of two and a-half millions of children. In all Great Britain there are only 120,395 children untaught, and 100,000 of these are the children of paupers for whom special provision must be made. For the £800,000 spent by the Government there are two millions sterling disbursed by the public. The commissioners found no little difficulty in their inquiries into the state of the lower class of schools taught by persons of the calibre of Indian Gooroomahashoys. One dame denounced such "furring out." Another, asked as to her terms for instruction, wrote, "not understanding the questing, I answer thus a view of reading the Bible." A third declares "my school is of to humbel a cast to meat eyes (of thee publick gaze)." A fourth answered in language similar to that which we once heard from the Gooroo of a Hindoo school, "It is but little as they pays, but then, to be sure, it is but little as I teaches them." It is from such teachers as these that Mr. Lowe would rescue the youth of England by his Revised Code, and we are not astonished to learn, after this, that the schools aided by Government grants are far superior to those which have not trained teachers, the fountain of good education. Not the least remarkable feature in the report is the evidence of the value attached by the most degraded parents to the education their children receive. One commissioner asked an Irishman driving a cart, if reading and writing were of any use to such as him. "Do you think," he replied in pure Milesian, "if I could read and write I would be shoved into every dirty job as I am now? No, sir! instead of driving this horse I'd be riding him." A shrewd rustic in Teesdale declared "in theez Dal t'oonedicated will soon be considered loonateeks." The real success of the national or aided schools of England lies in the training colleges, on which a sixth of the whole £800,000 is spent. These send out annually flocks of certificated masters and pupil teachers, trained in the best methods, and having passed the necessary examinations. We are glad to see that the Revised Code, as explained by Mr. Lowe in Parliament, will leave these colleges substantially as they stand. Meanwhile it will not apply to Scotland, where the evils to be remedied do not exist to such an extent.

The peasantry of India present in many respects analogous features to the lower classes of England, so far as education is concerned. They are more densely ignorant, more profoundly bigoted, and therefore better subjects for an experiment. Their indigenous schools are proportionately worse than the dames' schools, from which the Education Committee is delivering England. The political motive for enlightening them is greater than in the case of England, for they are to us aliens, and enlightenment will produce self-interest which will originate at least passive loyalty. We profess to govern India for India's good—can there be a better means of showing our sincerity than this? We have done much for the upper classes, who, on the Asiatic principle, oppress the lower; are we to do nothing for the masses from whom we cry for cotton and labour? Our plea is that the ten lakhs additional which, we understand, will be given in redemption of the pledge of Government and as an earnest of better things, should be restricted to a national scheme of popular education, so as to carry out Sir C. Wood's despatch of 1854, and Lord Stanley's of 1859, to which he urged "immediate attention." We are aware of the gigantic work to be done. Under the Revised Code England will pay ten shillings annually for every child between the ages of six and twelve that passes a satisfactory examination. The cost is Rs. 4-8, or nine shillings for each boy at school in the Punjab. In that province, with its population of nearly fifteen millions, to educate one in eight would cost Rs. 83,21,967. How much more for the hundred and fifty millions of India! But all that we plead for is a beginning, in one province, in one county, or one sub division if necessary—only let the experiment of a national system be made, which will give the people a desire for a knowledge of their own tongue, and ultimately lead to the development of private effort, so as to cover the land with schools under trained masters. How pressing the need is, and how hopeful the work, may be conceived from these facts. In 1859-60, of the 52,068 prisoners in the Bengal jails, only 5 per cent. could read and write, and 1½ per cent. were well educated for their position in life. All who know the people of Bengal will admit that the prisoners are at least not inferior to the mass of the population, of whom, therefore, these figures may be considered true. In the Punjab only 498 prisoners could read and write in 1859, but in 1860 the number had increased to 600 out of 23,187 prisoners.

We trust the day is not far distant—we believe it is fast approaching—when the Government of India, having nursed English education into a vigorous growth, will send it out to the world to fight its own way with no other aid but that of grants of money and inspection, and will bring national education to the birth, will nurse it with training colleges, official assistance, and a liberal system, till it too shall be ready to start on its own account and become as hardy as it is in England. As a beginning we plead for the ten lakhs, to be restricted to vernacular schools; we urge Lord Elgin to propound a system if he will not adopt one of those already suggested. Vernacular schools will in time do for the masses what English colleges are accomplishing for the upper ten thousand of the presidency cities. They will dissipate such ignorance as has made the ryots of Bengal a prey to the wildest delusions, will weaken such superstition as keeps them in moral slavery, will dissuade from crimes which are now considered virtues, and will prepare the national mind for a higher faith. When we think of the future which knowledge will render possible to the debased peasant of India, we are tempted to exclaim with Foster, when pleading for popular education in England forty years ago, "We earnestly wish it might please the sovereign ruler to do one more new thing in the earth, compelling the dominant powers in the nations to an order of institutions and administrations that would apply the energy of the State to so noble a purpose."—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RAJPOOTANA.—You lately detailed the installation of Sumbhoo Sing on the throne of Meywar; since which nothing has appeared in your columns regarding this part of the empire. Stirring scenes have been enacted in the interim, and it might please some of your readers to peruse a description of what may fairly be called the most interesting and important, not only as a fine spectacle, but also in a political point of view, viz., the royal marriage between the Maharao Rajah of Ulwur and the daughter of the Maharaj Rana of Jhallawar. The presence of Major-general Lawrence, C.B., agent of the Governor-general, who, on his annual official tour, so timed his visit to the latter chief's capital as to witness the event, of course added much to the occasion. It was the more desirable that everything should be done which could dignify this prince in the eyes of the surrounding States, from the fact that it is but comparatively a recent date since the promotion of his family to a throne, and, in consequence, he is considered in the light of an upstart by the proud rajpoot, who delights to honour only those who can trace back their ancestors by centuries. The history of this small principality is one of the most interesting on record, and the moral it teaches will ever be a caution to ruling princes to learn how to govern their own kingdoms; and not, as in the present instance, live in apathetic ignorance of their own affairs, trusting too implicitly, and thus rendering most powerful, an able prime minister. Thus it was with Kotah, whose chief allowed Zalim Sing entirely to control the affairs of his Government; and right well did this able and energetic officer execute the task allotted to him. But it was not to be expected that self aggrandisement was no object to him; and he very naturally desired that something might be done to perpetuate his name. His request was so far acceded to that the hereditary prime ministership of the State was granted to his heirs. What was the result? On the death of Zalim Sing, and the then reigning king, the latter's successor objected to an arrangement which virtually made him a cypher in his own kingdom; and it was finally settled by the minister receiving that portion of Kotah now known as Jhallawar, with the title of Maharaj Rana. The present chief, Pirthee Sing, father of the bride, evinced much loyalty during the mutinies, saving the lives of many Europeans who fled to him for refuge. His own troops proved faithless; and Tantia Topce took possession of many of his guns, horses, and treasure, causing him to pay a large sum to save his capital from being sacked. The wedding-day was fixed for the 24th January. The bridegroom, his Highness the Maharao Rajah of Ulwur, an intelligent lad of about seventeen years of age, had arrived at a village, some eight miles off, days before. It would have been, however, beneath his dignity, and contrary to Rajpoot etiquette, to have entered Jhallaputun a moment sooner than the day previous to the ceremony; it was therefore arranged that he should enter in state on the 23rd. The bride was scarcely eleven years of age; and the affianced couple never set eyes on each other until the marriage vows were about to be uttered. The ceremony of "pesh-waiee," or welcoming, promised to be one of the most imposing; and it was necessary for the father of the bride to go out in state four miles to meet his future son-in-law. The concourse assembled was immense. All the arrangements were well managed, and each chief was accompanied by the political agent attached to his Court. The Ulwur procession, in pomp and splendour, far outshone that of Jhallawar. The former chief prides himself on the caste and beauty of his horses; and his stud, consisting principally of Arabs, seen to the best advantage by the richness and really tasteful elegance of their trappings, seemed well worthy to occupy a royal stable. The line of elephants, covered with cloths of embroidered gold, and surrounded by hundreds of the most gaily dressed horsemen and foot retainers, while the eye, turn whichever way it would, rested on thousands upon thousands of eager lookers on, was a sight seldom witnessed; and, finally, when the two chiefs with their retinues met, the effect was most striking. A cloth was spread upon the ground, and, amidst the salvos of their artillery, they dismounted and embraced, and on resuming their seats, the cortège moved on. Your time need not be taken up with details of the morrow's scene; suffice it to add, that the bridegroom's procession to claim his bride equalled that of the day before, and, it being night, the illuminations and fireworks perhaps added to the effect. On both occasions, as is usual in India when a matrimonial alliance is formed between people of rank and wealth, the bridal party showered silver along its path, and the Rajah himself gold mohurs. No accidents appear to have taken place, but to a spectator it seems barely possible that the line of huge elephants, threading the narrow intricate streets of a native town, could make a passage through this frantic tumultuous sea of people, where to have fallen would have been death, without crushing numbers under foot. By the good advice of Lieut. Impey, the political agent attached to his Court, the young Ulwur chief wisely determined to dispense with the foolish and extravagant custom of "barah." This ceremony means that a large inclosure is made, and any mendicant on the spot enters therein. Money is then brought, and to each person filing out in succession some is given. Lakhs of rupees are thus squandered, and the result is to congregate all the riff raff of the country. At Jhallawar, however, this practice was discontinued, and it is said that General Lawrence warned his subordinate political officers to use their utmost endeavours to prevent this class of people attending the wedding. Such an example will conduce greatly to the lessening of marriage expenses. Many ladies and officers from Neemuch were present, and what with dinners, illuminations, fireworks, and hunts, each rajah vied with the other in trying to please.—Correspondent of the Friend of India.

SUTTEE IN MEYWAR.—The Chief of Beechewar, in Meywar, having lately died, one of his wives submitted herself to the suttee. The authorities heard nothing of it until all was over, and inquiry is being made with a view to the punishment of those concerned.

GWALIOR.—Our letters from Gwalior inform us that on the appointed day forty-three minute guns were fired from the ramparts of Gwalior as a token of respect to the memory of the late Prince Consort, and that all the shops were closed for that day. We also hear that Government have impressed upon the Durbar the necessity of at once putting a stop to the intrigues and plots which Rao Sahib has been lately carrying on in Oorjein, and that the quartermaster-general has written to the brigadier commanding the Gwalior brigade relative to the propriety of increasing the force at Ruttunpore to four hundred bayonets, and reducing the force at Seraye. The Agent, however, has expressed an opinion that it would not be advisable at present to leave Seraye without a detachment, and so the matter stands.

PESHAWAR, March 26.—The 21st Hussars have now more than their full complement of men, all the drafts and volunteers having joined. The regiment, however, is very short of horses. More rain has fallen, and the harvest promises to be first-rate. Prices of grain, however, still remain high.

FOOD AND ITS EFFECTS.—In accordance with instructions received from home, and confirmed by the Supreme Government, the Principal Inspector-general in the medical department has called upon all medical officers holding civil appointments to furnish the fullest information possible regarding the nature, quantity, and mode of preparation of the different alimentary substances consumed by the industrial and labouring classes in their respective districts, as well as the influence apparently exercised by such diet on the health of persons in the enjoyment of full liberty. They have further been called upon to supply similar particulars respecting the diet in use in the prisons under their charge, and its effects on the health of the convicts. The above inquiry, if zealously carried out, will, we have no doubt, add much to our present knowledge of a very important and interesting branch of the science of social economy, especially as it is proposed to publish the result in such a form as to make it available to all those in Europe who may be engaged in investigating this and similar subjects. One thing, however, we are pretty certain of, and that is, that the inquiry will not fail to show that the prison diet is equal, if not superior, to that of the free labourer.

IMPORTANT SHIPPING CASE.—Below will be found a decision given in the Supreme Court by the Chief Justice, in a case of great importance to the mercantile world, and of interest to the legal profession. It appears, on the statement of the case, that could this decision possibly have gone the other way, every river craft afloat—steamer, flat, pinnace or dinghy, might have been summarily seized on such claims, and sold by the Admiralty Court. The jurisdiction given to the Small Cause Courts by Act I. of 1859 would have become a dead letter, and the costs enormous. In the present case the amount of wages claimed was about Rs. 600; and the bail demanded for the plaintiffs' costs alone was upwards of Rs. 800. "In the Supreme Court, Vice-Admiralty side. In the matter of the Inland river cargo flat called the Kallegunga. In this case an application had been made to the Vice Admiralty Court by the Serang Moohammed Allee, on behalf of himself, four seconnees, one bandarry, one topus, one tindal, and ten lascars, for wages and diet money due for the months of September, October, and November, 1861, on a voyage from Calcutta to Dacca, Cachar, and other places; it being admitted that the voyage from Calcutta to a short distance beyond Dacca was within the ebbing and flowing of the tide, but that the rest of the voyage was beyond tidal influence. The case was heard before the Chief Justice as Commissary of the Vice Admiralty Court on the 1st of April, and this morning his Lordship delivered judgment. The flat had been the property of Mr. Cleghorn, now an insolvent, but Baboo Heerololl Seal is now the mortgagee in possession. The vessel had been arrested by the Bailiff of the Vice Admiralty Court for the amount claimed by the applicants. We cannot give the judgment in detail, but will state the leading points ruled by the Chief Justice. 1st. That the suit was not barred by Act I. of 1859, sec. 57, the aggregate sum claimed exceeding 500 rupees. 2nd. That a large portion of the voyage having been performed within tidal influence would (if the Vice Admiralty Court had jurisdiction) entitle the applicants to recover, notwithstanding a part of the voyage was beyond tidal influence. 3rd. That although Bengal was not divided into counties, as was the case in England, yet still as the river ran inland, with districts on each side, having courts of justice, it ought to be considered as if it were infra corpus comitalis. It did not come within those cases which were interfluxum et refluxum maris, and which were alternately covered and not covered with water, where there is a divisum imperium, and the Admiral and Common Law have jurisdiction by turns, one upon the water, the other upon the land as the tide ebbs and flows, but when the water is entirely within a county the common law claims the jurisdiction. The King v. forty-nine cases of brandy 3rd Haggard 283. This case must be treated as wholly within the body of a county, and therefore the Vice Admiralty Court has no jurisdiction. 4th. Mr. Peterson has argued that the present Vice Admiralty Commission gives the Court jurisdiction, and he relies upon the words that the jurisdiction given is "as well in, upon, or by the sea or public streams, fresh waters, ports, rivers, creeks, and places overflowed whatsoever within the ebbing or flowing of the sea or high water mark, as upon any of the shores or banks adjoining to them or either of them, &c.;" but all this must be governed by the following words, that the Court "do hear and determine according to the civil and maritime laws and customs of our High Court of Admiralty of England in Calcutta." Now what those laws and customs were is fully pointed out in Cummins' Digest 510 FI; the case in Haggard, and particularly by the case on which Mr. Clark relied, Ross v. Walker, 2nd Wilson 264, where a prohibition was granted against the Admiralty from proceeding in a case for wages brought by a pilot for navigating a ship from Gravesend to Deptford, it being done within the body of a county where the admiral has no jurisdiction, 15 R 2, C 3. The rule to quash the writ was made absolute without costs. The fiat to be released, the mortgagee undertaking not to bring any action of trespass for the illegal seizure. Mr. Peterson for the mariners, Mr. Longueville Clarke for the mortgagee."

FORGERY IN THE N.W.P.—They can forge in the Upper Provinces as well as in Bengal, though probably, in the case which has more immediately called forth this remark, some Bengalee in office employ in the North-West Provinces was the operator. It appears that the frauds and surreptitious acquisition of money which have lately taken place in the Meerut Pay-office were effected through the agency of forgeries, which were performed in a sufficiently able and adroit manner to accomplish their object without soon attracting attention or arousing suspicion. It is considered—and we think with justice—that the defalcations having occurred in this manner in the Meerut Pay-office, to a very great extent exonerates Captain Elderton from the blame which would have attached to him had the same results been attributable to carelessness or want of strict official supervision. The most able and vigilant officer or man of business may be made the victim of a forgery, as it is the action of another, perfectly uncontrollable by the individual through the agency of whose name a fraud is accomplished.

DELHI, March 25.—General Wheeler left last evening for Meerut, having completed the inspections. Major Bunbury and the officers of the 82nd gave the General and lady a ball on the 23rd, which was a very brilliant affair, and went off with great spirit. The 82nd deserve great praise from the community for their indefatigable exertions to promote gaiety in dull Delhi, and it seems to be all that they are likely to get, for the entertaining is all on their side. The gas-lighting experiment, as far as the generating of gas goes, has been completely successful; it has already been burnt, and I believe to-morrow or next day will see a grand illumination for the benefit of the native population and others who have never seen inflammable air; no doubt they will be duly astonished. We are indebted to the laudable exertions of the Rev. Mr. Evans, Baptist missionary, for the establishment of a Temperance Society in H.M.'s 82nd. A large number of the men and some officers have already joined it, and I have no doubt a still larger number will avail themselves of its unmistakable benefits. On Thursday next I believe our deputy-commissioner proposes to give a lecture on China and the Chinese, on which occasion tea and toast will be (very appropriately) served out to the members and their families, and the evening's entertainment will conclude with the magic lantern exhibition. A few such men as Mr. Evans distributed among our European troops would effect a vast deal of good in the army. Our weather is variable; clouds and sunshine succeed each other rapidly, and the few drops of rain we get do no harm to the crops, and cool the atmosphere. We are now at the close of March and punkahs are not in use; it has been a wonderfully cool season. Mr. Grant's patent is being made available for the use of the barracks in the Fort. We are to have some changes in our Civil administration here. Mr. Macnaughten, assistant commissioner, is, I believe, transferred to Bengal, and Mr. Leslie Saunders comes in his place; Lieut. De Kantzou is also coming here as assistant commissioner. The examinations take place on the 1st.—Englishman.

SAUGOR AND NERBUDDA TERRITORIES.—We (Englishman) drew attention some time ago to the sudden and unexpected orders for the occupation of the Saugor and Nerbudda territories by Madras troops, and their abandonment by the Bengal regiments cantoned in these military stations. Again, a few days since, we described the inconvenience and confusion which had arisen from the arrival of the Madrassese, whilst the Bengalees had no orders to march, and were in ignorance of their destination. By this time the Bengal regiments, the 3rd Cavalry and 25th Punjab Infantry, are in the middle of the wild and hot country marching "towards Agra," and by the last accounts from Jubbulpore, the 25th Punjab Infantry were awaiting the arrival of the 10th Madras N.I., upon which the former corps will march "towards Mirzapore." This marching through India in the month of April "towards" some place has a nice, loose, and free-and-easy sound upon paper; but it is a very different thing indeed to those who are out in such an atmosphere as makes them feel as if there were but a sheet of the said paper between them and the tropical regions of the other world. This Saugor and Nerbudda re-occupation and military relief business has been sadly mismanaged somewhere—at Madras, we suppose. We have not calculated how long the two Bengal regiments, which started on the 22nd and 24th of March, will be moving "towards Agra," but we fancy that the 25th P.I. will be moving "towards Mirzapore" until about the 1st of May. But even when it was determined that the Bengal troops must march in the middle of the hot season, no proper consideration appears to have been shown, for the telegraphic order to move, which reached Saugor on the 11th of March, was not published at Jubbulpore till the 20th.

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALA, before leaving the Presidency, applied to his Excellency the Viceroy for permission to return to his own territories, alleging as a reason for so doing, that the climate of Calcutta was such as to endanger his own health and that of the members of his suite; and that recent disturbances in his dominions rendered his presence needful. His Highness also expressed a hope of being able to resume his seat in the Viceregal Council before the next cold weather if no objections were entertained to his doing so.

DESTRUCTIVE CYCLONE.—The Englishman gives full particulars of the cyclone which passed over some villages about twenty miles from Rampore Beaulah in the beginning of April. Such a scene of desolation has rarely been witnessed. In one village alone one hundred people were killed and thirty-five wounded, besides sheep, dogs, and other animals. Nothing escaped. Immense trees and clumps of bamboos were torn up by the roots and carried to a considerable distance. Of the huts which composed the villages there is not a vestige left. One native was found hanging dead in a large tree, into which he had been whirled by the wind, and even fish were found lying at some distance from the river banks. A tract of country five miles long by two and a half wide is laid waste as if by fire, and the stench arising from the dead bodies is described as fearful. In fact, an eye-witness assures us that the appearance of the entire district baffles description. Much loss of life also took place on the river, where several boats were seen to go down with every soul on board. Rampore Beaulah seems to be especially unfortunate just now. Another very melancholy accident occurred there the other day, and has thrown quite a gloom over the station. Mr. Cockburn, and a Mr. Smith (who was engaged in surveying some property belonging to Messrs. Watson and Co.), were drowned in a wheel near Shikarpore while out duck-shooting. It was at first thought they had been caught in the storm, but it seems that their boat upset, from some other and as yet unexplained cause. Mr. Cockburn was a very fine young man, and had been only four months in the country.

There is reason, moreover, to believe that this list does not comprise more than from one-half to two-thirds of the publications of the year. Besides this, a list of twenty-nine Bengalee periodicals has been obtained, of which three appear daily, one tri-weekly, one bi-weekly, thirteen weekly, three fortnightly, and eight monthly.

MR. GOWER'S TRACTION ENGINE.—When Lord Canning was at Allahabad he took the opportunity of testing the merits and powers of Mr. Gower's traction engine, which has now been a good deal talked about, and ridden in by every male and female celebrity that has visited that city since the engine's completion. The viceroy was satisfied, and straightway granted a Government loan of ten thousand rupees: for Mr. Gower felt a weakness in the "sinews of war," and twenty thousand were required. After fruitless endeavours to realise the remaining ten thousand from natives, who trust no Adam Warners, or untried Wickas, Lord Canning, in the name of the Government, has again come forward, and Mr. Gower has got his twenty thousand rupees. He will now be able to bring out the new engine, which has been constructed at home, and set to work in earnest.

DR. ANDERSON, the officiating superintendent of the Botanical Gardens, who was lately deputed to Ootacamund, to convey thither certain specimens of the cinchona obtained from Java, has returned to the Presidency, and submitted to the Government the result of his inquiries into the subject of introducing the cinchona into India. The Governor-general has thanked Dr. Anderson and approved of the proposed experiments at Darjeeling.

SIR CHARLES NICHOLSON, late Governor of Queen's Land, Australia, has been on a visit to Lucknow. He has been paying a flying visit to Agra and Delhi, and is now on his way to England.

SAUGOR, March 21.—It is with extreme astonishment and surprise that I heard from a poor European travelling from Cawnpore to Jubbulpore that he had been waylaid, robbed, and beaten severely within six miles of Jhamsie, and more astonishing still is the fact that these robbers were headed by a white man, who spoke English with such fluency and purity that no doubt can be entertained as to the land of his birth. Not knowing what to do, the poor fellow, after being robbed and beaten, proceeded on his journey in company of some native "Tamasha-wallas," who since have protected and cared for him well.—Delhi Gazette.

METEOR AT DINAPORE.—About a quarter to seven o'clock P.M., 15th March, a meteor of extraordinary splendour was observed by several persons. Its course was from north-west to south. At the end of its transit it seemed to divide at one extremity into two distinct tails, each of which burst like a rocket, throwing out globules of coloured fire.

GORUCKPORE, March 22.—Maharajah Jung Bahadur is still hunting in the Terai, and the other day he presented the Rajah of Bulrampore with two elephants, a pony, and several birds and dogs in return for some presents formerly received. Our Collector, Mr. Probyn, is, I hear, now shooting in the western Terai in opposition to the remonstrances of the Nepaulese Kirdars. The matter has been brought to the notice of the Maharajah, who, having possibly learned something of the game laws, has addressed the Nepal Resident on the subject.

MR. W. S. SETON-KARR, and MR. WALTER MORGAN, Master in Equity of the Supreme Court, Calcutta, have been appointed by Sir Charles Wood to be Judges of the Amalgamated Supreme and Sudder Courts at the Calcutta Presidency; and MR. JOSEPH GOODEVE, Acting Master in Equity during Mr. Morgan's absence, succeeds to the appointment vacated by his promotion to the higher office.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DOVETON COLLEGE is the only educational institution in Madras which does not flourish. In order to spread a knowledge of the Bible amongst the masses of Madras, Mr. Peter Cator, a retired lawyer, has established a system of prizes, which is to continue in operation for some years. There is to be an annual examination in religious subjects, open to all, and those who stand at the head of the list are to receive prizes. The distribution of the first lot of books, &c., took place the other day, the Bishop occupying the chair.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—A convocation of the Senate of the Madras University was held at the Banqueting-hall, on Friday, the 28th of March, for the purpose of conferring degrees on the successful candidates, who had been examined previously. The Chancellor, Vice Chancellor, and Fellows were in attendance at the hall precisely at half-past four P.M., the candidates standing in front of the seats occupied by the members of the senate. After the usual questions had been put to those on whom the degrees were to be conferred, those intended for the B.A. degree were presented by the Rev. A. R. Symonds; those for the B.L. degree by J. B. Norton, Esq. The Chancellor then presented to each of them a diploma and a hood. They were afterwards addressed by the Rev. R. Halley, Principal of the Doveton College, who called upon them to be careful that their future conduct should be such as to add to the honour which they had just received; that they should jealously guard themselves against any action likely to cast a breath of suspicion upon their characters; and that they should so carry themselves amongst their fellow subjects as to show that they had fully taken advantage of the opportunities which had been presented to them, and by means of which they had raised themselves to the proud position they now occupied. We may mention in this place, that one of the graduates of the University died on Tuesday the 8th April. We refer to Mr. W. Grant, B.A., who, for his charity and kindness of heart, will be long remembered in Madras. He was, perhaps, the most learned of all students who have graduated in Madras. A first rate mathematician, and a generally well read man, he succeeded in gaining the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He was an ornament to the East Indian community, for whose benefit he was always ready to undertake any amount of labour, and his loss will not be easily replaced.—Madras Athenæum.

FRIEND-IN-NEED SOCIETY.—On the 31st of March, the Governor, Sir William Denison, presided at the annual meeting of the Friend-in-Need Society. There were a great many people present, including the Judges, &c.; and several speeches were made, in which the claims of the Society were duly set forth. The Society has been in existence for many years, and during that time has done a vast amount of good. It relieves and employs the lower classes of the European and East Indian communities, and in short does what ought to be done by a board of guardians. It will be seen from the report to be found elsewhere, that the finances of the society are not very flourishing. Since the mutiny in the Northwest, the pensioners of the society have increased greatly, but the income has not grown at the same rate. Many people, therefore, have begun to cry out for a poor rate, as the charitably disposed are now called upon to do more than ought to be expected from them. The Governor at the meeting spoke against any attempt to obtain a poor rate, and urged upon all the necessity for renewed exertions in the collection of subscriptions.—Athenæum.

TENASSERIM PROVINCES.—We understand that the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah has recently reported to Government the completion of the re-organisation of the police in the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, and the return of Captain Duncan to Rangoon. On receipt of this report the Supreme Government expressed their entire satisfaction with the result, and bestowed great praise on Captain Duncan and his subordinates for the rapid and efficient manner in which the task entrusted to them had been completed; remarking that, although the whole of the satisfactory events reported could not be attributed exclusively to the re-organisation of the police, there was nothing which would so much conduce to the rapid and prosperous development of trade as a trustworthy and efficient police establishment to which the people could look for protection with confidence; an object which, there is every reason to hope, has been attained in the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, owing to the energy and judgment displayed by Captain Duncan. With reference to internal communication, a proposal has been made by Captain Duncan to open up two roads to the Shan frontier, and this proposal has been warmly supported by the local government. As we hoped, the police posts and patrols have succeeded to a great extent in putting down the raids which were formerly so frequently made into the Shan and Kareem frontier States, and the route thence to Moulmein is now open, a circumstance which has caused a very large influx of traders into Moulmein. It has also had a beneficial effect on the supply of teak timber, which has been higher this year than ever it was before, and has created such a great improvement in the trade of Moulmein that there have been as many as a hundred vessels loading at one time in Moulmein harbour, sixty of which were European. As a natural consequence on this impetus given to trade, the local revenue has considerably improved, and it is expected that it will for this year show an increase of twenty per cent. on the preceding year. All this speaks strongly in favour of Captain Duncan's proposal, more especially as by it a large proportion of the trade from Younan and the independent Hill States, which at present goes to Ava and Bangkok, would by its introduction be diverted to Moulmein.—Englishman.

VERNACULAR EDUCATION.—On the 29th of March, the Chief Justice, Sir Colley Scotland, presided at the anniversary of Patcheappah's Institution. The patron, Mr. Norton, addressed the meeting in a long speech. An essay on the importance of Hindoo female education, written by one of the scholars of the institution, was read, and the writer thereof was rewarded with the presentation of a medal from Mr. Zillhardt. There are upwards of eight hundred native scholars in the above school, many of whom will ultimately proceed to the presidency college, for the purpose of preparing themselves for the B.A. degree. If the Mofussil were as well provided with schools and schoolmasters as is the Presidency town, India would soon cast off the bonds of darkness with which her people have hitherto been bound down, and would gain that position to which she is well entitled. But we now see education gradually spreading itself over the whole country, so that in a few years time there will be scarcely a single town or village of importance which has not a school in which the rising generation may receive benefits denied to their fathers. The educational grant for the whole of India is not more than one-sixth of that set apart for the national schools in England, yet great progress has been made; and if, as is said, an additional ten lacs are to be set aside this year for the educational department, we may fairly expect that the good which will arise from such a wise act on the part of our rulers will be enormous.—Athenæum.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.—A lighthouse has been erected at Allepey, in Travancore, and stands in lat. 9 deg. 29 min. 48 sec. N. and long 5 hours 5 min. 25 sec. E. of Greenwich, the light of which will be exhibited on the night of the 28th of March, 1862, and every night thereafter from sunset to sunrise. The Allepey light will be known to mariners as a revolving light producing a bright flash once every minute. The lantern is elevated one hundred and thirty-one feet above the level of the sea. In clear weather the flashes of the light will be seen at the distance of six leagues, and at lesser distances according to the state of the atmosphere, and to a near observer in favourable circumstances the light will not wholly disappear between the flashes. The anchorage in the roads is with the light bearing from N.E. to E.N.E. in four to four and a half fathoms soft mud, where the water is perfectly smooth.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, April 1.—The rebel doings and the movements made against them by the English and French admirals are still the principal topics of discussion in China. It will be remembered that while the insurgents were yet far away from foreign ports, and making no decided movements to approach them, the allies guaranteed them perfect neutrality so long as they kept clear of foreign settlements. Ningpo and Shanghai were especially named as under our protection, and the rebels were warned that any movement which threatened those ports would be considered as cancelling our promise to remain neutral; the navigation of the Yang-tse was also to be free from interruption. Whether this was merely intimated to them in the shape of a promise that we should regard on the conditions named, or determined by a more formal agreement, either verbally or in writing, is best known to Sir James Hope or Mr. Harry Parkes. It was reported at the time, on what authority we cannot recollect, that the insurgent chiefs at Nanking, where the interview took place, had given a verbal reply that they would not attack cities in whose immediate neighbourhood the foreign nations possessed settlements. This was at the time of the admiral's first trip up the Yang-tse river. Our position thus became very clearly defined; we bound ourselves to a qualified neutrality—qualified rather to interpret our ideas of neutrality in the case than to gain advantages in return for our concessions. The fall of Ningpo freed us from that pledge; and if, as may be fairly believed, the insurgents had given a pledge, as reported at the time, the capture of that city was a violation of their promise. Another visit was then made to Nanking, Mr. Parkes being detained in China—when just about to embark for England on leave of absence—in order to join the admiral as before, and repeat the warning previously given, doubtless again accompanied by the promise of non-interference, should the caution be regarded. The caution, as we have already recorded, has not been regarded, and the admiral, free from his promises, has engaged in active hostilities against all rebel forces found within a radius of twenty miles from Shanghai; it is understood that no hostilities will for the present be extended beyond that range.

On the 13th ult. a rebel fleet, with provisions and munitions, was dispersed and partly destroyed by our gunboats, some distance up the river, where their presence was deemed hostile to the safety of Shanghai. On the 14th ult. an Imperial force encountered the rebels at Soeking, an unwall town between Shanghai and Tsing-poo. The fight was at first likely to be in favour of the insurgents, but the arrival of Colonel Ward and his force of disciplined Chinese gave the Imperial party a complete victory. The engagement is said to have been sharp, as the rebels, though finally routed, made a desperate resistance. The defeated force fell back upon Tsing-poo, which is twenty-five miles from Shanghai, and forms their nearest head-quarters.

Admiral Hope is continually out with parties, either reconnoitring, or driving off the enemy. The fight near Ming-Hong, in which our own forces took part on the 27th February, has been fully described by a correspondent of the North

China Herald. We quote the concluding part of his letter:—"From inquiry and observation the number of Taeping rebels holding the place could not have been less than six thousand; of these between six and seven hundred were killed, and upwards of three hundred taken prisoners. The streets and houses presented an awful spectacle, the bodies in some places lying in heaps, and the plain beyond the village was strewn with those who were shot down in the flight. The practice of Bradshaw's mountain howitzers was good, as soon as the range was obtained, but the rockets were a failure. The French guns also played with great effect. Every one engaged behaved with coolness and courage, advancing gradually, and getting through the before-mentioned formidable obstacles forming the outer defences, through the trench, and right up the breastwork long before the guns were silenced. As for the Chinese organised under Colonel Ward, they seemed to know no fear, and perhaps exposed themselves too much. The loss of this force was one officer very badly wounded, about ten rank and file killed and forty wounded, some severely. Two or three English marines were wounded; but, from their being kept better under cover, the foreign portion of the force suffered slightly in comparison. The British admiral himself, accompanied by Mr. Alabaster, the Consulate interpreter, was right in front, directing the attack in that part, while Ward and his men vigorously assailed the enemy on the left. After all was over, the village was set on fire, and the foreign troops embarked for Shanghai."

In the Foreign Settlement of Shanghai the foregoing facts form the leading subjects of public attention. The admiral's conduct is censured by a few, but approved of by many more. In addition to the corps of volunteers at present organised—viz., an infantry and a mounted corps—it is proposed to have an artillery corps.

From Pekin there is no intelligence of importance.

The three Northern ports are still, by the last advices, closed up with ice. By this time, however, they are likely to be open, the new steamer Undine having recently gone from Canton to Tien-tsin, having on board 100 of the successful candidates at the late literary examinations.

From Hankow we hear that trade is promising well. The cold weather was abating. The Imperialist "braves" quartered in the neighbourhood have been very troublesome—so much so that a complaint has been forwarded by the foreign residents to H.B.M. consul at Shanghai. They have been equally so at Kiu-Kiang.

From Nankin a correspondent of the North China Herald says that the Imperial forces are appearing on the opposite bank of the river, and seem to meditate hostilities against the holders of the ancient Ming capital.

From Ningpo we have news to the effect that a rebel fleet is preparing to capture Chusan; this step will be a dangerous one for the Taipings. Eight hundred of the French troops from Saigon are about to leave Hong Kong for Ningpo (it is supposed), and the probability is that the city will be taken under Allied protection, in the same manner as Shanghai, and thus the intimation conveyed to the insurgents that we meant to protect both places will be made good. We hear that a thousand of our own troops are at present on their way from India, so that decisive action appears to have been determined upon. Certainly this is better than half measures.

From Amoy, Swatow, and Foochow, we have no particular news, except that at the latter port the Hamburg barque Tuisco, full of tea, for Australia, got on shore in dropping down the river, and will have to discharge her cargo for repairs.

At Canton some alterations have been made in the importation of opium, steamers only being now permitted to bring opium into that port.

In Hong Kong the chief matter of interest is the volunteer movement, which is still in a healthy state.

From Japan we learn that there has been a destructive fire in the foreign settlement of Yokohama, which has caused to one or two merchants very considerable loss. The Second Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is also a member of the Gorogio, was lately set upon and assaulted by a band of assassins; he escaped with his life. The matter is considered by some to have a political significance.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, April 16.—The fortnight has been marked by extreme heat, so intense as to be unwelcome to all save those who have had coffee to prepare and ship. Since our last four ships have sailed for England with coffee as follows:—Plantation, 11,748 cwts.; native, 4,875 cwts.; total, 16,623 cwts. Our exports of the great staple are thus up to 388,000 cwts., of which nearly three-fourths are plantation kinds. If we include the cargoes of the Queen of England and the Hastings, which have cleared since the statement was made up, our total exports since the 1st October, 1861, will stand as follows:—Plantation, 297,752 cwts.; native, 103,331 cwts.; total, 401,083 cwts., so that we have already reached the extreme limit of four hundred thousand, fixed by some of our friends. We have five and a half months to make the additional 100,000 contended for by us, and we feel convinced that the result will be rather over than under this mark. We may add that the Percy Douglas, ready for sea, will probably raise our export of coffee to 410,000 cwts. The export of plantation is still far a-head of previous years, but in consequence of the falling off in Native as compared with 1858-59, the total exports are a couple of thousand of cwts. below those to the same period of that season. At the end of this season we shall probably find our account as follows:—Plantation, 360,000 cwts.; Native, 140,000 cwts.; total, 500,000 cwts., "more or less"—our opinion being in favour of "a little more."

The steamer which takes this mail from our shores will carry away a number of passengers from Ceylon, including Mr. J. P. Green (sailed in the Ottawa) and Mr. R. B. Carson, both members of our mercantile community, &c. Following steamers are expected to take many of the older residents from our shores, the attraction of the Exhibition year being of course great. We now hear that Mr. C. P. Walker, District Judge of Galle, is likely to proceed to England on leave, in which case there will be further changes in the service.

The Governor and a considerable number of the leaders of society are still absent in the hill country, avoiding the heat and dust of Colombo, and enjoying the coolness of Newera Ellia and Kandy.

Ferguson's "Ceylon Directory," which is now in the hands of the binder, embraces the main figures connected with the trade of Ceylon for 1861, a year distinguished for the largest export of coffee (648,000 cwts., valued at £1,656,000), and the largest import of rice (4,181,000 bushels, valued at £836,000) ever yet included in the annual Customs accounts of Ceylon. In 1837 we exported only 34,154 cwts. of coffee, valued at £106,999; while our import of rice in that year was only 650,042 bushels, valued at £149,543. The increase in the total value of our trade has been in proportion. The value in 1837 was as follows:—Value of imports (including £39,000 specie), £595,000; Value of exports (including £9,000 specie), £327,000; total, £922,000, or considerably under a million. In 1861 the figures were: imports (including £1,371,000 specie), £3,663,000; exports (including £421,000 specie and £219,000 imports re-exported), £2,706,000; total, £6,369,000. So that in twenty-four years the increase has been exactly sevenfold. So much for the coffee enterprise, the introduction of British capital and the operation of British energy in Ceylon. On full consideration, and remembering the coffee consumed in the Island, we feel that the figures for land under coffee should be raised to 150,000 acres—of which 50,000 are under native coffee. It is still certain that little more than one-fifteenth of the Island of Ceylon is cultivated.

With the expansion of the coffee and rice trade, and the advance of the island generally, has followed a great increase in cart traffic. We have no figures earlier than 1850, but since that year the number of annual cart licenses has very nearly doubled. The figures which represent immigration and emigration show that in nineteen years a million of men, women, and children of the labouring classes, have come over to Ceylon from Southern India, whence also we have imported immense quantities of rice and cattle.

There is still a large blossom expected in many districts, but the successive blossomings which have already occurred are fast setting into green berries. The prospects for "Next Year" still continue exceedingly good.

Besides the changes in the service to which we have adverted, there are changes impending amongst the military, and in the ranks of the Legislative Council. The head-quarters of H.M.'s 50th are to be removed from Kandy to Colombo. Mr. Nicol has resigned his post as member of the Legislative Council, and Messrs. Robertson and Comarasamy are likely to visit England. Unless an offer is made for the construction of our railway we believe the measures of chief importance next session will be those for the registration of births, marriages, and deaths, and for the registration and transfer of lands.

The health of the country is as good as the great heat will permit.—Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

THE MALAY PENINSULA.—It is very remarkable that, notwithstanding the length of time British settlements have existed in close vicinity to or upon the Malay Peninsula, large tracts of the interior of the country are still wholly unexplored, and that our information regarding the Peninsula generally is of a very imperfect nature. The maps of a great part of the Peninsula are mere guess work, even the coasts being very inaccurately laid down in many places. Yet we have been settled on Pinang, at the north end of the Peninsula, for the last seventy-six years; on Singapore, at the south extremity, for forty-three years, and at Malacca, on the mainland and about the centre of the country, for thirty-eight years, besides a previous temporary occupation lasting for several years. The country, too, is not a sterile or arid desert offering no attractions to the explorer. On the contrary, it is rich in vegetable, animal and mineral productions, and is everywhere pierced by rivers of considerable size. Its mineral treasures alone of gold and tin are so abundant that it is strange no attempt has yet been made to effect a systematic and scientific survey of them. The most detailed account of them which exists is that given in the second part of Anderson's "Considerations relative to the Malay Peninsula," the information contained in which is very meagre and vague, and mostly derived from native information; and it is, besides, now nearly forty years old. The limited exploration which has been made has been almost entirely by private persons, and not at the instance of the Government of the Straits Settlement. From whatever cause may have arisen this want of curiosity regarding countries so close to our settlement, and on the resources of which the prosperity of our local commerce depends to a considerable extent, it is time that this apathy were abandoned, and that the Straits Government took steps for acquiring an accurate knowledge of the present condition and resources of the different States composing the Malay peninsula.—Overland Singapore Free Press.

SARAWAK.—It was reported that Lanun pirates had appeared off the coast, and Captain Brooke was about to despatch three gun-boats to cruise off Tanjong Sirik and try to intercept them.

KEDAH.—The Zephyr has brought Kedah close to Pinang, and our European residents are beginning to take advantage of the means thus afforded of visiting a State purely Malay in everything but its civilisation, which places the chiefs and population of Kedah so much above those of Pera. Two parties have lately visited the celebrated Elephant Rock, and the last and most numerous have also succeeded in ascending Kedah Peak, Gunong Jerai.

PROGRESS IN SIAM.—The King of Siam appears to be very earnest at present in his desire to introduce European habits and institutions into his capital. Very recently he engaged an English lady as governess for the Royal family, and he is still advertising in the Singapore papers for a band-master. The steamer Chow Phaya, which left Singapore March the 30th, carried with her a superintendent and deputy superintendent of police and fifty Malays, as the nucleus for a police force at Bangkok. The Siamese Government was desirous that the policemen should be natives of India, and applied to the Straits Government for assistance in engaging them, but it was found that Act XXIV. of 1852 would render the parties hiring these men liable to punishment as crimps, and therefore only Malays could be taken.

EXERCISING THE CHOLERA.—The Chinese in Singapore have been expending large sums on processions and other ceremonies with the view of driving away the cholera. As long as the comfort and convenience of the rest of the population is not interfered with, there seems no great objection to the Celestials propitiating the choleraic influences in the mode which seems best to them. But they have not placed any restraint upon their indulgence in noise and crowded processions, and have made the principal route to the square through Circular-road and Kling-street a scene of confusion and danger. On the 14th April Circular-road was completely obstructed by processions,—joss paper was burnt at the sides of the street, while crackers were incessantly exploded in all directions. Many persons were unable to reach their offices, others who tried to pass through the crowd were exposed to great danger from the state of fright into which their horses were thrown by the crackers which were cast before them, or amongst their feet. No attempt was made apparently, by the police to exercise any control over the affair.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the Dutch mail steamer we (Singapore Free Press) have Batavia papers to the 31st March. The rainy season in Java was unusually prolonged, and much mischief was still being occasioned by the rivers overflowing their banks, and destroying the roads, crops, &c., and carrying away bridges and embankments. The Handelsblad states that in the eastern part of Java, in the residences of Bezuki, Proboling, Pasuruan, and Sourabaya—thus in the most flourishing provinces of Java, where, as it is wont to be remarked, the forced culture system has spread so much wealth—a famine prevails at the present time; rice was selling at more than double the usual price, and had risen to 18f. per picul. The news of this came quite unexpectedly, and the Handelsblad blames the Government for not having known what was likely to happen and taken preventive measures in time. The true state of things appears to have come so suddenly upon the local authorities that they were obliged to telegraph the news to Batavia. Rice was being despatched from all places where there were stocks, and the Resident of Sourabaya had persuaded the Chinese rice merchants not to ask more than 12f. a picul for what they had on hand. The rice harvest was not expected for two months. The crops on Bali and Lombok had turned out very indifferent, and instead of 2f. to 3f., the usual prices, it was selling there at 6f. to 7f. per picul. A telegram received from Sourabaya states that pirates were harassing the coast near Menado. They had captured 200 persons and had also taken a schooner of the value of 12,000f. The steamer Relch had been unsuccessful in finding the pirates. On the 19th February some fighting took place between militiamen and soldiers; several persons were wounded on either side. Private letters from Batavia state that a report prevailed that the pirates had plundered Menado, captured 200 men, and looted the Government offices and treasury.

Lieut. G. H. Basevi.

REGIMENTAL INTERPRETERS.

No. 375.—H.E. the Gov.-gen. in Council is pleased to direct that, until further orders, whenever it is found necessary, owing to the absence of any qualified regimental interpreter, to appoint a "passed" officer to be station interpreter, such officer shall receive the full staff allowance (Rs. 60 a-month), the allowance for stationery (Rs. 10 a-month), and also the moonshee allowance (Rs. 30 a-month), unless, in regard to the last item, there should be any regimental moonshee at the station, in which case his services are to be made available when required.

2. The appointment of such a station interpreter would only be necessary at a large station, as a general rule; and on his appointment the duties of unpassed interpreters with regiments at the station would cease, the station interpreter performing all the duties requiring a qualified officer.

3. When the appointment of an unpassed officer as station interpreter is unavoidable, he will receive half the staff allowance, or Rs. 30 a-month, the stationery allowance, and also, when the services of a regimental moonshee are not available, the moonshee allowance of Rs. 30 a-month.

April 1.—No. 376.—The underment. officer is permitted to proc. to Eur. on furl.:—

Capt. H. O. Hitchins, art., for 2 years, new regs.

Military Letters.

PAY TO GENERAL OFFICERS—STAFF CORPS.

No. 330.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 51 of the 15th ult., are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your letter No. 337, dated Dec. 9, 1861, forwarding copies of a letter No. 2761, dated Sept. 25, 1861, from the Government of Bombay, and of your reply, intimating that it was intended that the three years during which an unemployed general officer of the staff corps, who may not be required to remain in India, is (by p. 97 of G.G.O. No. 332 of April 10 last, and para. 33 of my Despatch No. 27, dated Jan. 18, 1861) to be allowed to receive pay on the Indian scale, should be the first 3 years after his promotion to that rank, or after his ceasing to be employed, as the case may be.

2. The reply is entirely in accordance with the intentions of H.M.'s Government.

The New Currency.

Financial Dept., Fort William, March 19.—No. 43.—Act XIX. of 1861 having come into operation on the 1st inst., it is important to guard against any misapprehension among Treasury officers as to the wishes of Government in regard to the action of district officers generally in promoting the introduction of the new currency.

The new currency notes are now a legal tender in certain districts, as specified in the notification cited in the margin [Financial notification No. 1, dated 3rd January, 1862], and must necessarily be received when tendered, in payment of demands of Government of every description; but silver can only be demanded as of right in exchange for notes at the several presidency towns whence they have been issued.

It is the desire of Government that, as far as possible, every facility may be afforded by local officers for cashing notes, and that every legitimate means may be employed to promote, generally, the free circulation of the new currency; but it is equally their wish that there may be an entire absence of any thing which could be construed into a desire to force the circulation, or in any way interfere with the free action of the community in resorting, at their own time, and in their own way, to the use of the currency notes. Officers will recollect that the Government have no direct interest in forcing the paper currency, and that any Act which leads to such suspicion will only retard the period when confidence may be fully established, and the community reap the benefit of an improved circulating medium.

It may be expected that there will be a tendency to employ the new notes to a considerable extent as a means of remittance and for small amounts among private parties, and in localities distant from banks, it may be desirable that the Government should give facilities for this purpose; but it would be very objectionable if this were carried so far as to interfere with the legitimate operations of private enterprise, or with the system of supply bills to which the public are accustomed.

Much, in matters of this description, must necessarily be left to the discretion of the local officers; but, without incurring risk of inconvenience, it may be prescribed, generally, as the rule to be observed:—

1st. That notes are to be received in payment of all demands of Government, but are for the present to be paid only when parties receiving payment do not object.

2nd. That notes are to be cashed at places where there are no branch banks acting as agents for the Government currency, and then only to a limited extent, and for small sums as an accommodation to private parties or travellers, at the discretion of treasury officers.

3rd. That supply bills are to be paid generally, at the option of the holders, either in coin or notes, subject to such instructions as may, from time to time, be received from the deputy auditor and accountant-general.

4th. That notes should never be returned to the presidency except under the direct instructions of the deputy auditor and accountant-general.

5th. That a report as to the progress of these measures should, from time to time, be furnished to Government, and should the local officers foresee any difficulty as likely to arise, they should at once report it.

Published by order of H.E. the Governor-general in Council.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE—CIVIL SERVICE.

The foll. miscellaneous circular, issued by the Sudder Court, is published for general information:—

1. By orders of Govt., dated April 29, 1856, and May 6, 1859, judicial officers were permitted to absent themselves from their stations during the adjournment of their courts on the civil side, provided no delay occurred in commencing the trial of criminal cases when committed by the magistracy.

2. Arrangements being now authorised under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the substitution of periodical sessions in lieu of daily sittings in the Courts of Session, the Govt. have approved of the adjournment being extended to the criminal side of the courts, and have granted judicial officers permission to leave their stations for the whole period of the adjournment. Such officers as have charge of gaols will make due provision for the care of the gaol during their absence, communicating the same to the Inspector-general of Gaols.

3. The Govt. have further authorised the courts of the district moonsiffs being adjourned for one month in each year, on the understanding that the number of cases which those officers are expected to decide during the year shall not be diminished.

4. The several courts will in future be adjourned simultaneously from the beginning of May in every year.

CHARGE OF FORGERY AGAINST BABOO JOYKISSEN MOOKERJEA.

SUDDER COURT.—MARCH 31st, 1862.

[CRIMINAL SIDE.]

PRESENT.—C. B. Trevor and H. V. Bayley, Esqs., Judges.

Government and Kally Kisto Chowdhry v. Joy Kisto Mookhopadhy.

Crime Charged.—Causing or procuring the forgery of a pottah.

Counsel for the Prosecution.—Messrs. Clarke and R. V. Doyne, and Baboo Sumbhoonath Pundit.

Counsel for the Prisoner.—Messrs. A. T. T. Peterson and J. Newmarsh; and Baboos Ramapershad Roy and Baney Madhub Banerjee, committing officers.

The prisoner was brought to trial at the Sessions held by Mr. J. E. S. Lillie, Additional Sessions Judge of Hooghly, who, not having agreed in opinion with the Law Officer who sat with him on the trial (the former acquitting the prisoner and the latter convicting), referred the case for the orders of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut.

REMARKS BY THE SUDDER NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

The trial of Joykissen Mookerjee, for causing or procuring forgery, has now again come before us in consequence of a difference of opinion between the Sessions Judge of Hooghly and the Law Officer who sat with him; the former would acquit the prisoner of the crime of which he stands charged—the latter finds him guilty of that crime.

Having disposed of four legal objections raised by the prisoner's counsel, the Court proceeded as follows:—

The charge against the prisoner is that of having, to use the words of clause 3, section 4, regulation 2 of 1807, procured or caused a forgery of a pottah, in the name of Petumbur Bose, dated 18th Assar, 1267, or 30th June, 1860.

The prisoner pleads not guilty.

The direct evidence connecting Joykissen Mookerjee with the forged pottah consists of the depositions of four persons—Ramessur Ghose, Tarachand Koylea, Moodhoosuden Ghose, and Kisto Ghose. The material evidence of Ramessur Ghose, as given on the 11th December 1861, was to the effect that, on a day in the month on which the collaruth occurred, and after that festival, he was summoned by one Oodub Sirdar at his house about half-past seven o'clock in the morning; that he was kept for some time with some others in the ten-annas cutcherry, and then Kisto Goomashta and Oodub Sirdar took him, with Tarachand Koylea, Sreemunto Sirdar, and Nusiram Bagdee, to Joykissen Mookerjee's cutcherry at Ooterparah, where they arrived about nine or half-past nine; that Kisto and Oodub Sirdar did not tell him anything, but merely said that the Baboo has called you; that on being brought before Joykissen Mookerjee he told witness that the Dhurs had already given him an ijara, and ordered him to sign a pottah which was lying on the table, and to be a witness; that he (witness) objected, saying the Dhurs are not present, therefore he could not become a witness to that pottah. That Joykissen Mookerjee said: "I am already farmer of the 10-ans. share of Muklah; if you do not become a witness I will put you to all sorts of trouble and drive you away from the village;" that he (witness) then signed through fear; that Joykissen told Tarachand, Sreemunto and Nusiram also to sign the pottah; but he only with his own eyes saw Tarachand Koylea sign the pottah; that it was about nine or ten a.m. when he signed the pottah, and afterwards, at the order of Joykissen it was given to Kishto Gomashta, and a Brahmin, and was taken to Serampore to get the aforesaid pottah registered; that he (witness), Tarachand Koylea, Kishto Gomashta, a Brahmin, and two Nugees, of Joykissen went together in the carriage to Serampore; that on arriving there he told Kishto Gomashta that he could not speak a falsehood, and if he was taken before the hakim he would speak the truth; that on this Kishto Gomashta and the two Brahmins consulted and went towards the magistrate's cutcherry; that shortly after Kishto Gomashta brought two or three men and said to him (witness) and Tarachand Koylea, "you may go home," and that they went home accordingly; that he did not complain to the magistrate immediately of the force that had been used towards him. 1st, because he was under the impression that as he had not been required to appear at the registry office, he would not be required to give evidence; 2nd, from fear of Joykissen Mookerjea; and 3rd, because that fear was only removed on the deputation of the police jemadar to the village, when he was inclined to present the petition; that there was a confusion at the village from the date of his return from Serampore; that five or six days afterwards he saw the Dhurs, Hureehur and Dulal, in Muklah, conversed with them, and told them of his having been forcibly made to sign the pottah, and of his having been carried to Serampore; that he had also about the same time a conversation with Kalikisto Chowdri about his having taken the farm of the five annas of Muklah, and that he can swear that he did not sign the pottah at Muklah; that in the evening of the day previous to that on which the petition was presented to the foudzary, a nugdee of Joykissen Mookerjea came to fetch him, but he did not go with him; that he gave instructions to Lokenath Roy—Mooktear having gone to him, of his own accord, to prepare the petition, telling him what to write—but the Mooktear did not read out to him what he had written; that he had once before gone to register a deed for Joykissen Mookerjea, but he does not recollect what the deed was.

The material evidence of Tarachand Koileah, the next witness, given on the 6th April, 1861, was to the following effect:—One or two days after the ooltaruth, Oodub Sirdar, a Nugdee, about seven or eight o'clock in the morning, called him; that Kissen Ghose Gomashita and Oodub Sirdar took him, Ramesar Ghose, Sreemut Sirdar, and Nusiram Paik, whom they had previously collected one by one at the cutcherry of Joykissen at Ooterparah; that he did not know when he left his house for what purpose he was called, but when he arrived there Joykissen said that Doolihurn Dhur had granted him a lease of five-annas of Muklah, and desired him to be a witness; that he (witness) said that he did not know where Doolah was, nor when he granted the lease—how, then, could he be a witness? that the Baboo thereupon said that he granted the lease and had gone;—"don't you fear, but be a witness," adding also that he was the farmer of the ten-annas share, and if he (witness) did not put his signature he would remove his house; that witness can recognise and does recognise the pottah marked B to which he affixed his signature; that being in great fear he did not remember whether any other person signed before him or not; but he only saw Ramessur sign his name; that he was in the cutcherry about two hours when Joykissen ordered that he and Ramessur should be sent to the Register of Deeds at Serampore; that, consequently, they were taken by Kishto Gomashita and the unknown person and two or four Nugdees. He forgets, while in a carriage drawn by horses belonging to Joykissen Mookerjea, that he objected before Kissen Gomashita to go for the purpose of registration to Serampore; but was compelled to go by Kristo Ghose and the Nugdees, according to Joykissen's order; that he stood near him whilst Kishto Ghose and the unknown person carried the pottah into the Registrar's office with a Mooktear whom he did not know; that he and Ramessur remained in a carriage under a fir tree for two hours, and when Kishto Gomashita came out he told them to go home; that he, witness, told the Dhurs some days afterwards, but whether before or after he presented the petition to the magistrate he does not remember; that he knows Joykissen Mookerjea very well, and therefore is quite certain in saying that he saw the Baboo in the cutcherry of Ooterparah; that he did not sign the pottah in five annas cutcherry of Muklah; that Nussiaou is a mal-paik of the five-annas share of the Dhurs, and Sreemunt was sometimes employed by the Dhurs; that he does not remember whether he saw Bogwan Mirdah's name on the pottah or not; that Ramessur, on his being told to sign the pottah, refused, and he refused himself; that the petition represented by him to the magistrate was written by Lokenath Roy, to whom he (witness) stated all particulars; that the petition was not read out by Lokenath before he signed it; and that he went to Lokenath of his own accord, and that he was not recommended by Rajkissen Mitter; that the delay in the presentation of the petition occurred through fear, which was removed by the deputation of the jemadar of the thannah to the village; that he was not put in charge of any Nugdees on the night preceding the presentation of the petition.

The deposition of the third witness, Mudoosudhun Ghose, given on the 12th of December, 1861, was on material points to the effect:—That one day about evening time, in the month of Assar last year, about three or four days after the ooltaruth, he was taken alone by Oodeen Nugdee from his own house to the cutcherry house of Joykissen Mookerjea; that he saw there Petumber Bose, and two other parties whom he does not know; that Joykissen Baboo pointed Petumber out by name, and said that he had taken an ijara of five-annas share in Muklah, in the ostensible name of Petumber, and that he had made him (deponent) a witness, and that he declined to become a witness, and said he should not be able to become a witness; and thereupon the Baboo said, "What fear is there; you will have to go whenever the authorities send for you." Still he stated he should not be able to become a witness; that nothing more occurred and he returned home; that he never before that day had been in Joykissen's house nor in his service, nor been a witness for him, nor had Joykissen told him anything before that time; that Joykissen did not ask him to set his mark to the pottah; that as he in April last said he did it, it may have been so, but, on recalling the matter to memory, he (witness) is sure that on his refusal to set his mark, the Baboo told him he himself had set it; that these circumstances he told to Kissen Paik, and to Tarachand Koila, and Narain Ghose, some three or four days after he had mentioned this to Nussarian; that he told no one else; that he told the circumstance to Narain and Tarachand on their passing his house, after he had told this to Nussarian; that there are four Moodoosunduns in Muklah, including himself; that he mentioned in his former deposition, as in the present, that the Baboo pointed out Petumber Bose to him.

The fourth witness, Srikrishno Ghose, could not be found when summoned on the remand of the case. But the material portion of Joykissen Baboo sent for him one day and told him that he had taken a farming lease of five-annas share of Muklah in the name of Petumber Bose, and had made him a witness thereto, and had had the deed registered; that he, witness, said that he did not witness the execution of the deed, neither were the Dhurs present, or he would be unable to become a witness; whereupon Joykissen said that, "If you are summoned before any Hakim you must say that the deed was executed in your presence;" that he refused to do so, and went away; and that Joykissen then said that he had already a farming lease of ten-annas share, and that if he would not consent he would punish him (witness), and drive him from the village; that after this communication with Joykissen he went of his own accord with Nusiram Paik to the Dhurs, and communicated it first to Hurryhurdhur at his house in Chinsurah, and that the Dhurs said they had farmed out the five-annas, not to Joykissen but to Kally Kisto, and desired him to pay rent to the last-named person; that he told the Dhurs what had occurred before he filed the petition in the Criminal Court at Serampore; that the Dhurs did not call him when they went to Muklah to give possession to Kally Kisto, and that he does not remember whether he was at home or not when they gave possession; that he directed to Mooktear the purport of the petition, but the Mooktear did not read it out to him, and there are words in the petition which he did not dictate; that the delay in filing the petition was in consequence of his being an illiterate man, and of his having to consult some people; that he never saw Tarraknath, Petambur Gomastah at Muklah. But Kisto, the gomastah of the ten-annas share sometime in Srabusa, and Abador demanded the rent of the same five-annas share in the name of Petumber Bose, that the five-annas cutcherry was in Kallykissen's possession from the end of Asin, but is now left unoccupied.

On an attentive consideration of all the circumstances connected with the conduct of these four witnesses, we arrive at the conclusion that there is not the least ground to suspect them of being parties voluntarily, or under fear, to a conspiracy against Joykissen Mookerjea; their petition of the 14th July is that of persons wishing to avoid, if possible, the consequence of an offence which they had committed, either voluntarily or involuntarily, without accusing the prisoner at the bar. The step of presenting a petition at all they must have taken probably with the advice of the Dhurs, and we see nothing to lead us to think that the evidence of these witnesses was affected by the delay which occurred before they were made witnesses; that evidence in the main is in accordance with their statement in the petition of the 11th July, and the delay which occurred seems to have been caused more from the apathetic proceedings of the magisterial authorities than from the act of the prosecutor; for after these witnesses had been once charged with forgery, it was for the authorities, and not for the prosecutor, to remove them from the dock to the witness-box, though eventually they were so removed on the application of the prosecutor.

But the evidence against the prisoner does not rest on the unsupported testimony of these four witnesses. It has been urged by the counsel for the prosecution that all the circumstances connected with the forged document assist and support the present evidence, and lead irresistibly to the presumption that the forgery of the pottah in Petumber's name was caused and procured by the prisoner; that, from the evidence, it is clearly proved that up to the present time Petumber Bose is his servant; that under the circumstances Petumber could have had no personal benefit in forging the pottah; and that the only person whose object was served by the forgery was Joykissen Mookerjea; that it was impossible that Petumber unaided could have done what was done; that the machinery employed belonged all to Joykissen, and not to Petumber; that the prisoner made common cause with Petumber though he had ample knowledge to put him on inquiry; that it follows by irresistible inference from those proven facts that Joykissen was a party to the forgery. All these allegations of the counsel for the prosecution are met and denied by the counsel for the prisoner. It, therefore, only remains for us to state the result at which we have arrived, after a consideration of the contending arguments of counsel.

That Petumber Bhose was a servant of the prisoner up to 1264 is admitted, and that he has since regarded Joykissen as his patron and visited him at Ooterparah we think undoubted; but the evidence for the prosecution has failed to put before us distinctly the fact that he at the time of the execution of the pottah in his name was in any particular service of Joykissen Mookerjea; he was simply a hanger on of his, and a frequent visitor at Ooterparah. To this extent the evidence reaches, and to any probable inference derivable therefrom, but no further.

Again, having held that the pottah in the name of Petumber Bhose, alleged to have been executed on the 18th Assar was a forgery, it follows that it must have been executed with a view of opposing that actually granted to Kally Kisto on that date; but there was no contention, nor is it pleaded that there could be any between that person and Petumber; and it is most unlikely that Petumber unaided would have attempted by forgery to oppose a bona fide pottah granted by the Dhurs to Kally Kisto with Hureehur Mookerjea as security; what, then, was the contention between them must have been between the prosecutor and some one who had an object in the satisfaction of his own strong will; and the record points only to one such person, and that person the prisoner at the bar.

Again, we are entirely of opinion that it was most improbable that Petumber unaided should have done what he has done. That he, an unknown and uninfluential person, should have been able to procure support to a pottah which has been declared to be a forgery from strangers is improbable; and that he should, himself unknown, moreover, have embarrassed his case with double proof by introducing the Amulnamah witnessed to by strangers to him, is more improbable. Such conduct could only have been pursued by parties having larger influence in Muklah. The two parties with such influence in Muklah are the Dhurs and Joykissen Mookerjea. It was clearly not pursued by the former; it is therefore a probable inference that it was by the latter.

That the prisoner made common cause with Petumber Bhoose, and at the same time separated his case from him, seems to us to admit of no doubt, and this seeming by contradictory conduct is reconciled by his counsel by the consideration that Joykissen Mookerjea saw that he was from the very first aimed at by the prosecution; that he consequently supported Petumber Bhoose's pleas as a defence to himself, believing in their truth, but, as it appears, having been deceived by him, and he also entered upon a separate plea of personal ignorance of the whole matter. It was quite possible for Joykissen Mookerjea to have consistently adopted the line of conduct which his counsel alleged to have been his, but he has not done so. He states in his defence, as facts within his own knowledge, that Petumber Bhoose, in the month of Bysack, came to him at Ooterparah to ask him whether he had any objection or not, or to his taking a lease of the five-annas, and he replied, "None at all."

Now this statement is, on our finding, regarding the pottah of Petumber Bhoose, a clear falsehood, told with the object of supporting the forged pottah of Petumber. It is not, as suggested by the learned counsel for the defence, an admission strongly evidencing innocence; in making it, therefore, Joykissen has pledged himself to the truth of that pottah, and by that act has made common cause with the forger; and it follows that he has laid himself open to the inference as to guilty knowledge of the forgery which such joint action warrants.

What, then, is the defence by which the prisoner meets the foregoing evidence adduced against him? The defence is that the whole case is one great conspiracy against him, concocted by the prosecutor, assisted by the prisoner's brother and nephew, Rajkissen and Hurrihur Mookerjea, and that he was totally ignorant of the forgery of Petumber Bhoose, and was, in fact, deceived by him; that the forgery was, as far as he is concerned, motiveless, and his connection with it is not supported by any credible evidence.

That the brother and nephew of the prisoner are deeply mixed up in the prosecution, and that between those persons and the prisoner a deadly feud exists, cannot admit of doubt. That, again, Hurrihur Mookerjea has, subsequently to the date of which the ijarah pottah in favour of the prosecutor Kalikisto was executed, taken a putnee lease from the Dhurs of Muklah, paying them a large premium and a rent which, during the pendency of Joykissen Mookerjea and Kalikisto's leases, will entail upon him a loss of Rs. 1,000 a-year, is undoubted; but this enmity, and this transaction, so favourable to the Dhurs, do not of themselves necessarily prove a conspiracy to accuse Joykissen Mookerjea falsely of the offence of which he stands charged, that enmity and the transaction above noted may together stand as cause to the effect seen in the position of the prisoner; but they may also form together the means by which a charge of an offence actually committed by a most powerful person has been substantiated. Which of these conclusions is the correct one it is now the Court's business to determine. On consideration of the conduct of the Dhurs throughout this prosecution, we see no reasons for receding from the opinion which we have all along entertained of it. It seems to us to be in the main clear and straightforward, and their evidence throughout seems to us to disclose things very much as they actually occurred. The original petition presented by them was presented not with the view of making Joykissen Mookerjea a criminal but of preserving their own right; and though the incident in the railway station detailed by Meglall in his first petition as being but remotely connected with the present charge has not been proved by other testimony to be correct, still we see no ground for discrediting it, or thinking that it is merely an early step of a series of steps by which the conspiracy against Joykissen Mookerjea was at last matured. Viewing the conduct of the Dhurs in this light, and considering the enmity existing between Joykissen Mookerjea and his relatives, the putnee lease taken by Hurrihur Mookerjea from the Dhurs is quite intelligible. It is a transaction entered into to bind the Dhurs to his (Hurrihur Mookerjea) interests, and to prevent their yielding to possible and probable solicitations on the other side. Though European nations do not regard with favour transactions, entered into with such motives, still amongst the natives of the country such conduct is not unfrequent, and it is not necessary, looking to the standard of action to brand such conduct, however objectionable, with the harsh epithets which one would be inclined to use, when looking at it from a different and higher standard. If the circumstance of the Dhurs allowed them to take advantage of the offer of Hurrihur Mookerjea, the position of this last person as the representative of one side in the family feud would entirely account for his making it. Considering, then, the conduct of the Dhurs, of Hurrihur Mookerjea, and the ostensible prosecutor, Kalikisto, in what appear to be their proper light, we see not the slightest grounds for attributing to these parties a conspiracy against Joykissen, under which conspiracy the evidence of the four witnesses was given alone, and all the auxiliary circumstances have been concerted and brought to bear upon him.

But in addition to the conspiracy raised against him by the prosecutor, Hurreehur Mookerjea and the Dhurs, prisoner in his defence pleads that he has been the victim of another conspiracy—a conspiracy entered into by Petumber Bhoose and his own ryots to deceive the Dhurs, and deceiving him also as to the genuineness of the pottah alleged to have been executed in his favour by the Dhurs; that whilst labouring under that deception, he had joined in a defence with Petumber Bhoose, which at most must be considered as expressing his belief in the truth of those matters within the knowledge of Petumber Bhoose, and not within his own cognizance; but that being undeceived by the verdict of the court as to the nature of that pottah, he was simply to relinquish his former erroneous belief and to fall back upon a simple denial of any knowledge concerning that pottah or the means by which it was prepared.

There is one fact pleaded by Joykissen Mookerjea, which, if credited, connects him with a knowledge of all Petumber Bhoose's proceedings as to the farm of the five-annas share of Muklah on the 6th of the month of Bysack, if, as alleged, Petumber, when going according to agreement with Taruknauth Ghose to meet the Dhurs at Muklah on the 6th Bysack after the Dhurs had agreed to give him the five-annas share of Muklah in farm, though it right to call in on the prisoner, his own master, at Ooterparah, for the purpose of asking whether he had any objection to his taking the lease. It is quite clear that not only Petumber's desire to take it, but the Dhurs willingness to give it, must have been communicated to the prisoner. If so, he must in Bysack have had full information of the particulars of the fraud which Petumber was then concocting. Nevertheless, we are required to believe that, notwithstanding the information actually communicated to him in Bysack by Petumber, and with the means of further information in his possession, he remained completely deceived by the artful contrivances of his old servant, up to the date on which the Court's sentence, declaring the deed a forgery, was passed, a victim of a deception assisted and supported by his, Joykissen's, own servants and ryots, and with consummate effrontery played off before him on the 6th Bysack, 1267. We do not believe, we think it right to say, one word regarding this pretended ignorance. To believe it would be to believe what, considering the position of the prisoner in Muklah, is a moral impossibility; but, it is unnecessary to pursue this point further, for we totally disbelieve the statement of the prisoner, that Petumber Bhoose went to him in Bysack at all. From the evidence on the record we believe that the concoction of the pottah in favour of Petumber Bhoose was done in a hurry after information of the lease granted by the Dhurs to the prosecutor had been acquired, that is between the 18th and 20th Assar, 1267; and that statement was made by the prisoner solely with a view of assisting the false statement of Petumber Bhoose. By making it the prisoner has identified himself with the entire cause of falsehood pleaded by Petumber Bhoose; and consequently, any plea of ignorance of the act of Petumber Bhoose or of deceitful practice by that party towards the prisoner, entirely fails.

The evidence of witnesses Lokenauth Roy, Ramcalpo Chuckerbutty, Lukhinarain Chuckerbutty, Odit Sirdar and Kisto Sirdar, which the prisoner has adduced to contradict that, for the prosecution is of no avail, and leaves it untouched in any essential particular.

In opening his remarks, Mr. Newmarch dwelt much and forcibly on the intelligence and degree of European civilisation which characterised his client, the prisoner before them, and which has led him to perform duties to his countrymen, and to endeavour to diffuse amongst them that intelligence and civilisation by founding libraries, dispensaries, schools, and municipal institutions, and, in fact, has led him to put himself at the head of the public spirit of his countrymen; and, the counsel added, that if his client were found guilty it would be a damning fact to his community, the more so as the blow would be inflicted by the hands of a brother and nephew.

In cases where a reasonable doubt exists as to guilt, the Court would give some weight to good general character; but in a case like the present, where there is no room for doubt, such general character can avail nothing: it can only tend to cause regret that one who undeniably has done so much public good for his countrymen should, in the instance before the Court, have shown himself so totally forgetful of his duty to himself as to allow himself to rush into crime through the instrumentality of poor and ignorant tools.

On the whole evidence, then, we find the prisoner guilty in the words of Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation 11 of 1807, of procuring the forgery of a pottah in the name of Petumber Bhoose; and we sentence him to five (5) years' imprisonment, with labour, without irons—the labour, in consideration of his age and position in life, commutable to a fine of Rs. 10,000.—Englishman.

DAJEE SAHEB KIBEY, the well-known Sewker of Indore, has been presented with a Khilut by the Hon. Mr. Frere, on behalf of the Government. The interesting ceremony took place in the Town-hall, in the presence of the Hon. Mr. Robertson, Mr. Venayekrow Wassudew, Oriental translator to Government, and a number of visitors. The Khilut consisted of a pearl necklace, a mundil, a pair of gold border shawls, a piece of kinkob, a shela, two pieces of mahamoodies, and a number of silver China articles of superb make and workmanship. Paa-sooparie, rose-water, nose-gays, &c., were then distributed. Dajee Sahab Kibey received the Khilut in a very polite manner, and thanked the hon. gentleman who presented it. Dajee Sahab belongs to the old and renowned family of Tattia Jog, of the time of Sir John Malcolm. This family has always exercised much influence with the chiefs of Indore and the political residents for the good of the people and the welfare of the State. It will be remembered that Dajee Sahab Kibey was honoured with an invitation at the Governor general's Darbar at Allahabad, where he was publicly thanked by the Viceroy for his services to the British Government.—Bombay Gazette.

To Correspondents.

We have received a letter, signed "A Hindu," objecting to a paragraph, headed "Nawab of the Carnatic," which appeared in our issue of the 15th April. The signature was superfluous. The assumption, self-sufficiency, and impertinence displayed in the said epistle are quite conclusive as to its native paternity. We are willing, however, to investigate the merits of the case itself more closely than we have hitherto done, and should we find ourselves in error shall have no hesitation in rendering full justice to the distinguished client of our correspondent.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

To be, or not to be—that is the question still asked and unanswered with regard to the Maritime Canal across the Isthmus of Suez. According to M. de Lesseps, success is a certainty. In fact, in a few months more the waters of the Mediterranean are to find their natural exit down the Red Sea instead of returning to the Atlantic by the way they came, through the Straits of Gibraltar. At a recent meeting of the shareholders, in Paris, he was loudly applauded as he recounted his triumphs over shifting sands, apathetic workmen, and mud without cohesion. The time was at hand when the sarcasms of milord Palmerston and the ungenerous incredulity of selfish and perfidious Albion would be alike rebuked by the spectacle of gallant barks laden with the wealth of Ophir, or of the Isles of Tarshish, serenely navigating the canal which was destined to be the great highway of nations that had outlived the insensate rivalries of their nonage. Then, we are told with untiring persistency that many thousands of acres along the banks of the canal are to be restored to their pristine fertility, and the desert made to blossom with the rose. The picture of the undertaking in its present state was sufficiently alluring, but the future prospect was bathed in the roseate hues of an eastern morning. Unhappily for the shareholders, the ingenious Frenchman appears to have drawn largely upon his imagination for the facts he enunciated, and to have utterly confounded what he desired with what he knew. Owing to the unseasonable curiosity of an intelligent but unsentimental English gentleman, the actual condition of the works at the close of 1861 has been revealed to the world, and M. de Lesseps' idealistic descriptions become as valueless from a practical point of view as the idle fancies of an habitual dreamer. It so happened that Mr. Percy Badger* had resolved to spend the winter in Egypt; and having no particular occupation on hand, he came to the conclusion that a visit to the Suez Canal might dispose of a few days not altogether unprofitably. Having applied in a straightforward manner to M. de Lesseps himself for permission to explore the works, his request was immediately granted, and throughout his journeyings the utmost kindness and hospitality were invariably exhibited by the French assistants. Not the slightest attempt was ever made to conceal from him the nakedness of the land, or to turn him aside from any investigations that might militate against the prospects of the undertaking. On the contrary, every facility was afforded for following out his own plans, and Mr. Badger gratefully acknowledges the perfect fairness and courtesy he experienced from every servant of the Company. And yet the temptation must have been very strong to hide from the outer world the knowledge of the fact that nearly one-half of the entire capital had already been expended without producing any tangible results. But let us hear what Mr. Badger has to say on this subject.

On the 6th December he left Cairo and travelled by railway to Zagazig, "a large town comprising many well-built houses, a good bazaar, several mosques, two steam cotton factories, and a number of spacious warehouses." In the channel of the ancient canal of Arsinoë now flows the modern El Wadi Canal, which the Isthmus Company are extending to Lake Timsah, with the intention of subsequently continuing it even to Suez. The valley itself, or Wadi Tomeilat, properly begins at Abbasee, "a large village, with a mosque, extensive stabling for cattle, barns, and many sâkias, or wells for irrigating wheels." The cultivable area of the El Wadi is estimated at upwards of 120,000 acres, which, with proper management, might be converted into one vast garden. This fine estate has been sold to the Company by the present Pasha for £84,000, including a palace recently erected, and all the sâkias and buildings upon the property. Mr. Badger is of opinion that this bargain "will prove more remunerative than the prospective advantages of the maritime canal." European improvements are about to be introduced, the land is to be brought under tillage, groves of trees are to be planted, and new mosques are to be built at Abbasee and Tell-el-Khir—no doubt to the entire satisfaction of those who formerly derived so much pleasure from taunting the East India Company with their alleged support of false religions. A colony will ere long be established in this fertile and pleasant valley, and French influence fairly rooted in the interior of the country. In this neighbourhood Mr. Badger overtook crowds of fellahs on their way to the works, for the most part mere lads, torn from their villages and compelled to labour for their daily rations. M. de Lesseps, indeed, has always given out that no compulsion was exercised towards the workmen, who cheerfully offered themselves for the sake of the good and regular wages they received. They themselves assured Mr. Badger that they would gladly pay to be allowed to remain at home, and it frequently happens that at the expiration of their term of servitude they hasten back to their families without so much as asking if any money is due to them. A new arrangement, moreover, was about to be made, by virtue of which the Company were to pay the Viceroy, and he was to settle with the fellahs—in what manner may be easily imagined. The result, however, will partially compensate his Highness for the large sum he has invested in this visionary scheme.

The actual operations of the Company commence at the Râs el Wâdi. Here begin the two newly excavated canals: the navigable one, sixteen feet wide, and from three to four feet in depth; and the canal alimentaire, five feet wide, and two to three deep, intended to provide the labourers on the larger canal with fresh water, and at present terminating in a small lake, or reservoir, at Bir Abou Ballah, about fourteen miles to the eastward.

A very characteristic circumstance is mentioned by Mr. Badger with reference to a group of mounds, covering ancient ruins, not many miles from Râs el Wâdi. The Arab name of Tell el Maskoota has been changed by the French into Ramsès, as if it were on the site of the Ramesis of Scripture. The next station, or Mahfar, would then be the Succoth of the Hebrews, and a spot now called Roobet el Booz, near Lake Timsah, would be identified with Pihahiroth, where the Israelites encamped before crossing the Red Sea. The object of this elaborate falsification of landmarks is simply to suggest that the Red Sea formerly came as far north as the Bitter Lakes, and that, consequently, there will be no great difficulty in bringing its waters back to their ancient bed.

It was at El Gisir—or El Seuil, as it is called by the French—that Mr. Badger first struck the proposed Maritime Canal. Only a few years ago this was an absolute desert, wholly uninhabited, but now there is a resident population of 250 Europeans, and about 1,000 Arabs—the number of the latter varying according to the progress made in the works:—

"The Frank quarter comprises two broad streets of single-storied houses, with verandahs running along the front, besides numerous offices, workshops, warehouses, and other public edifices, all of solid materials, and remarkably neat in outward appearance. Le Bureau des Campements is an extensive building, with two rows of offices attached to it. The blacksmiths' department, as also that of the carpenters, and La Scierie (in all which steam-engines are employed), are on a grand scale, with a large staff of mechanics attached. Then there is the public butchery and bakery, and a commodious hospital, with suitable quarters for the surgeon and his assistants. Adjoining the latter, a neat church is being built, with a cross surmounting the roof in front, and something very like a crescent over the apse, whether a fancy of the architect, or a designed concession to Islamism, I cannot say. Other structures for pious purposes are in contemplation, among which is a home for a sisterhood of the Sœurs de la Charité. All this is independent of the Arab quarter, which is situated a short distance from the European, and occupies a considerable site. Here also there are a number of small well-built houses and shops, a good bazaar, and a vast assemblage of the ordinary native reedhuts. The bazaar seemed plentifully supplied, many petty merchants finding it profitable to frequent it even from Cairo to Alexandria, besides the more regular traders from the nearer places on the cultivated borders of the opposite desert. A Cadi is maintained by the Company to administer justice among the Arabs, and a Mufti or Imam to conduct their religious services. These latter will shortly be celebrated in a large mosque, which is being built at the Company's expense, not far from the native town."

This long but interesting extract fully illustrates the extraordinary faculty for organisation possessed by our neighbours across the Channel. Fortunately, this talent for combined operation, so important for the purposes of military conquest and occupation, is not equally well adapted for success in colonisation, which depends upon individual action and self-reliance. But it is evident that the French are gradually gaining a secure standing point in the eastern districts of Egypt. Not only have they obtained possession of the Wâdi Tomeilat, but by means of their canal alimentaire they will ere long become virtual masters of Suez, while their deference to the religious faith and ceremonials of the inhabitants is already winning the hearts of the Arab population. Well, then, might Lord Palmerston declare that "the object which some of the promoters of the canal scheme have in view may probably be accomplished, even if the undertaking in its entirety is never executed." Thus far, certainly, very little progress has been made in excavating that canal. El Gisir is situated on the plateau of sand which extends eight miles in a northerly direction from Lake Timsah, and it is here that the works may be said to end, for to the southward nothing has been done beyond marking out the course of the future channel. The canal itself is to be one hundred and eighty-two feet in width, but as yet only a few disconnected excavations have been made over one-half of that breadth, and in no instance to a greater depth than eight feet, though the depth of water proposed is twenty-six, and to attain which on the plateau it will be necessary to make a cutting of from thirty to eighty feet deep. To the south, it is said, the plateau of Serapeum will present equal difficulties, besides several of smaller extent. As yet the Maritime Canal is represented by the Rigole, a channel of twenty-two feet wide and four deep, and which can hardly be said even to exist across the marsh or lake of Menzaleh, where the embankment crumbles away as fast as it is thrown up. M. de Lesseps, indeed, affirms that at the depth of six feet below the bottom of the lake the soil consists of extremely tenacious clay, and it may be that he is justified in making such an assertion, but at present the clay remains undisturbed. Near Port Saeed not a trace of the Rigole was observable, "not a spot visible large enough to afford standing-room for a straggler from the flights of wild duck, cranes, waterhens, and other fowl, which skimmed incessantly across the lake." Port Saeed itself "contains an European population of 1,500 souls, including many families. The houses are erected in regular lines intersected by wide streets, and many of them are goodly structures not devoid of an air of comfort as well as taste. In these are located the officers and other employes of the company, and not a few are tenanted by independent tradesmen, and other resident traffickers, who are liberally supplied with suitable quarters at the Company's expense." Of course, there is a restaurant, cafés, billiard-rooms, and the other adjuncts of French civilization; but the safe approach to the canal is very little further advanced than when this point was first selected as its embouchure. It is proposed to run out two piers at least two miles into the sea, but thus far only one has been taken in hand, and of that no more than one hundred and fifty yards have been constructed. There is even good reason to fear that the obstruction to the current caused by the piers when completed will result in a bar that will effectually close the mouth of the harbour, in spite of steam dredges and other contrivances. In short, as we have all along insisted, the entire scheme is but "the baseless fabric of a dream," and one that is likely to leave many a wreck behind. As a commercial speculation it is an utter illusion, to use no harsher a term, though it may very possibly answer the covert purposes of its projectors and supporters. Private individuals may be ruined, but M. de Lesseps and the Emperor Napoleon III. have views too large and comprehensive to be affected by any such paltry considerations. France wills it—let the world obey.

A NATIVE GENTLEMAN ON TAXATION.

A SHORT time ago a Bill was referred to the Select Committee of the Viceregal Council of Calcutta, having for its object the consolidation and amendment of the law relating to Stamp Duties. The Committee reported in favour of the Bill, with the exception of the Rajah Dinkur Rao Rugonauth Bahadoor, who stated his objections in a separate Minute, which for many reasons is worthy to be reproduced. In the first place, the style is remarkably piquant, while the reasoning is plausible but feeble. The paper, however, is chiefly noticeable as showing an educated native's opinion on taxation, and also evincing a decided adaptability for the duties of an Opposition. The Rajah begins by laying down as a rule that all taxation should be simple, and then protests against a multitude of enactments on the same subject, which only confuse and harass the people. The Government itself has recognised the inexpediency of obstructing commerce by numerous small taxes, and yet it retains the Stamp Duties and similar taxes which constantly interfere with the routine of business, and do not "leave the people free to perform their occupations." Nothing can be done without paying a tax of some kind, and in many instances the taxes themselves engender other taxes. The Income-tax may be a heavier burden than Stamp Duties, but then it is only for a time, whereas the others are permanent. In England, it is said, taxes are willingly paid, but the Rajah doubts if this can be true of direct taxes. Evidently he has heard something of the "ignorant impatience of taxation" which has been attributed to our countrymen, and is therefore little disposed to credit their cheerful acquiescence in the tax-collector's demands. But, he adds, if they do happen to be partial to direct taxation, they greatly differ from the people of Hindostan, who have "a special dislike" to it. He might have added that the English pay for their own independence and self-government, while the Hindoos are called upon to pay in order that they may be held in dependence and governed by an alien race. However, he politely omitted to draw that obvious distinction, and quietly remarked that "the subjects will not be pleased to pay any such taxes." The Income-tax, he thinks, ought to embrace all other kinds of taxation, and should be increased or diminished as may be required by the exigencies of the State. No doubt the Government must be placed in a position to provide for all its necessary expenses; but this may be done without needlessly offending the prejudices of the people. The Stamp Duties, "falling upon learned and ignorant people of every class," are not calculated to give satisfaction, and should, therefore, be withdrawn. Possibly the worthy Rajah might find that an Income-tax which varied in amount every year would be as little palatable as a number of small taxes which do not fall upon all alike, but principally on those who, being more or less engaged in business, may be supposed to possess sufficient capital to make them interested in the preservation of order and perfect security. As his Protest is a curiosity in its way, it is here subjoined, in extenso :—

SEPARATE REPORT OF THE HON. RAJAH DINKAR RAO RUGONAUTH BAHADOOR.

I entirely disagree to the passing of this Bill. It is my opinion that taxation should be simple; a great variety of kinds of duties and taxes should not be imposed on the people. The detailed objections that occur to me are as follows.—

1. It is said that this Bill is a consolidation and amendment of the former Acts; but this is not its meaning, for in it, to a greater or less extent, the Stamp Duty is increased. It is plain that this Bill is not for consolidation and amendment only, but for increasing the Stamp Duty.

2. It is only a short time since three Stamp Acts (XXXVI., XL., and LI. of 1860) have come into force. It is proper to alter laws when essentially required. The object of this Bill is supposed to be to explain the Stamp Laws to the people. But before the people can have made themselves acquainted with the former Acts, they will receive another on the same subject. Some of the people are learned, and some are ignorant. How are they all to get themselves acquainted with all these new Acts, and on what should they place their confidence as a settled law? If in this matter they make any mistake in using the stamps, they will have to pay a fine. In such a state of things they must be bewildered and harassed.

3. The Government, in consideration of the comfort of the people, and that there should not be any obstruction to commerce, has dispensed with Road Taxes, and Customs Duty on many articles, and levied it only on a few things. This is a sound policy; but it is clear that such taxes as these Stamp Duties and other similar taxes are opposed to this policy, because they lead to constant interference, and will not leave the people free to perform their occupations.

4. It is well known how much all classes of people complained against the Income-tax, though they submitted to it from the necessity of the case. The Stamp Duty is a kind of tax open to the same class of objections, that it constantly interferes with the tax-payers.

5. The people are required to pay several kinds of taxes, such as Income-tax, License-tax, Land-tax, Municipal-tax, Customs Duty, Chowkedaree, and many others. The present Bill not only leaves all these, but also taxes many of the transactions connected with them, such as receipts, leases, &c.

6. It will be seen from the above that very few are left free to perform their occupations without perpetual taxation.

7. Though the Income-tax is on a larger scale in comparison to the Stamp Duties, yet the effect of both to obstruct a man's business is the same. It will also be seen that the Income-tax is a temporary impost, but these Stamp Duties will perhaps be permanent.

8. It is said that people in England pay willingly numerous kinds of taxes. I should doubt if this be true of direct taxes. But, even if it be so, it is to be observed that there is a difference between their customs in this respect and those of the people in Hindostan, who have a special dislike to direct taxation.

9. It is evident that the subjects will not be pleased to pay any such taxes; but the Government has to provide for the extraordinary expenses of the State. It is therefore compelled, for a temporary purpose, to impose such taxes. For this reason it has already levied the Income-tax, wherein all sorts of incomes are included. As all man's profits are embraced in the Income-tax, it is not consistent to impose on him any other tax. When it is incumbent on the Government, in order to make up a deficiency, to increase such taxation, the people no doubt must obey. But they will, I think, deem it better and more easy to pay once for all any tax which may be right in principle and properly assessed, rather than be harassed with several kinds of taxes and duties. They will wish, after having paid one tax, to be left to follow their several occupations unmolested.

10. Though the Government is compelled to impose taxes to make up what is deficient, yet it is right and proper that the Government should consider what taxes may be most easily paid by its subjects, and what will give them least cause of dissatisfaction. I do not think that the Stamp Duty on the general transactions of life, falling upon learned and ignorant people of every class, is such a tax.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 6.

HERAT.

MR. GRIFFITH asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether, with respect to events now occurring at Herat, any proceeding or operation diplomatic or military, would be undertaken, either by the English or Indian Government, which would have a tendency to pledge this country to any act of hostility against Persia, or to any step for or against any of the other Powers of Central Asia, without the full knowledge and consent of Parliament and the country?

LORD PALMERSTON: The only answer I can give to the hon. member is that neither her Majesty's Government nor the Indian Department have received any information whatever tending to show that any such operations against Herat have been undertaken by the Shah of Persia. And, putting all the circumstances together, we are inclined entirely to disbelieve the report.

CEYLON.

Mr. LYALL called attention to the expediency of transferring the government of Ceylon from the Colonial to the Indian Government. After a disquisition upon the political history of the island, its government, revenue and expenditure, trade and commerce, he argued that the change he proposed, which was a mild one, would, among other advantages, relieve the mother country of the military expenditure—£110,000 a year—with very slight addition to the military charges of India; Ceylon, moreover, having a surplus revenue. He concluded by moving for certain papers.

Mr. C. FORTESCUE, remarking that the reasons assigned by Mr. Lyall for the transfer of the colony from one department to another were not founded upon its ill-government, urged that its flourishing state, and the content of all classes of its population, showed that it was not likely the colony would be a gainer by the change. The Government did not think it their duty to make such a proposal; but if the people of Ceylon thought they would gain by the transfer, and Parliament approved it, the Colonial-office would be quite ready to hand the administration of the colony to another department.

Lord STANLEY was of opinion that, upon the whole, it was better to leave the administration of Ceylon as it was. Among other reasons upon which he founded this opinion were the increase of labour and responsibility which the transfer would cast upon the already overburdened Indian Government, and the absence of any desire for the change on the part of the people of the colony.

The motion for the papers was agreed to.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 12.

THE BISHOP OF COLOMBO.

Earl POWIS called attention to the fact that, in the recent notice of the translation of the Bishop of Colombo which appeared in the Gazette, it had been stated that the right reverend prelate had been "consecrated." That not being usual in the case of a translation, he wished to know whether it was the intention to introduce a new principle in such cases.

The Duke of NEWCASTLE explained that the right rev. prelate had not been re-consecrated, and that the error had arisen in sending the notice to the Gazette. It would be remedied in the next number of the Gazette.

MADRAS RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that they may now congratulate the shareholders on the completion of their main or south-west line, 406 miles in length, from Madras to Beypoor. During the half-year ending the 31st of December last, the opening of additional sections increased the mileage of this line under traffic to 271 miles. The 1st of April was fixed for opening sixty-five miles more, and on the 1st of May it was intended to open the remaining intermediate portion of seventy miles, thus completing the 406 miles from coast to coast. Of the north-west line twenty-seven miles are now open for traffic, and a further opening will take place in the course of the year. During last year 1,124,817 passengers were carried on the company's lines without the occurrence of any accident. The works on the Bangalore branch were proceeding satisfactorily. During the half-year ending the 31st of December, on the eastern division, the receipts for 2,712 first-class passengers, amounted to £1,216; for 14,540 second class passengers, to £1,846; and for 424,104 third-class passengers, to £18,470—the total number carried being 442,440, and the receipts £21,541. The entire number of passengers carried on the south-west line in the half-year was 512,733, of whom 53½ per cent. were of the third-class. The total traffic receipts on both lines amounted for the half-year to £56,187, and the expenses to £38,984, or 69 per cent., including £12,077 for maintenance, leaving a net balance of £17,503. The receipts for carriage of railway materials formed 19½ per cent. of the gross receipts of last year. The mileage averaged 240 miles,—the receipts per mile £230; the receipts per train mile, 4s. 8½d., and the expenses per train mile, 3s. 2½d., against 3s. 9½d. and 2s. 11½d. respectively at the corresponding period of the preceding year. The capital account shows that £5,020,515 had been received, and £3,192,873 expended, leaving a balance of £1,827,642. The interest account states that £917,126 had been received from the Government for guaranteed interest, and that £93,899 of net revenue had been paid by the company to the Government in reduction of the advances for guaranteed interest.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE DR. WOLFF.—The Rev. Joseph Wolff, whose decease is announced to have taken place a few days since at the vicarage of Isle Brewers, near Taunton, of which parish he was incumbent, was of Jewish parentage, being the son of a rabbi, and was born in 1795. While still a youth, he became a Christian convert, and was sent to study at the Collegio di Propaganda at Rome. During this period he avowed certain objections to the doctrines of the Catholic faith, which led to his being banished by ecclesiastical authority from Rome; and his education was subsequently completed at Halle, Vienna, and Cambridge, where he was for a short time a pupil of the late Rev. C. Simeon. In 1837 he was ordained a deacon by the Bishop of New Jersey, United States, and a priest in the following year by the Bishop of Dromore, Ireland. The celebrity of Dr. Wolff, however, was chiefly connected with his various missionary expeditions, more particularly to Bokhara, his declared object being partly a search after the lost ten tribes of Israel, and partly to obtain the release of Colonel Stoddart and Captain Conolly from the hands of their inhuman captors. The results of his wanderings in that remote and inhospitable region were subsequently published, and attracted sufficient attention to ensure the sale of several editions. He also published his "Travels," from time to time, in six volumes, and an autobiography, the profits of which he devoted to the re-building of the spire of Chichester Cathedral. Among his literary and theological honours was that of Doctor of Theology in America, and the degree of LL.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. He was nominated to the living of Isle Brewers in 1845, which he held to the period of his death. He married Lady Georgina Walpole, sister of the late Earl of Orford, by whom he was left a widower in 1859. His son, Mr. Drummond Wolff, filled the post of private secretary to Mr. Disraeli while that gentleman was in office.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADORS.—These interesting foreigners appear to have been much pleased with the House of Lords, and are said to have been even "amazed" at its magnificence, as well as at the labyrinth of lobbies, committee-rooms, libraries, and the like through which they were conducted. The greatest part of the afternoon of the 4th instant they spent at the Zoological Gardens, in which they manifested extraordinary interest and pleasure. The native draughtsman who accompanies them busied himself without intermission during the visit in sketching, with great rapidity and fidelity, beasts and birds which struck his fancy, while another of their retainers took copious notes of all he saw. They have visited Lancaster's gun factory, by which they were particularly attracted. In fact, machinery of all kinds has a sort of fascination for them, and they never tire of watching every exhibition of it of which they are afforded a sight. At the International Exhibition they seemed to take especial interest in the sewing machine. They expressed a wish to see it put through its motions, and graciously informed the bystanders that it was already familiarly known at Jeddo, where the Tycoon's principal lady was an adept in its manipulation. They were subsequently taken to the pianos, where some waltzes were played for their entertainment. They did not, however, go into very great raptures about the music, but watched the motion of the hammers with great curiosity. On Wednesday they visited Woolwich and seemed much struck with all they saw. Their usual coolness, which is often evidently constrained, forsook them, and one of them clapped his hands at witnessing the various forms into which wood was cut in the carriage department. On Sunday, attended by some of the principal officers of their suite, they paid a visit to Kew-gardens, returning by way of Richmond Park in the evening to their quarters at Claridge's Hotel. On Saturday they went to see the London Docks, the Thames Tunnel, and the Tower. With the docks they are said to have been greatly struck, as affording a clearer insight into the immense extent of our commercial relations than they had previously been able to realise. They afterwards took lunch with some of the authorities. At the entrance to the Thames Tunnel they were received by Mr. Mason, the superintendent, who explained, through their interpreters, the circumstances attending and the machinery employed in its construction. On being conducted over the Tower they were amazed with the enormous quantities of arms stored there. In the evening they were present at the assembly of Lady Palmerston, at Cambridge-house. On Friday, at half-past three o'clock, they went in state to the Foreign-office, by appointment, and had an interview with Earl Russell, to whom they delivered the autograph letter addressed by the Tycoon to her Majesty. The Marquis of Lansdowne was present at the ceremony, as were also Mr. Layard and Mr. Hammond. The interview lasted about half an hour, and in the course of the conversation the Ambassadors, through their interpreters, said they were delighted with all that they had seen in England, and with the courteous reception they had everywhere experienced. On the same day they paid a lengthened visit to Buchanan's archery warehouse in Piccadilly. Mr. Buchanan took great pains to explain the nature and virtues of the various rare woods employed by him. He also instructed his visitors in the English method of shooting, while they in turn exhibited the mode adopted by themselves in Japan. On Thursday they were invited to lunch with a select party at Grosvenor-house, by the Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster, and were afterwards present at an assembly held by the Marchioness. On Saturday Dr. Mitukury and Dr. Matski-Ko-an, accompanied by Otah, an officer of the mission, paid another visit to King's College Hospital. They were received by Mr. W. H. Smith, the chairman, Mr. Fergusson, Mr. Moody, Mr. Cheese, Mr. Sambrooke, and Dr. Guy, and afterwards proceeded to the operating theatre, which was unusually crowded on the occasion. Among the distinguished foreign visitors were Dr. Despine, Dr. Duchenne, Sir Joseph Olliffe, and others. The Japanese occupied the reserved seats. A number of important operations were performed (as usual, under the influence of chloroform) by Mr. Fergusson and Mr. Bowman. At the conclusion the Japanese visitors expressed their gratification with the attention shown to them by the hospital staff, and presented them with pipes, specimens of coins, china, drawings, and autographs. They seemed to receive with much pleasure the cartes de visite and autographs offered to them in return by the medical men connected with the hospital. The Ambassadors intend shortly to pay a visit to Liverpool, where, it is said, they will be entertained at a banquet by the Mayor and corporation.—Times.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The monthly supply of £300,000 bills on India drawn by the India Council was offered on the 7th for public tender, in the usual manner, at the Bank of England. The minimum price declared was the same as on former occasions—namely, for bills on Calcutta, 1s. 11½d. per rupee; and on Bombay and Madras, 2s. The amount tendered for at and above the minimum rate was about £275,000, but the tenders for bills on Bombay being in excess of the total to be drawn on that presidency, applicants will in that instance receive only about one-half of the sums sought. The tenders for bills on Calcutta and Madras will be accepted in full.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 6s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo, bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA
BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,
Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.
"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopaedic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, considerably lower than those now charged by this or—they believe—any other Company, but differing from the old system in respect that no reduction takes place on the insured returning to Europe or proceeding to any other part of the world not chargeable with an extra premium. According to this method, the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

The following are Specimens of the New Rates:—

The BEARD, WHISKERS, and MUSTACHIOS are real lised by the use of

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL

possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

DR. ROBERTS' CELEBRATED OINT-

MENT, called "THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND," is confidently recommended to the public as an unfailing remedy for wounds of every description, a certain cure for ulcerated sore legs, if of twenty years' standing, burns, scalds, bruises, chilblains, scorbutic eruptions, and pimples in the face, sore and inflamed eyes, sore heads, &c. Sold in pots at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 11s., and 22s. each.

Also his PILULE ANTISCROPHULE, confirmed by sixty years' experience to be, without exception, one of the best alternative Medicines ever compounded for purifying the blood and assisting nature in all her operations. Hence they are useful in scorfula, scorbutic complaints, glandular swellings, particularly those of the neck, &c. They form a mild and superior family aperient, that may be taken at all times without confinement or change of diet. Sold in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 22s. each.

Mr. Northway, Chemist, Great Tower-street, London, says, "The Ointment is much valued by Soldiers in Foreign Service."—Oct. 26th, 1857.

Sold wholesale by the Proprietors, BEACH and BARNICOTT, at their Dispensary, Bridport, and by the London Houses; and retail by all respectable Medicine Vendors in the United Kingdom, the Colonies, &c. Observe.—No Medicine sold under the above names can possibly be genuine, unless "BEACH and BARNICOTT, late Dr. ROBERTS, Bridport," is engraved and printed on the Government Stamp affixed to each package.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

HELPS TO HEALTH.—The most incredulous would resort to these noble medicaments could they but read one tithe of the testimonies of cure voluntarily forwarded to their discoverer. Mr. Woodale, of Barby, near Selby, was cured by these means of a malignant abscess, which had resisted the best available surgical skill and every other application recommended by anxious friends. This Ointment exerts the most cooling and sedative powers in all inflammations, and readily heals sores, ulcers, inflamed wounds, scalds, burns, and all scorbutic eruptions on the skin. The severest cases of local and general inflammation, the foulest ulcers, and the most unpromising skin diseases are cooled, eased, and subdued by the judicious use of Holloway's remedies.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been projected for the purpose of purchasing the stock, outstandings, interest, and goodwill of the business well-known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, opposite Government House in Calcutta, and its branch business and premises at Allahabad, and for conducting the same under a Board of Directors.

Seldom has a better opportunity presented itself for a profitable investment of capital than is afforded by the scheme now submitted to the public for taking over the lucrative business which, for the last twenty-seven years, has been worked so successfully by Mr. D. Wilson and his partners. Mr. Wilson, wishing to retire from the Indian management of the concern, has arranged for the sale to the Company of the entire stock in trade, outstanding debts, furniture, fittings, goodwill, &c., &c., of the business upon most favourable terms, and the Junior Members of the Firm are willing to carry on the same under a Board of Directors, and to take a considerable number of Shares in the Company, so that no doubt can reasonably exist as to the continued success of the undertaking.

The introduction into this country of the Joint-Stock Company's Act, limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount subscribed, opens out in India, as it has done in Europe, a wide field for enterprise and for the employment of much capital hitherto undeveloped and unemployed.

In England and on the Continent, Companies of the nature now proposed, under the system of limited liability, are well supported. Magnificent hotels have sprung up in London, and in several of the great towns in England, such as the "Great Western Hotel," the "Easton Station Hotel," the "Westminster Palace Hotel," the "Opera Colonnade Hotel," and the "International Hotel Company," the latter with a capital of £350,000, besides others, some of which are returning to the Shareholders dividends varying from 15 to 30 per cent.; the Boards of Direction of such Hotel Companies being composed of gentlemen of the highest standing and position. If in Europe undertakings of this nature are carried on under such superintendence and with such results, why should not the capitalists of this country avail themselves of the opportunity to erect into a similar Joint-Stock Company a business which has been successfully worked for so many years, and, as evidence of the fact, has amassed a large capital from the profit of its working, besides having paid to retired partners sums amounting to nearly six lacs of Rs. (£60,000)?

Such have hitherto been the results of the working of the business, that, taking its operations for the past two years (although a period more unfavourable could scarcely be selected), and looking at what has been achieved during that time, it is fairly to be presumed that, under the proposed new management and with a healthier state of trade, the profits would return the capital in about six years. The books of the Firm will be open to any Shareholders who may desire to satisfy themselves on this point, and to show the value in which the Shares of the Company should be held, a certificate from Mr. David Wilson will be issued with each allotment, guaranteeing to the holder, during the space of two years, an annual dividend of not less than 12 per cent., in addition to which Mr. Wilson will take one-quarter the whole number of Shares.

Remarkable as the success of this concern has been under private management, it is not unreasonable to expect even greater results when it shall be owned by a large Proprietor in every service in India, and when the Executive shall be under the superintendence of a Local Board of Directors.

Many gentlemen, now retired from the Indian Services and residing in Europe, have expressed a wish to invest largely in the Shares of this Company, but it is the object of the Projectors to place them, as far as possible, in the hands of residents in India, whose interest it will be to support the Company, and whose patronage and influence must naturally be of great advantage to it, and, moreover, being in the country, they will be able to exercise a healthy and legitimate control over the management. The Projectors desire also, if possible, to allot the available Shares to those only who may be seeking a safe and permanent investment for their Capital, and not to mere speculators for the rise in value which, no doubt, will take place after allotment.

This Company offers very materially from all new projects where the business has to be made, and where there must necessarily be more or less of risk, uncertainty, and delay; the capital often having to be subscribed for years before any profit can accrue. In these respects, the position of the Great Eastern Hotel Company will contrast most favourably with such undertakings, and it will be prohibited by the Articles of the Association from speculation of whatever nature beyond the requirements of the business.

Of the Capital—15 lacs (£150,000), in 6,000 Shares of Rs. 250 (£25) each—one quarter, or 1,500 Shares, will, as already stated, be taken up by Mr. David Wilson, and a considerable number by the Directors and by the Junior Members of the Firm, leaving little more than one-half of the Shares to be offered to the public.

The qualification for a Director to be not less than 25 Shares.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—From the Indian Empire of January 15, 1862.

We are not about to write of the Great Failure of which, we conclude, in her original form, we have heard the last. With her upper deck taken off her, and other judicious alterations, it is possible she might make money in good hands, but we should be sorry to have anything to do with her under any circumstances. The Great Eastern that invites our present remarks is to be the name of a new Joint-Stock business, embracing the Auckland Hotel and the Hall of All Nations, belonging to Messrs. D. Wilson and Co., the prospects of which may be seen in our advertising columns. We do not know whether the great American hotel is a mere individual speculation, or whether they are carried on by companies, but until the Limited Liability Act was passed, we had nothing that could now be called a great hotel in all England. That Act has given birth to many spirited speculations of this character, and others are about which promise to eclipse in magnitude everything that has yet been accomplished. Calcutta is to have its Joint-Stock Hotel, and undoubtedly the business that is daily and has been for years, carried on by a firm, will give occupation to directors, a managing director, and assistant managers; the complaint of D. Wilson and Co. that we have most frequently heard has been the want of prompt attendance in the public rooms; and it is obvious that such an immense establishment can only be carried on with entire satisfaction by a system of division of labour, which a firm may originate, but cannot, with all the casualties it is exposed to, rigidly carry out. We feel an unusual interest in this prospect, not for its completeness, or its soundness, but because it is, as it were, an epitome, and an extraordinary epitome, of the life and labour of one man. We read in the announcement of £150,000 as the purchase money, and in the fact of £10,000 more—the value of the premises—not included—and all made within the recollection of tens of thousands of persons around us—a success that is marvellous, and that only extraordinary industry, energy, and natural abilities of no

The Company's Agent in London to be Mr. David Wilson, whose intimate knowledge of the requirements of the business makes this appointment especially desirable. The Agent will, however, be subject at any time to removal at the option of the Shareholders assembled at any general meeting.

Mr. Wilson to have the privilege of appointing a Director to represent himself when absent, so long as he shall hold not fewer than 500 Shares.

Two Auditors to be appointed by the Shareholders at the first half-yearly general meeting, and a re-election of Auditors to be made once in two years. Auditors to be eligible for re-election. No Auditor to be a Shareholder.

It is proposed that the accounts should be closed and audited once in each year; but that two half-yearly general meetings should be held, one on or about the 10th of October, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Directors on the accounts and on the business done during the period ending on the 30th June, and declaring such Dividend as the Report will warrant; and the other, on or about the 10th of April, for receiving the audited Accounts and Reports to the 31st December and for declaring a Dividend.

The business to be conducted and the accounts to be made up in strict conformity with the provisions of the Limited Liability Act.

The whole of the extensive premises where the business is now carried on, stretching from Waterloo-street to Rameemuddy Gully, and known as the Auckland Hotel and Hall of All Nations, will be taken on lease for twenty-one years at a monthly rent of Rs. 3,300 (£330), with the option of renewal for a like period at the same rent, or the purchase within two years of the entire premises for 4 lacs and Rs. 30,000 (£43,000). Care will be taken, in drawing out the Articles of Association, that sufficient power be given to the Directors for that purpose or for increasing the Capital, should such an arrangement appear hereafter desirable.

Holders who may be disposed to pay the full amount of their Shares on allotment, will have their proportion of profits calculated accordingly; but as this may not suit all parties, the calls will be made in the following order:—

Ten Rs. (£1), on each Share must accompany the application,

First Call of Rs. 40 (£4) on allotment,

Second Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made after three months,

Third Call of Rs. 75 (£7.10s) to be made six months after allotment,

Fourth Call of Rs. 50 (£5) to be made nine months after allotment, and all amounts so paid will carry dividends from the respective dates of payment.

Applicants for Shares will be required to pay into the Bank of the Company, to be held in trust for them, Rs. 10 (£1) per Share on every Share applied for; and in the event of the Directors allotting to the applicant a less number than applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the payment of the first call on the Shares allotted. Should no allotment be made to the applicant, the deposit lodged with the Bankers will be returned without any deduction.

As the public will naturally expect to have some particulars of the bulk of the Capital required for this undertaking, the Directors, after examining the books of the Firm and from other sources of information, believe the following figures to be nearly correct; but the Company will not be bound by them until they have been correctly ascertained:—

|  | Rs.       | £.     |
|--|-----------|--------|
| Outstanding good Debts                               | 4,500,000 | 45,000 |
| Deduct 15 per cent. for Contingencies                | 67,500    | 6,750  |
|  | 3,82,500  | 38,250 |
| Goods, Stock on the Premises                         | 3,50,000  | 35,000 |
| Goods, in transit from Europe                        | 1,45,000  | 14,500 |
| Goods, and Bill Stock at Allahabad                   | 1,60,000  | 16,000 |
| Furniture, Plate, &c.                                | 1,48,000  | 14,800 |
| Fittings, G.s, Water Pipes, and other Trade Fixtures | 17,800    | 1,780  |
| Steam Engine and Ice Machine                         | 21,000    | 2,100  |
| Purchase of Goodwill                                 | 75,000    | 7,500  |
| House and Premises at Entally                        | 18,800    | 1,880  |
| House and Premises at Allahabad                      | 62,500    | 6,250  |

Forms of Application and Prospectuses of the Company may be obtained of the Managing Director, at the Office of the Company, on the premises.

Application for Shares must also be made to the Managing Director of the Company at the Office, accompanied by a receipt for Rs. 10 deposit on each Share applied for, paid to the Bankers of the Company.

mean order could possibly have achieved. Mr. Wilson has well gained the comparative retirement he seeks, and that magnificent range of buildings, and the wonderful business and connection he is making over, should on every occasion be spoken of, and pointed out to the young adventurer without capital and without friends, as showing what may be accomplished by a man determined to force his way in the world, if he turns advantages as they fall in to good account.

We have heard that this business has made forty lacs of rupees (£400,000); whether this be so or not is immaterial, because its rapid progress is evidence of very brilliant success. It is not twenty-three years since the Waterloo-street portion of premises was a coach-maker's, and many will remember its conversion into the little "Sons Society," the great success of which was the foundation of the fine theatre in Park-street, foolishly allowed by the public to be sold for a sum which multiplied by four would not make it, its furniture, wardrobe, and appointments. From Waterloo-street the whole frontage to Rameemuddy Gully has been gradually annexed, at the same time houses have been purchased and pulled down in the rear, and the result is unquestionably the finest block of buildings of a domestic character in the whole city—indeed, there are few cities with anything like it. Then there are the premises and business at Allahabad—valued at Rs. 1,60,000 (£16,000), but included in the present account of the capital; of them we can say nothing, though they will be familiar to many of our readers. We are hardly called upon to speculate on the prospects of this Company being carried out; it must be considered a settled point, when the share list is to be closed on the 15th ultimo. Mr. Wilson, it will be seen, guarantees for two years a dividend of not less than 12 per cent.

A few Shares having been reserved for the Indian residents at home, any information respecting them can be obtained on application to J. R. WORCESTER, Esq., 5, Laurence Pountney-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 26th April places us in possession of Mr. Laing's Financial Statement, which will be found in another page. For the first time for many years a surplus is confidently reckoned upon, and of an amount altogether unprecedented in the annals of British India. Should peace be maintained, Mr. Laing anticipates a balance in his favour of £1,428,623, which he disposes of to the entire satisfaction of both Europeans and natives. In the first place he raises the grant for Education, Science, and Art to half a million, and that for public works by £380,000. He then abolishes the Income-tax of two per cent. on incomes not exceeding £50 per annum—a tax that produced only £350,000, at a cost of collection estimated at £100,000, and which weighed heavily upon upwards of 600,000 individuals. The import duties are also reduced to five per cent. upon manufactured cotton goods, and to three-and-a-half per cent. on yarn, while that on beer is cut down to two annas per gallon, and on tobacco from nearly one hundred to twenty per cent. ad valorem. On light wines, again, the duty is lowered from three rupees to one rupee and a-half per gallon, and the ten per cent. import duty on paper is entirely removed, as well as the three per cent. export duty on coal and iron, the produce of India. These reductions amount to £475,000, and bring down the estimated surplus to £128,814, after allowing for the £524,813 increased grants for public works and education. Further deducting the £250,000, net proceeds of the 2 per cent. Income-tax, there remains a small margin of £179,814, which, as Mr. Laing justly remarks, "is as low as it is prudent to go." Nor, indeed, would he have ventured to sail so close to the wind, were it not that after paying all that may be due to England on the transactions of the current year, he fully expects "to arrive at the 30th April, 1863, with a cash balance of £16,607,660." The revenue for 1862-63, it may be added, is set down at £43,796,200, showing an increase of £885,110 over that of the preceding year. This brief analysis must suffice for the present, but we shall probably revert to the subject in a future number.

The news from Afghanistan has not yet been contradicted, nor has any explanation been given of Mr. Alison's unaccountable negligence in not apprising the Government of the concentration of Persian troops on the frontiers of that country. Furrak appears to have fallen an easy prey to the invaders, who, by the latest accounts, were in full march upon Candahar. The aged Ameer is said to have gone forth from his capital to oppose the further progress of the enemy, after declaring his resolution to wrest Herat from Sultan Ahmed Jan, or die beneath its walls. Great allowance, however, must be made for the exaggerations of the native news-writer, on whose authority alone any intelligence has apparently reached this country as to the movements in Central Asia.

Sir Bartle Frere arrived in Bombay on the 24th April, and two days afterwards assumed the government of that presidency, on the departure of Sir George Clerk for England.

The Khasiahs are reported to have made another inroad into British territory, but were met by Mr. Inglis, a tea planter, at the head of a small body of rural police, and after a short contest driven back to their own fastnesses.

The Supreme Court of Bombay delivered judgment and verdict in the great Maharaj libel case on the 22nd of April. The Court disagreed: the Chief Justice, Sir Mathew Sausse, for the plaintiff, the Maharaj, on the plea of libel, but finding the justification established—damages five rupees, without costs; the Puisne Judge, Sir Joseph Arnould, for the defendant, Kursondas Mooljee, on all the pleas.

BENGAL.

MR. LAING'S BUDGET.

CALCUTTA, April 17.

In the Council-room, Government House, every available seat was occupied at about half-past ten, and it is unnecessary to say that many more unsuccessfully sought orders of admission. All the members were present with the exception of Bajah Dinkur Rao.

The Viceroy having taken the Chair,

Mr. LAING rose and said—

In bringing forward the Budget of the Government of India for 1862-63, the first point is to state the result of that of 1861-62.

The circumstances of the last Budget were remarkable.

A chronic deficit, continued with scarcely an intermission for 20 years, had added £50,000,000 to the national debt of India. That deficit had been increased by the effects of the mutiny, until, in the three years from 1857 to 1860, it reached the enormous average of £12,000,000 a year, and all the efforts of the Government, aided by the imposition of new taxes which convulsed Indian society, had still left us in 1860-61 with an apparently hopeless deficit estimated at £6,000,000.

This state of things had caused a general and wide-spread alarm, and so affected credit that a loan was well-nigh impossible, while the steady decline of the cash balances seemed to be bringing us rapidly to the point where, without a loan, the expenses of the State could no longer be met.

Under these circumstances the Government of India applied itself vigorously to the further reduction of expenditure—so vigorously that, as I shall presently show, out of an expenditure of £29,000,000 open to revision, a saving of £5,000,000 was effected in a single year. Then, as often happens when a patient suffering from a lingering malady resolutely breaks off his old habits, nature comes to the aid with its restorative powers, and, in a wonderfully short time, he passes from prostration to health. So, in our case, the famine was mercifully arrested; the growing prosperity of the country gave buoyancy to the revenue, the produce of stamps surpassed expectation, and the aspect of affairs changed so suddenly that, after finding myself in January struggling with an apparently hopeless deficit, I was able, in April, to my own great surprise, and I believe that of everyone else, to produce a budget in equilibrium.

If the feeling here was one of astonishment, in England it amounted almost to incredulity.

Indian estimates had been for years proverbially fallacious, and when I went home in June, the first thing every one said to me was, "Surely, this is too good to be true." Even high official authorities thought that I had been too sanguine, and estimated my deficiency at upwards of £1,000,000.

My reply was that time would show; but knowing how carefully the estimates had been taken on the safe side, I felt confident that, provided the military reductions which had been ordered were carried out, the result would confirm the Budget.

It has more than confirmed it, and if things had remained as they were in April, there would have been a large surplus.

As it is, although we have spent £1,458,140 more than was contemplated in April, on public works and opium advances, and have given up the licence tax, we have no deficit.

This result is so vitally important that I am anxious you should understand the process by which the figures are arrived at, and judge for yourselves how far they can be relied upon.

We are now in April, the last month of the financial year, and we have returns of the actual receipts and expenditure nearly perfect, in all cases, for nine, and in most for ten or eleven months.

I will not say that these returns are absolutely perfect, for our financial machinery is new, and you must make new accountants, or make them understand novel forms, in a day. Reforms are being introduced by which we hope to make the machinery of financial administration as perfect in India as it is in England; but in the meantime it is greatly improved, and with returns of all the more important actual results for ten months of the year carefully checked, the margin of possible error in our revised estimates must be very narrow.

Moreover, there is one test which may be applied with unerring accuracy, in ascertaining the general result of our financial situation, viz., that of the cash balances.

If a man makes all his receipts and payments through his banker, and contracts no debts or obligations, the balance in his bank-book at the end of the year must show whether he has or has not lived within his income.

So, in our case, we have incurred no fresh debt during the present year, our outstanding liabilities have diminished rather than increased, and therefore the state of our cash balances affords an answer of mathematical certainty to the question whether we have or have not realised an equilibrium.

But, as in taking the sun's altitude to ascertain a ship's place on the waste of water, certain corrections are necessary, so, in finding the financial latitude of the ship of the State by the cash balances, we must be careful to distinguish between what is real and what is only apparent.

I fear these details are wearisome, but the importance of firmly establishing our actual financial position is so vital that I must ask your forbearance.

THE POSITION.

The apparent aggregate cash balance in the different Treasuries of India on the 30th April, 1861, was £14,608,121.

On the 31st March, 1862, it was £17,690,000, and I will assume it to continue at the same amount up to the close of the financial year on the 30th April, though it showed a large increase in April last year.

The apparent increase of balance during the year is therefore £3,082,000.

But, in the first place, we ought to deduct from the cash balance of last year, a certain amount, not properly belonging to it, consisting of bullion deposited at the Mint for the purpose of coinage. It seems that at Bombay a practice has grown up of leaving large sums of bullion for a considerable time at the Mint, and using the certificates as a sort of large bank notes. The amount of such outstanding certificates, on the 30th April, 1861, was £330,000, and in the balance of the 31st March, 1862, there is no such amount, the operations of the new Currency Act having led to a discontinuance of the practice.

This makes the increase of true cash balance during the year equal to £4,012,000. But from this must be deducted what we owe to England on the balance of transactions of the year.

Our revenue is all received in India, but of our expenditure nearly one-fourth, or about £9,000,000, takes place in England.

This is met to the extent of about £6,000,000 by expenditure on railways, the capital for which is raised in England and retained there, and to a smaller extent by other payments made by India on account of the Imperial Government.

The balance, which, according to the most careful estimate I can make for the current year is £3,000,000, is due to England, and ought to be remitted or set aside for remittance.

In addition to this a remittance of £1,000,000 in bullion was received early in the financial year from England, under the apprehension that the famine might have involved us in serious difficulties. Of this £700,000 only has been returned up to the present time, so that in the entire transactions of the year we owe England £3,300,000.

This reduces the true increase of cash balance on the 31st March, 1862, over the 30th April, 1861, to £712,000. But I am aware of no other corrections, and am totally unable to assign any reason other than that of bona fide excess of income over expenditure why the cash balance should show any increase. This indicates a result better by £570,000 than is shown by taking the aggregate of the separate estimates of revenue and expenditure revised with the experience of ten months' returns of actual results.

In using the figures, therefore, of this revised estimate, I think you will feel that I am very near the truth, and, if anything, rather within it.

Now, what results do these figures show?

First as regards expenditure, which is the key-stone of our financial situation, I invite your attention to the salient fact that out of a total of £29,000,000 of expenditure which was open to revision, we have, in one year, effected an actual saving of upwards of £5,500,000.

The interest of debt, the home expenditure, payments under trustees, and the costs and charges of collecting the revenue, are not susceptible of reduction. On the contrary, the latter charges tend necessarily to increase with the growing prosperity of the country, and the increase of revenue.

Deducting these, the aggregate of military, naval and civil expenditure of every description, was £29,365,066 in 1860-61, and £24,293,787 in 1861-62, the difference being £5,071,279.

And out of this we shall have spent fully £750,000 more on useful public works in 1861-62 than in the preceding year.

The larger part of this great saving is in military expenditure, which has been reduced from

to £12,800,000 in 1861-62.

This is the fruit of the measures by which the native armed force, including military police, has been reduced in two years from 350,000 to 130,000 men, and the European army, in round numbers, from 90,000 to 70,000. I cannot refrain, however, from stating publicly how much the Government of India has been indebted to Colonel Balfour and his colleagues of the Military Finance Department for the satisfactory result we have been enabled to realise.

I have pleasure also in stating my conviction that this large saving, and the further saving which I shall presently show for the ensuing year, have been attained without any sacrifice of efficiency or of the comfort of the soldier. On the contrary, I believe that what with the improvements of modern science in armaments and sanitary arrangements; the increased facilities for moving troops and supplies by roads, railways, and steamers; the concentration and secure hold of all fortresses, arsenals, and artillery; and the weeding out of elements of weakness and danger in the native army; at no moment of our previous history did our military power in India ever stand on such a sound and secure basis as it does at the present day.

The other reductions in the current year have been £126,000 in the navy and marine, and about £1,500,000 in the various branches of civil expenditure chiefly under the head of miscellaneous and contingent expenses.

If we compare the actual expenditure of 1861-62, not with the results of 1860-61, but with the Budget estimate of last April, there is an increase of £1,714,370, of which £1,458,140 is accounted for under the two heads of opium advances and public works.

We shall pay £714,000 more for opium advances than was estimated, owing to the advance of price to the cultivator, and the large increase of cultivation.

As regards public works, it was intended that £510,000 should be transferred to local budgets, and provided for by local taxation. This intention has not been carried out, for a very obvious reason, viz., that new constitutions having been given to the three Presidencies, it would have been manifestly improper to anticipate the action of the local Legislative Councils, in a matter which is so peculiarly their province.

I am strongly as ever in favour of the principle of local taxation for local objects. In fact, if this great empire were to have the roads, the schools, the local police, and other instruments of civilisation which a flourishing country ought to possess, it is simply impossible that the Imperial Government can find either the money or the management. The mere repair of the roads where anything like a sufficiency of good roads has been made, is a matter altogether beyond the reach of any central bureau.

It is of the first importance to break through the habit of keeping everything in dependence on Calcutta, and to teach people not to look to the Government for things which they can do far better themselves.

It is, however, in entire accordance with this policy not to force local taxation upon them by an Imperial fiat, but to leave each Government, with the aid of its own Legislative Council and of its own officers, to work out the problem in its own way, subject only to an Imperial control.

In the mean time we give as much as we can afford towards public works, so as to make whatever may be raised from local sources a clear addition.

In the present year we have not only taken upon ourselves £500,000 which was to have been provided from local taxes, but we have further assigned another £500,000, of which half will probably be spent in the course of the year, viz., £380,000 on account of the 1 per cent. Income-tax, and £120,000 as a special grant for cotton roads.

Apart from these two unforeseen causes of expenditure, viz., opium and public works, the net increase of actual expenditure of 1861-62 over the budget estimate will not exceed £256,130, a result which, in a total Indian expenditure of 36,463,000, will not be considered as inaccurate for a first attempt at a Budget.

The revenue, on the other hand, shows an increase of £1,616,492 on the Budget estimate.

Of this £870,000 arises from land, including sayer and alkarry; £340,000 from stamps; and £370,000 from customs; arising in each case from the estimates in April having been taken with too wide an allowance on the safe side.

Income-tax has yielded almost exactly the estimated amount, or £1,912,990 instead of £1,948,094.

Salt shows a decrease, which can, however, be satisfactorily shown not to have resulted from any falling-off of consumption, but from a large decrease in the stock of duty-paid salt.

All the other branches of revenue show continued buoyancy.

On the whole, therefore, the result is, that although we have remitted the Licence-tax and spent £1,458,000 more than we expected on opium and public works, we arrive at April 1862 with as nearly as possible the same result as we promised in April 1861, viz., with a substantial equilibrium, or as the cash balances indicate, with a surplus of £700,000.

THE ESTIMATES.

Now for the year 1862-63. As the simplest plan, I will begin by taking the Budget as it would stand, with no changes of taxation, and no special addition to last year's grants for public works and education.

The revenue of 1861-62 is £12,011,000,—that of 1862-63 is estimated at £13,796,200, showing an increase of £885,110.

The most important point in this estimate is to know how opium has been taken.

The latest price was Rs. 1,471 per chest. I have assumed that, with the increased supply coming forward after the 1st of January next, prices may gradually fall to Rs. 1,000 a chest, and that, taking the year through, from the 1st of May, 1862, to the 1st of May, 1863, we may realise, on the average, half way between that limit and the present price, or Rs. 1,237 a chest; but, to keep on the safe side, I have taken it at Rs. 1,200.

I believe this to be a fair and moderate estimate, especially as the price is no longer a speculative one, but is apparently based on the bona fide demand of the China market, and has been remarkably steady for some months.

The principal heads of increase in revenue are land, £400,000; stamps, £300,000; and public works, £200,000; the two latter not so much from assumed increase of receipts in 1862-63 as from finding on closer investigation that the actual receipts of 1861-62 had been greatly under estimated. Of the increase in land revenue, £110,000 is a mere transfer from another head, and the remainder is mainly owing to the cessation of the famine in the North-West and Punjab.

The other branches of revenue generally show buoyancy; but, wishing to keep on the safe side, I have, generally speaking, taken them at the figures indicated by the actual results of 1861-62. The general result is that the revenue of 1862-63 would be better than that of 1861-62 by £885,100, supposing no changes to be made in existing taxation.

The total Indian expenditure of 1862-63 is £35,905,521, as against £36,463,309 in 1861-62, or less by £557,788, assuming for the moment no extra grants for public works and education beyond those of this year.

This expenditure may be readily analysed into two parts, as we did in comparing 1861-62 with 1860-61; the first consisting of charges beyond our control, as interest on debt, home charges, and cost of collection; the second of charges open to revision, like those for the Army, Navy, Police, Law and Justice, and Civil Administration.

The former class of charges amounted to £11,043,173 in 1860-61; £12,169,522 in 1861-62; £12,350,500 in 1862-63;

And they will be £11,043,173 in 1860-61; £12,169,522 in 1861-62; £12,350,500 in 1862-63;

The main causes of increase in 1862-63 are, the extension of opium cultivation; of revenue surcharges owing to more work and better administration; of mint charges, owing to copper coinage; and of stamps, owing to increased revenue.

The second class of charges open to revision amounted to £29,365,066 in 1860-61; £24,293,787 in 1861-62; and £23,454,087 in 1862-63, or £839,700 better in 1862-63 than in 1861-62, which was itself £5,071,279 better than 1860-61.

The greater part of this improvement is owing to our military expenditure, which again shows a reduction.

The cost of the army defrayed in India stands as follows for the last four years:—
£20,000,307 in 1859-60;
£15,838,980 in 1860-61;
£12,800,000 in 1861-62;
£12,200,000 in 1862-63.

The saving of £600,000 next year, as compared with 1861-62, is due partly to further reductions of the native force, and partly to the down more nearly to the established strength.

Since the commencement of the present year, the Government has ordered, in addition to the large reduction of last year, the reduction of eight Madras native regiments, eight corps of Bengal military police, and some other reductions, which will have the effect of bringing the total native armed force of every description down to about 125,000.

A still larger saving results from the absorption of European supernumeraries.

During the year 1861, we have had, on the average, fully 4,000 European soldiers in India above our established strength, who cannot cost, including everything, less than £ per head. We have had, also, to provide in 1861-62 for a home military charge almost identical with that of 1860-61.

A reduction is at length effected in this charge, and I am too happy to receive it to scrutinise closely whether it might have been made earlier.

I certainly thought that although it would have been unreasonable to expect England to take back regiments without notice, it was not too much to hope that when the established strength of Europeans for India had been determined upon at home within a very narrow margin of its present amount, as long ago as the autumn of 1860, steps might have been at once taken to stop recruiting and bring the depôts in England down from the excessive strength at which they have been kept for English, not Indian objects, so that the finances of India, then in a very critical state, might have received more effectual aid at an earlier period.

However, "all's well that ends well." We have surmounted our crisis and at length got the European force nearly down to its established strength, and have assurances from home that recruiting is suspended for all regiments still in excess. I have no wish, therefore, to prolong controversy, and although perfectly ready to prove and justify every word I have said on the subject, I am ready, speaking for Indian finance, to let "by-gones be by-gones."

At the same time I am not sorry that public opinion in England has been directed to the subject, and that the Secretary of State can now reckon, as I believe he can, on the support of influential interests, in resisting any attempts to revive the practice, so pleasing to an English Chancellor of the Exchequer, and so displeasing to an Indian one, of keeping 10,000 or 15,000 additional soldiers in England at the charge of India.

The expense of the navy and marine is brought down to £472,000, or £150,000 lower than it was last year, and £576,221 lower than it stood at in 1860-61.

Other charges nearly balance each other. We save £135,000 in police, and spend £110,000 more in the extension of law courts and the administration of justice.

Miscellaneous and contingent expenses are diminished while salaries and superannuations are slightly increased, the cause in each case being mainly a more accurate classification.

The general result is, that we are better, in our voluntary expenditure, by £38,700, and worse in our involuntary expenditure by £281,912, making us better in our total Indian expenditure by £557,788.

On the balance of home charges and receipts, as shown by the estimate sent by the Secretary of State, a copy of which I lay on the table, we have £43,771 less to provide than was estimated for in 1861-62.

But, on the other hand, we have £200,000 more to provide for the excess of railway guaranteed interest over net traffic receipts, a result which is not surprising with such a great extent of unfinished line in course of construction.

This concludes the comparison of 1862-63 with 1861-62.

We are in all £1,286,662 better than in 1861-62, and as the revised accounts of that year showed a surplus of £142,821, we have a surplus in 1862-63 of £1,429,483, irrespective of the changes now to be proposed.

THE SURPLUS.

In the first place, we propose to give £146,453 more than will be spent this year to education, science and art, bringing the grant for these objects up to £500,000.

This amount will not appear inconsiderable when it is recollected that it is more than England gave for education ten years ago, and is even now in a larger proportion to our total expenditure than the present English grant is to that of England. At the same time, it is a small sum compared with the magnitude of the field which we wish to reclaim from ignorance; and I am persuaded that no member of this council will grudge the money for such an object. I will not touch on the mode of applying this increased grant, for any attempt to do so would lead me too far from the proper object of what is merely a financial statement.

As regards public works we propose to provide as follows:—This year, as I have shown, we have provided for £1,000,000 more than was estimated for in April, and have given from Imperial Revenue, first, an original grant of £3,680,000; secondly, an extra grant of £120,000; and thirdly, £380,000, on account of the 1 per cent. Income-tax.

The latter goes to the local governments, in aid of their local funds, and is spent by them, subject only to our general control. They have not spent £300,000 of this money, owing to the late period to which the allotment was made, and, strictly speaking, we might postpone a second year's allotment until twelve months after the first one, and thus throw the bulk of it into 1863-64.

But we think it better to credit the local Governments with the £300,000 standing over from 1861-62 out of the surplus balance of that year, and credit them at once with the further £380,000 due for 1862-63. This will place the Imperial Government in advance instead of in arrear to the local Governments under the Income-tax Act, and give those Governments an opportunity of commencing as much useful work as they can profitably undertake by the next cold season. It will give them, with their own local funds proper, a very large sum of upwards of £1,000,000 available for 1862-63 irrespective of Imperial assignments; but we trust to them not to hurry forward work so as to cause useless expense, especially as any portion of this local money remaining unspent at the end of the year will be carried forward as a balance to the credit of their local funds, and will not affect their next year's assignment.

For the Imperial assignment which is spent under the direct control of our Public Works Department, we propose to give £200,000 beyond last year's assignment of £3,680,000.

We shall thus give in all £4,260,000 for public works from Imperial revenue, and shall provide for an expenditure from all sources, Imperial and local, of over £5,000,000 in the year, of which not above £500,000 will be for military works.

This absorbs another £380,000 of our surplus, and with the increased grant for education, leaves a surplus of £903,510.

The question how to apply this surplus is one for the gravest consideration.

At all hazards we must keep clear of a recurrence of financial embarrassments; and on the other hand, investing as we do so largely in public works, it is not politic to keep up objectionable taxes for the sake of retaining a further money surplus, which would only invite to extravagance.

The question is, can we, or can we not, safely apply our present surplus in relief of taxation?

To answer this it is absolutely necessary to look beyond the present year, and take a general view of Indian Finance.

OPIMUM.

In any estimate of the financial prospects of India, opium necessarily demands our first consideration. We are deriving a net income of £1,000,000 a-year from this source, and if, as is sometimes asserted, this income is altogether precarious, our position is still one of great hazard.

I have thought it right, therefore, to take every means in my power of thoroughly satisfying myself on this head before I ventured to propose any reductions of existing revenue.

The result is, that I can see no reason why the revenue derived by India from opium should be considered more precarious than that derived by England from gin or tobacco.

I believe the cry of the precariousness of the opium revenue has originated very much from the strong aversion felt to it in certain quarters on moral grounds.

This is not the place to go into any lengthened argument as to the moral bearings of the question. I have heard the most contradictory opinions advanced, in perfect good faith, by respectable men who had been in China, some denouncing opium as a deliberate poisoning of the Chinese for the sake of filthy lucre, others contending that it had produced a most beneficial effect by substituting a comparatively tranquil stimulus for the wilder excitement of intoxicating drinks, which led to bloodshed and crimes of violence.

My own belief is that the truth lies between the two extremes, and that opium is neither very much better, nor very much worse, than gin.

This much seems certain in speculating on the probable continuance of a demand for opium in China. Every civilised or semi-civilised race of mankind seems to affect some peculiar form of nervous stimulant, and as the natives of Northern Europe take to alcohol, so the Chinese take to opium. Possibly, in each case, the craving is for something to supply an innate want. The Englishman, the Dane, the German, and the Russian, resort to that, the specific effect of which is to raise the spirits, and produce temporary exhilaration.

The Chinese, whose greatest deficiency, as shown by the whole history, religion, and literature of the race, is in the imaginative faculties, resorts to that which stimulates the imagination and makes his sluggish brain see visions and dream dreams.

Be this as it may, the fact is certain, that under all circumstances and in all climates, as the Englishman is a drinker of beer, so is the Chinaman a smoker of opium.

We have, therefore, at the bottom of our opium revenue one of those great natural instincts of a large population upon which English Chancellors of the Exchequer confidently rely for half their revenue.

It is, of course, theoretically possible, in the case of gin, whisky, rum, and tobacco, that the exhortations of the temperance advocates in the former case, and of the ladies in the latter, might, at any moment, so far prevail, as to induce the population generally to abstain from habits which are in many cases pernicious, and in many more wasteful and disagreeable.

Should they so prevail, the finances of England, and, indeed, of almost every country of the civilised world, would collapse far more suddenly and hopelessly than ours would in India by the failure of opium.

But, as I have said, an English Chancellor of the Exchequer goes on with equanimity, relying on a taxation of 400 or 500 per cent. ad valorem on spirits and tobacco for £20,000,000 of his revenue, and while this is the case, I can see nothing in any general considerations as to opium to prevent us from doing the same.

The question is altogether a specific one of selling price and cost of production. Is there anything in the actual condition of our opium revenue to render precarious the continuance of that which has gone on steadily growing for the last ten or fifteen years?

With the short supply and excess prices of the last two years no doubt this was the case.

We were not in the least degree weaning the Chinese from the use of opium, but we were stimulating the production of a native article, which, although inferior in quality, was fast entering into competition with us.

But the question is not one of maintaining a price of 2,000 or even 1,500 rupees a chest for Indian opium.

Measures have already been taken which will increase the average production of Bengal opium to about 50,000 chests a year, while that of Malwa exceeds 40,000; and the question is, at what price is China likely to take this quantity off our hands?

On referring to the returns of the last ten years, I find the following results as to the supply of Indian opium exported to China each year, the average price, and the approximate amount, which China has paid to India each year for opium.

| YEAR.                             | No. of Chests. |        |        | Average price of Calcutta Sales. | Approximate sum paid for Opium by China. |
|-----------------------------------|----------------|--------|--------|----------------------------------|--|
|                                   | Bengal.        | Malwa. | Total. |                                  |  |
| 1852-53                           | 35,521         | 27,111 | 62,632 | Rs. 1,104                        | £ 6,900,000                              |

This table shows, that notwithstanding great fluctuations of price and of supply from year to year, the opium trade with China is amenable to certain general laws.

There has been a progressively increasing demand, which, being met by a stationary supply of about 70,000 chests a year, has, in ten years, nearly doubled the price, and called into existence a supplemental native supply, estimated by those acquainted with the trade at from 20,000 to 30,000 chests, selling at perhaps two-thirds of the price of Indian opium.

There is conclusive evidence, therefore, that as matters stand, China requires every year a supply of 100,000 chests of opium, and is prepared to spend from £12,000,000 to £15,000,000 on the article.

When I say China, I mean that part of the vast empire with which we have commercial relations, for of the interior we know very little. It is probably supplied largely by native opium, as the late expedition saw an extensive poppy cultivation above Hong-Kow.

Now, to maintain our existing revenue, all we require is, not to maintain existing prices, but that China shall one year with another take from us either 80,000 chests at Rs. 1,000 a-chest, or 100,000 chests at Rs. 800 a-chest. We can produce opium in Bengal, even with the present high price to the cultivator, at Rs. 400 a-chest, and experience has proved that with a pass duty of Rs. 400 a-chest, Malwa opium admits of rapid extension.

In fact, the cultivation of opium is so profitable to the ryot, and so popular, that we can get almost any quantity we like at those prices, especially in our own territories, where the profit to the cultivator is not curtailed by excessive land assessments, transit duties, profits to middlemen, and usurious interest on advances.

This year our net revenue from opium is at a low point, for we are paying a high price for double the production which we are bringing into the market.

Our gross receipts are about £6,000,000, but we are paying, not £1,000,000, which would suffice for the quantity we have to sell this year, but £2,000,000, for the crop which will only come into the market next year.

The conclusion, therefore, is irrefragable, that there is no risk of our actual opium revenue diminishing, unless, the demand in China should so far fall off as to be unable to spend £8,000,000 a year on Indian opium, while this year, and for the average of the last five years, they have been spending £11,000,000.

Should they continue to spend £11,000,000, our net revenue from opium must infallibly improve; and if, as some think, Indian opium, if it could be sold at about 450 dollars a chest in China, would almost supersede the native article, there is really no limit to the progressive increase of revenue from this source. I think myself, viewing the matter as dispassionately as I can, that the probabilities are rather in favour of an increase than a decrease of opium revenue for the next few years; but I am satisfied if I have established that the existing revenue is not more precarious than any other revenue depending on a widely diffused artificial taste among a vast population.

This being so, I proceed to examine what are the prospects of the other great branches of Indian revenue, and here the result is most satisfactory.

ELASTICITY OF THE REVENUE.

The total revenue of India, ten years ago, was £29,210,000—it is now £43,750,000.

The average revenue of the three years before the mutiny, or 1850-55 to 1856-57, was £31,980,000—that of the three years, 1860-61 to 1862-63, is £43,203,000.

We have therefore an increase of £14,500,000 a year in ten years, and of £11,000,000 a-year in five years.

Of this increase not quite £1,500,000 is due to opium, and about £5,000,000 to new taxes, as the Income tax, and enhanced duties on salt, stamps, and customs. Another £1,000,000 may be due to acquisitions of territory.

There remains, therefore, an increase of £7,000,000 in ten years, or £1,500,000 in five years, which is due solely to the elasticity of existing revenue. Land, for instance, including sayer and abkarry, and salt, irrespective of enhanced duty, have each risen upwards of £2,000,000 in the last five or six years.

It is an incontrovertible fact, therefore, that the progressive increase of ordinary Indian revenue has averaged £700,000 a year each year for the last ten years, and that the tendency of this rate is to increase rather than diminish. Nor can it be doubted that if, during this period, £5,000,000 a year had not been added by new taxation the increase of the old taxes must be somewhat greater.

I confess that I was hardly prepared myself for this result.

I came out here under the impression of the gloomy and almost despairing views of Indian finance which were universally prevalent a year ago, and it is only by degrees, and as the result of close inquiry, that the conviction has forced itself on my mind that the revenue of India is really buoyant and elastic in an extraordinary degree.

I know of no other country of which it can be said that her ordinary revenue is increasing by £750,000 a year, while her expenditure has in one year been reduced by £4,000,000; and that she is maintaining an equilibrium, while expending out of revenue upwards of £4,000,000 a year on public works, and another £1,000,000 for interest on unfinished railways.

Nor can I see any reason, looking to the future, why, if by the blessing of Providence, peace be maintained, this prosperity should not go on increasing. On the contrary, we are apparently commencing a period when, by the opening of communications, the improvement of agriculture, the extension of commerce, and the tranquillity resulting from a strong Government directing all its energies to peaceful pursuits, India will enter on a career of material prosperity hitherto unexampled.

Without speculating, however, on any such future advance, it is enough to say that, under existing circumstances, the Government feel justified in dealing with any surplus shown by the estimates as a bona fide surplus available for improvements or remissions; and that they do not think it would be good policy to maintain, in addition to the large expenditure on public works, which is really a sinking fund admirably invested, a further cash surplus, against remote contingencies, which would only be a temptation, both here and at home, to relapse into extravagance.

There is one objection, however, to any reduction of existing taxes, which I am anxious to meet, in order to show that the Government is not acting without a full consideration of all circumstances.

It is this, that a war, or some unforeseen event, may suddenly cause increased expenditure, and that it is imprudent to part with any established tax, which, in such a case, might be needed.

I quite agree that it is wrong for a Government to speculate on financial policy, and to leave itself bare of resources in case of difficulty.

But what are our reserves, and how should we be prepared to face a crisis if it arose?

In the first place, we have got, and if prudent shall always keep, a very large cash balance beyond our immediate wants.

Under the old system a cash balance of £10,000,000 sufficed, and with railways, an improved currency, and arrangements with banks, we could carry on the ordinary business of the Government with perfect ease, with a balance of £7,000,000 or £8,000,000.

Now we have actually got over £17,000,000, and after allowing for all liabilities to the home Government or otherwise, fully £14,000,000 of this is our own undoubted property. We could, therefore, in case of need, get over two or three little wars, or the first year of a great war, without either loans or new taxes, and I earnestly trust that no Government of India will ever leave itself without this, which is the first and best of all reserves, an available £3,000,000 or £4,000,000 in hard cash, on which it can lay its hands at any moment.

Beyond this the credit of a Government is its reserve, and if, by two or three years of tranquillity, we raise our funds to a comparatively high level, as we infallibly shall do, our money power, in case of an emergency, is proportionately increased.

And if driven to resort to increased taxation, it would be easy, with the experience of the Incometax, to frame a measure partly Poll-tax and partly Licence-tax, to produce £1,500,000 or £2,000,000 a-year. The duty on salt could also be raised, and, in case of need, the Customs duties again increased, so that probably £3,000,000 or £4,000,000 a-year could, at any moment, be raised by new taxation, which would be submitted to readily, as the country had learned from experience to trust the assurances of the Government that war-taxes would be repealed with the return of peace.

Moreover, at least £2,000,000 a year of our expenditure on public works is optional, and could be suspended in an emergency.

I trust we may never be driven to such a measure, but the reserve is not the less there if needed, and I know of no other State, not even England, which possesses such a reserve to the same extent.

I hope, therefore, that I have satisfied the Council that the Government has not been unmindful of the maxim, "si vis pacem para bellum," and that whatever reductions we propose may be accepted with a safe conscience.

I have now established two points:—

First.—That we have a surplus for the ensuing year of £903,814, after allowing for additional grants for public works and education.

Secondly.—That there is nothing in the general circumstances of Indian finance which should make us hesitate to use this surplus for purposes of remission.

I have dwelt upon the second point at a length which must, I fear, have wearied the Council, but many watch these statements with interest, and it is important, both for myself personally, as I may not have another opportunity of expressing my general views respecting Indian finance, and, what is of far more consequence, it is important for the credit of the Government to show that in proposing to remit taxes, in little more than twelve months after we were supposed to be in a state of hopeless insolvency, we are not acting on a spasmodic impulse, but on a comprehensive and deliberate review of the whole circumstances of our position.

REMISSIONS—THE IMPORT DUTIES.

I proceed to state, what is of more immediate interest, how the Government propose to deal with this surplus of £900,000.

Three taxes were proposed as special measures to meet the late financial crisis; the Income-tax, the Licence-tax, and the enhanced Customs duties on manufactured goods.

Of these, the two former pressed directly on the native population and European residents of India, while the latter pressed mainly on English interests, and on the operations of commerce.

The Licence tax, which would have affected 5,000,000 of native traders, artisans and mechanics, representing, with their families, a population of not less than 20,000,000, has been arrested after it had become law.

Even if the produce of the two remaining imposts had been the same, so that it had been equally easy to repeal the Income-tax or the enhanced import duties on manufactures, the claim of commerce to the next share of remission might have been urged with some plausibility.

But in fact there is no such choice, for one is possible and the other is impossible. The Income-tax produces £1,800,000, while the enhanced duty on piece goods and yarns produces less than £500,000. At the rate of importation for the last nine months, the difference between a ten per cent. and a five per cent. duty on piece goods for all India is not quite £450,000 a-year.

This being the case, the time has evidently arrived when the extra duty imposed to meet an emergency should be remitted, unless we are prepared to retain it as part of our regular financial system.

Some think this ought to be done, and no less an authority than his Honour the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has recorded an opinion that a 10 per cent. duty on imported manufactures is "one of the most legitimate sources of revenue we have."

The Government, however, are of a different opinion, for two very plain and obvious reasons.

Firstly, the duty applies almost exclusively to British manufactures. Now, as long as England and India remain parts of our great empire, it is impossible to apply precisely the same rules as if they were separate and independent countries. I have opposed, as stoutly as any one, any attempt to ease English finance unduly at the expense of India; but I cannot deny that England, having founded the Indian Empire, and being ready to sustain it, and having given up all pretensions to exact a tribute, as Holland does from Java, or Spain from Cuba, and all claim on a monopoly of the Indian market and carrying trade, may, with some reason, ask India so to levy the necessary revenue as not to interfere injuriously with trade between the two countries.

In fact, so completely has England given up those claims which other countries have enforced on their dependencies, that speculative reasoners have even argued that the parent State would be better without its Foreign and Colonial Empire.

That is an opinion which no practical Statesman will for a moment entertain. But it cannot be denied that, apart from moral and political consideration, the extension of commerce is the most direct and palpable advantage derived by England from the possession of India.

A heavy import duty, therefore, on trade between England and India, comes very near in principle to a transit duty between different parts of the same Empire; and what is more important than any theory, it is a tax which, in practice, is not likely to be permanently maintained.

To those who argue this point on abstract grounds and overlook the practical considerations arising from our actual position with regard to England, I would simply put two questions—Do you believe that if Ireland found it more convenient to tax Manchester goods than to levy a poor rate, she would be allowed to do so? or do you believe that if it were found that 25 per cent. would give India a better revenue than 10 per cent., we could raise the duty to that amount with the slightest chance of retaining it? But, secondly, there is another argument, even more conclusive, against the permanent retention of a 10 per cent. duty.

Either the clothing of the people is a proper subject for taxation, or it is not. If it be so, on what possible principle can we impose a considerable duty on clothing which comes from abroad, and levy no duty at all on clothing produced at home?

It is the old question of the Corn Laws over again. Free-trade does not mean that there shall be no taxes, but that taxes shall be levied solely with a view to revenue, and not partly for revenue and partly for protection.

That every Customs duty on an imported article should have a corresponding Excise duty on similar articles produced at home has, therefore, become an axiom, and it only admits of one exception, where the amount of import duty is so moderate that it does not seriously affect trade, while it makes it obviously inexpedient to establish an excise machinery for the sake of levying a trifling duty.

This is the case with regard to corn in England, where a duty of 1s. per quarter, equal to 5 per cent. on the cheaper sorts of foreign grain, is retained; and it is precisely our case with regard to piece goods.

We cannot dispense with Customs duties on our imports generally, and, while this is the case, no reasonable man can object to our retaining an old accustomed duty of 5 per cent. on manufactured goods; but when this is raised to 10 per cent., which in effect may often amount to 15 or 20 per cent. on the cost price of the article at home, no one who is not prepared to abjure the principles of free trade can deny that this is a rate which, if it is to be maintained, requires us at once to impose a countervailing excise duty on every loom in India.

The Government do not think that this would be desirable.

We do not wish to discourage manufactures in India. On the contrary, I believe there are many manufactures in which India is calculated to excel.

With cheap raw material, cheap labour, and many classes of the native population patient, ingenious, and endowed with a fine touch and delicate organization, I see no reason why the interchange between India and Europe should be confined to agricultural produce against manufactures, and why, in course of time, manufactures of certain descriptions where India has a natural advantage may not enter largely into her staple exports.

But because I desire to see this, I am the more anxious not to bestow on Indian manufactures the fatal boon of a temporary and precarious protection.

Whatever step they make forward in fair competition with Manchester will be a solid and substantial advance, but they will never thrive while the progress of one year creates the panic of the next, by changes, or rumours of changes, in a protective duty of so high an amount as necessarily to form a vital element in all their calculations.

I may add this, that although the benefit to India, generally, from a reduction of this import duty, is not so palpable and immediate as from the remission of a direct tax, it is not the less real.

There can be no question that the population of India are, on the whole, insufficiently clothed, and that whatever may be the case under the temporary conditions of an over-stocked market, an extra duty of five per cent. on imported cotton clothing does, in the long run, raise the price of all cotton clothing in India to the consumer to a level higher by one rupee in every twenty than it would have stood at otherwise.

It is certain also that the export trade, on which so much of the prosperity of India depends, depends itself very much on the import trade. The more we take from England the more will England take from us; and a cessation of imports would soon translate itself into a reduced price to the ryot for his oil-seeds, his cotton, and his jute.

This is especially important at a time when India is hoping to secure the largest share of a trade of £20,000,000 a year in raw cotton, thrown suddenly open by the failure of the American supply.

For these reasons the Government of India has determined to reduce the import duties on piece goods and yarns to the old rates of 5 and 3½ per cent. respectively.

The question arises when this reduction should take place.

All public interests point to its being immediate. Trade must be paralysed to a great extent by a prospective reduction, and if, for a period of several months, purchasers hold back and stocks accumulate in bond, there is every reason to apprehend a greater fall of price than could possibly be caused by an immediate reduction.

This could only be met by fixing a very distant period for the reduction, but I confess that, in the present state of things in Lancashire, I should be very unwilling to postpone, for a single day, any benefit they may get from this reduction.

The only argument I know of for delaying the reduction is that there are large stocks of duty-paid goods.

Now I must say the holders of such goods have had fair warning. I have repeatedly stated in public in the course of the last year that the Government of India did not consider the 10 per cent. duty as a permanent one, and in reducing the duty on yarn twelve months ago, we gave a practical proof of our intention to reduce the duty on piece goods at the first possible moment. The state of the cash balances has shown for months past that such a result was possible, and, since the remission of the Licence-tax, no one could doubt that it was highly probable, or rather, almost certain.

Throughout this period we received memorials from the Chambers of Commerce of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras, urging reduction, and either expressly deprecating delay, or making no allusion to it.

It is only at the last moment that memorials have been received from a few highly respectable firms at Calcutta and Bombay, asking that the reduction should be postponed for a long period, or, in the latter case, I may say indefinitely, until the state of the market is changed. Other firms in Calcutta have sent a counter-memorial for immediate reduction.

It appears, therefore, that opinions here are divided, and that the opinion in favour of delay is apparently not a very clear and decided one, or it would never have left itself to be expressed as an after-thought at the last moment. Moreover, it is apparently confined to merchants who might have bonded, but who preferred paying duty, and who, therefore, probably, were on the right side when the duty was raised, three years ago.

And what is more material, the merchants and manufacturers in England, who, I apprehend, would generally bear the loss if there is a fall of price consequent on the reduction, which I do not expect, have not only asked for delay, but have pressed most earnestly in all the reports I have seen of their proceedings for an immediate reduction of the whole 10 per cent.

Under these circumstances the Government see no sufficient reason to depart from the usual and accustomed course in such cases, which is clearly best for the interest of the public; and I accordingly propose that the reduction of the duty shall take effect from the passing of the Act on Wednesday next.

Under ordinary circumstances I should expect a large part of the loss to be recovered from increased importation; but, with the market still over-stocked and the price of raw cotton extremely high, I do not calculate on any improvement for the ensuing year, though I have no doubt that, with the first favourable change in the trade, a large portion of the loss will be recovered.

PAPER DUTY.

The same arguments for reduction as in the case of piece goods do not apply to other articles of the tariff which are not extensively produced in India as well as imported. A moderate duty, such as 10 per cent., on such articles, is not an objectionable mode of raising revenue. There are, however, a few articles in the tariff where relief is required, and may be given at a trifling cost to the revenue.

Paper is taxed 10 per cent. on its value, and yields little more than £10,000 a-year. Now I am not going to enter on the large question, which for two years agitated the British Parliament, whether a tax on paper is so obnoxious as a tax on knowledge, that it ought to be repealed even at the risk of creating a deficit. It is enough to say that a duty on the raw material, "Paper," is indefensible, while the manufactured article "Books," are admitted free, and that practically cases have arisen where, owing to this anomaly, it has been cheaper to send manuscripts of works intended for Indian circulation to be printed in England than to print them here. We do not propose to tax books, and therefore we place paper on the free list.

I may add that though I should not have been prepared to give up a large existing revenue from paper without a clear surplus, I have real pleasure in finding that the state of things in India enables us to give any contribution, however trifling, towards cheapening the cost of an article which enters so largely into the statistics of elementary education, and of the diffusion of knowledge through the press.

I pass to a very different subject, that of beer.

The duty before 1859 was 5 per cent. ad valorem; it has since been 4 annas per gallon, which, I find, has averaged nearly 20 per cent. on the value of the beer imported. The importation has greatly fallen off, and though this may be attributed mainly to the excessive importation of 1859, which glutted the market, still it cannot be denied that a duty of nearly 20 per cent. is excessive, and calculated to check seriously the importation of an article which, in this climate, is to many European constitutions almost a necessary.

Accordingly, I propose to reduce the duty by one-half, or to 2 annas per gallon; and here again I feel a very disinterested pleasure—for I am no beer drinker myself—in being able to propose any boon, however slight, to the class who have perhaps suffered more than any other from recent taxation, that of Europeans residing in India.

The reduction at the present rate of imports will not cost above £10,000 a year.

From beer to tobacco the transition is easy and natural.

The duty on tobacco is so absurdly high that it is clear we are driving all but the superior sorts out of the market, and losing revenue. The duty of 1 rupee per seer is fully 100 per cent. on ordinary American tobacco, and its effect has been to reduce the importation in three years from 1,200,000 lbs. to about 360,000 lbs., a striking proof of the impolicy of excessive import duties. I propose to reduce the duty to 20 per cent. ad valorem, which I have no doubt will cause a slight gain rather than a loss to the revenue.

The duty on light wines is also so high as to be almost prohibitory as regards the cheaper descriptions. I propose to reduce it from three rupees to one and a-half rupees per gallon, in the case of light wines declared of less value than twelve rupees per dozen.

There are some other slight reforms in the tariff which do not appreciably affect revenue, and are made with a view to correct anomalies.

For instance, there is an export duty of three per cent. on coals and iron the produce of India. This is as yet of no great practical importance, but it is manifestly wrong that a cargo of Ranee-gunge coal should be burdened with an export duty, if shipped to Ceylon or Java to compete with coal from England.

There can be no reason why carriages should be imported free, while all the chief materials used in carriage making pay an import duty.

These, however, and any other minor matters, can be dealt with in Committee on the Customs Bill, and for the present it is enough to state that the total effect of the reductions proposed in Customs duties may be taken at £475,000 for the ensuing year.

This reduces my surplus to £428,814.

THE INCOME TAX.

One question only now remains for consideration, viz., how to deal with the Income-tax.

Some action is requisite, for the Act of last year, continuing the first year's assessments, will soon expire, and it is necessary to provide before August whether the notices and forms of return prescribed by the original Act shall or shall not be again issued.

Upon this point there is, I believe, no second opinion among men practically acquainted with India, that they ought not to issue. It is admitted on all hands that the alarm, the vexation, the oppression, and the extortion, inseparable from calling for complicated returns of individual incomes, in a country like India, are a far greater evil than the tax itself, and that, assuming such a tax to be indispensable, a rough classification at fixed rates, somewhat on the plan proposed by my hon. friend, Mr. Harington, would have been infinitely preferable to any attempt to ascertain individual incomes.

Accordingly, I had thought last year, when it seemed certain that both an Income-tax and a Licence-tax would be required to maintain an equilibrium, that the opportunity of passing the Licence-tax Act should be taken to mould the two together into one measure, on the principle of fixed classification.

Circumstances led, during my absence, to the Licence-tax being passed in the form originally proposed, and a temporary Act was passed continuing the existing assessments under the Income tax for one year.

Since then financial prospects have materially improved, and we have been able to arrest the Licence-tax on the very eve of its imposition, thus saving 5,000,000 of tax-payers from the incidence of a direct tax, and the annoyance of classification.

The situation of matters with regard to the Income-tax is thus materially changed. If we were now imposing it for the first time, or if it were clear that it would be permanent, I should have no hesitation in recommending that it should be commuted into a tax on the principle of Mr. Harington's Bill, and probably made over to the local Sootlan, one of the sons of Bahadoor Shah, ex-King of Delhi, a lad of twenty years, is now on trial for being a ringleader in the rebellion. He was captured at Jeypore. Crops cutting well. Gram selling in the city at 28 seers, barley at 28 and 29.

CAPTURE OF THE RAO SAHIB.—The Lahore Chronicle states "on authority, that Punda Rung Rao, otherwise called Rao Sahib, a nephew of the Nana's, who is supposed to have been with Tantia Toppe and taken a prominent part in the events of the mutiny, has been captured in the Jummoo territory by Mr. McNabb, with the assistance of the Maharaja."

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON has terminated his great literary labours in two publications, which the Madras Observer recommends to an intelligent public—"A Lecture on Systems of Education," and "Remarks on Essays and Reviews." We are glad to observe the Christian tone of the former. It was originally delivered to the young men of Sydney. The writer draws these conclusions from a review of the educational policy of all civilised countries—that the only practical mode of carrying out a proper system of training schoolmasters is by the establishment of Normal schools; that experience, as well as theory, is opposed to the separation of education into two distinct elements, secular and religious; and that the application to any people, of a system which treats these two elements as separate and independent, is likely to produce the most injurious effects upon the national character.

MADRAS MAGDALEN ASYLUM.—We see from the report of the Madras Magdalen Asylum that in the course of 1861, five women were admitted, of whom one was a European. The women are employed in needle-work. The income of the asylum was Rs. 1,948, and the expenditure Rs. 2,120. The committee have room for twenty inmates, but complain of want of support. We regret that the same reason led to the extinction of the Calcutta Asylum. The class intended to be reformed is on the increase in the presidency towns and large stations. The mortality of the mutinies, among the rank and file of the army, added to it.

CANNANORE, March 30.—There has been a great fracas between the Queen Beebe and the "Rajah of Cannanore." The Rajah sent a person to relieve the "Karistan" of the Laccadive Islands, and that person has written to say that he could not find any books or records to which he could refer for the past accounts of the islands, so the personal property of the late "Karistan," who lately arrived at Cannanore, underwent a strict scrutiny. Whether anything was found we are unable to say, but the assistance of the police was called to the landing of the same. The Rajah, who used formerly to ride in a bullock coach, now drives out in an open phaeton and pair of chesnut horses, the only pair in Cannanore. Cannanore is about to become a place of some note hereafter, as two printing presses are on their road from Bombay, and a talented gentleman is proposing to start a newspaper, to be styled the Cannanore Kaleidoscope, should sufficient inducement offer.—Cochin Courier.

ROYAL PRESENTS.—The Bangalore Herald has heard that Dr. Campbell, Durbar Surgeon to his Highness the Rajah of Mysore, is the bearer of an autograph letter, together with a sword and other valuable presents, from her Majesty the Queen, to be presented to his Highness in the usual state. The officiating Commissioner, with his staff, have gone to Mysore to be present on the occasion.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEPARTURE OF SIR GEORGE CLERK.—Sir George Clerk embarked from the Apollo Bunder on the afternoon of the 24th April, at a quarter past five o'clock. On his arrival at the Bunder a salute of seventeen guns was fired from the saluting battery. Sir George was accompanied by the new Governor, Sir Bartle Frere, Hon. W. E. Frere, Captain Clerk, A.D.C. There were a great many gentlemen present to witness the departure of the late Governor, amongst whom we noticed Sir Matthew Sausse, Sir Joseph Arnould, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Hon. J. D. Inverarity, Hon. A. D. Robertson, Hon. M. R. Westropp, Brigadier Liddell, C.B., Colonel Turner, Colonel Marriott, Colonel Barr, Mr. M. J. Shaw Stewart, Dr. Geraud, W. B. Peile, Hon. Rustomjee Jamsetjee, Hon. Jugganath Sunkersett, Major Coley, Major Curtis, Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, Mr. W. Crawford, Mr. Hebbert, Mr. Tucker, Mr. Orr, Mr. Foyett, Mr. F. L. Brown, Mr. Bentley, Mr. Sangster, &c., &c. Sir George Clerk stepped into the Governor's new barge, accompanied by Sir Bartle Frere, Hon. W. E. Frere, Commodore Wellesley, Brigadier Liddell, Captain Clerk, Mr. Shaw Stewart, and Lieutenant Burn. Other boats followed, in which were Colonels Marriott, Turner, &c. As soon as the barge of his Excellency got under weigh, the Ajdahn, Clive, Auckland, and Dalhousie manned yards, and the three first-named vessels fired a salute of seventeen guns each. H. H. the Innam of Muscat's sloop-of-war, Iskundershore, also fired a similar salute. When Sir George Clerk reached the Dalhousie, he was received by Commander Hopkins and the whole of the officers of the ship. Sir Bartle Frere and the rest of the gentlemen who accompanied him left immediately after seeing Sir George on board, and returned on shore. There was no attempt at demonstration at any time; there was no guard of honour in attendance; there was merely the Governor's body guard of native cavalry, consisting of some four or five men. The European mounted police were on the ground, as well as some few of the European constables. When Sir Bartle Frere returned to the shore he drove off immediately to the Town Hall, where the oaths were then administered to him in the Durbar room, and his Excellency took his seat at the Council. On taking his seat another salute of seventeen guns was fired from the saluting battery. The Governor was attended in the Town Hall by the members of Council and most of the secretaries of Government.—Bombay Gazette.

THE FIRE AT CAMPOOLEE.—There seems but little probability that the exact cause of the recent fire at Campoolee will be discovered. There appears to be no grounds for suspicion that it was the work of an incendiary, whilst the fact that on two previous occasions spontaneous combustion had clearly been caused by a portion of the packing of bales having oil or grease upon them would seem to corroborate the opinion that the recent fire originated from a similar cause, especially as on both occasions the fire broke out during the hottest part of the day, amongst the bales exposed to the sun. Although the actual loss amounted to between four and five hundred bales of cotton, yet, considering that in a comparatively confined space there were about four thousand dokras piled up, and that a strong wind was blowing at the time, it is surprising that greater damage was not sustained. The first alarm of the fire was given about noon on the 15th April, when it was found that several dokras on the top of a large stack of cotton bales were on fire, these bales were stacked, ready for loading, at the western side of the station. Unfortunately the fire broke out at a time when most of the native labourers were absent taking their dinner; and it was only by the most strenuous exertions on the part of the European and other officials that we have not to record the destruction of the entire stock, as the breeze which arose caused the fire to spread with more than ordinary rapidity. After some time the burning bales were removed from the rest, thus confining the fire to a circle about one hundred and twenty feet in diameter; to this spot those bales were brought which had become ignited by fragments of burning cotton scattered by the wind. A fire engine was on the spot on a carriage truck, and did effectual service. As the hose was not long enough to reach the adjacent tank, the engine had to be supplied with water from the tenders of the locomotive engines. Quantities of sand also were thrown upon the burning bales with good effect; but just as the fire appeared to be getting under control (about 3 o'clock p.m.) it was found that the goods' shed on the eastern side of the yard had taken fire, doubtless through a portion of the burning cotton being blown on to the roof, part of which was covered with jowlies. At this time there were about fourteen waggons under the shed. Fortunately, by great exertion, ten of these were shunted; four were destroyed, one of these in the centre covered with a tilt first catching fire communicated the flames to the other three so rapidly that they were partially destroyed before they could be uncoupled. In fact, the shed, the four waggons, and the articles lying upon the platform were so speedily one mass of flames that even the empty bullock carts could not be removed from the edge of the platform. A large tree by the side of one of the bullock stables, was also partially destroyed, and those buildings, had they not been tiled, would have shared a similar fate. The exact amount of loss sustained has not, we believe, been ascertained. The four waggons destroyed contained about twenty-eight casks of oil, 194 bags of seed, and some twenty-seven packages of luggage, &c. Notwithstanding the utmost exertions of those who assisted in endeavouring to extinguish the fire, that on the western side of the yard was not brought under control until about 4 p.m.; while the fire on the eastern side (amongst the sheds, waggons, goods, &c.) was not extinguished until 9 p.m. At one time other buildings than the stables were threatened, and it was only owing to the indefatigable exertions of the officials who were present that the damage was not much greater. The whole station had a very narrow escape from destruction.—Times of India.

THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE.—The Supreme Court was densely crowded by all classes of the community on the 22nd April on the occasion of the delivery of judgment in the great libel case of the Maharaj versus the editor of the Sutya Prakash. On all the material issues the verdict of the Court was in favour of the defendant, with costs. On the technical plea of "not guilty," the Chief Justice held, in opposition to the Puisne Judge, that a verdict should go for the Maharaj, with five rupees damages—but no costs. The court was unanimous, however, in its judgment upon the plea of justification, which was held to have been fully established, as were also several other pleas, and a verdict in favour of the defendant was entered thereon, with costs. The judgment is of too much importance to be mutilated, and we, therefore, defer its publication in extenso until we can make it from their Lordships' notes. After judgment was delivered, Mr. Anstey moved the court in behalf of the defendant for the general costs of the action, supported by Mr. Dumbur. The court ruled that the matter should stand over until the bills went before the taxing officer, when, should any difficulty arise, the defendant would be at liberty to move the court upon the point.

COTTON CULTIVATION.—The Bombay Gazette states that one of the leading firms of Bombay is about to begin the cotton trade on a large scale in Berar. A model farm is to be established, and a European agent will make advances to the ryots for cotton, cleaning and packing the bales on the spot, and dispensing, as far as possible, with middle men.

CRICKET IN INDIA.—The Bombay Gazette has been informed that Mr. Strettell, the Secretary to the Bombay Gymkhana, is thinking of bringing out the all England Eleven next January, to play cricket matches with twenty-two of Bombay, and afterwards at Poona, Ahmedabad, Madras, Bangalore, and Calcutta.

BELGAUM, April 19.—The rumour which was prevalent some days ago as to the Artillery Battery located in the Fort being removed from this place turns out to be quite true, although its destination may not be Kolapoor. The battery will not, however, move at once for Poona, as at first intended, until after the rains. Accounts have reached us from a neighbouring village that when the collector, Mr. Tucker, with Col. Kennedy and Major Kemball, were out shooting a couple of days ago, they roused a large tiger, which the last-named officer wounded. The animal became infuriated, and attacked a beater, whom he killed on the spot, and then made off, closely pursued by the rest of the party. Upon searching for the tiger Mr. Tucker (who is a very successful and adventurous sportsman), accompanied by a beater, went into the jungle and found the beast. The tiger first charged Mr. Tucker, but afterwards attacked the beater, who attempted to escape, but was overtaken and torn to pieces immediately afterwards. The dread of the two epidemics now prevailing here is so great that the authorities have prohibited the sale of ripe fruit, and the police expel every vendor of mangoes and melons. The weather is very warm, quite oppressive, in fact—a slight shower last night.

H.M.'s 1ST BATTALION 4TH KING'S OWN.—Major-general Cunynghame closed his inspection of the 4th King's Own, by reviewing them in full dress, on the general parade ground, on the 8th April. Before dismissing the regiment the Major-general delivered a pithy and impressive address, and expressed his satisfaction with everything connected with the corps. He recommended the men particularly to avail themselves of the advantages which the regimental savings bank offers to the soldiers in India. The gallant speaker laid special stress upon the fact that men who formerly belonged to the regiment he at one time commanded had called upon him to thank him for the kind advice they had received from him many years ago, and in following which they were enabled to return to their native land with sums in their possession varying from fifty to one hundred sovereigns each. Every soldier can reap similar benefits if he would only be steady and prudent, and the Major-general hoped the men of the 4th King's Own would follow a similar example, and go back to their homes equally blessed.—Our Paper.

"My lord, in a country like this, the action of Government is of vital consequence to the interests of commerce, and occasions frequently arise when we feel it to be our duty to offer suggestions with regard to matters, the disposal of which rests with the Government, and bespeak for our respectful representations in such instances your Excellency's just and indulgent consideration.

"Tendering to your Excellency the assurance of our profound respect, and the expression of our confidence that great benefits will result from your lordship's administration of the government of this vast empire, we have the honour to subscribe ourselves, your Excellency's most obedient humble servants,

"For the Bengal Chamber of Commerce,
"W. S. FITZWILLIAM, President.
"WILLIAM GRANT, Vice-President.

"Calcutta, April 1, 1862."

To which his lordship was pleased to reply as follows:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I sincerely thank you for this very cordial address of welcome.

"Anticipations of peace and tranquillity expressed by my predecessors at the outset of their career have been so frequently belied by the course of events, that I feel strongly how necessary it is to be cautious in hazarding conjectures as to what the future may bring forth in this country. Nevertheless, I think with you that the circumstances of the present time justify the hope that we may have now before us opportunities for promoting the development of its resources, and securing the happiness and well-being of its inhabitants, greater than any which have been heretofore enjoyed.

"In order, however, to enable us to make the most of these opportunities, it is essential that there should be good understanding and a disposition to co-operate heartily for the common welfare both between the Government and the public, and between the several sections of the public among themselves, and I hail as one of the most hopeful of the signs of the times your assurance that the belief in the supposed antagonism of interests between the non-official Europeans and the natives of the soil is passing away, and the manly and creditable declaration contained in your address that nothing which injures the well-being of the people at large can benefit you, and that you ask for no privileges for yourselves which you are not prepared to advocate for them.

"I invite you, therefore, gentlemen, to communicate with me unreservedly and frankly on all questions by which you suppose that your interests may be affected, or where you believe that your knowledge and experience may be useful to me, and to give me credit for sharing your conviction that, rightly understood and fairly pursued, your interests—the interests, namely, of that enterprising class which carries into regions morally stagnant and materially unimproved, the vivifying influences of British energy and British capital, are coincident with those of the community at large."

MISCELLANEOUS.

SYLHET, March 25.—The insurrection of the Khasiahs in the Jyuteah hills is nearly, it is to be hoped, brought to a close. General Showers who has arrived at Sylhet from Calcutta, with the 33rd N. I., has planned a mode of attack that must disperse the malcontents and bring them back again to their allegiance. He has sent a column into the hills from the south-east portion of them, which appears to be but little known by any one, another about mid-way between that and the foot of the hills leading to Cherrapunjee, both of these to co-operate with the column already in the hills under Colonel Dunsford, who has taken several stockades, with but very little loss. This ought to prove to the rebels that our troops can travel through their country, and induce those who are friendly to return to their villages from which they have been driven by fear, not so much of our troops, as the rebels who want them to join them. The great difficulty is the supplying the troops with atta, both the 28th and 33rd have been accustomed to live on it, and in this country there is great difficulty in procuring it for them; otherwise they get on famously, in spite of the hardships they have to undergo, which are very severe. The cause of the outbreak is variously stated, but it is believed that it originated on account of the house and property-tax, and from the manner it was being collected. Many of these hill people have never seen a rupee; they live by barter and in caves. When they cannot pay the tax they have had their clothes taken off their backs. This, no doubt, irritated them a good deal, and they also imagined their religion was a good deal interfered with. One story currently reported is, that they are in the habit of performing a religious ceremony, where a good deal of dancing takes place, and in which they use swords and shields, and during the ceremony they are not allowed to talk; one of the officials, seeing the swords and shields, and knowing full well they could not speak during the time it lasted, wanted them to give them up, of course they could not, at the same time saying that they had leave to keep a few swords and shields for the express purpose of using at these ceremonies from the civil authority; however, the next day, when the officials went to take possession of them, they found the men in rebellion. Such is the report, and one that is currently believed. If Government will open one or two roads in the territory, it will, no doubt, open out the resources of the country, and make them feel more peacefully inclined towards us. General Showers started for the post at the south-east, on hearing that a stockade was close to it, but on arrival he heard it had been destroyed by a jamadar and a handful of men. He made all the requisite inquiries to enable the column to proceed in that direction, and then returned to Sylhet, and the next day started again for Cherrapunjee, with the intention of joining Colonel Dunsford, and prosecuting further inquiries in that direction—he will find the journey a very tedious one.—Delhi Gazette.

THE KHASIAHS.—One hundred and fifty men of the 28th Regiment N. I., under Captain Robinson, having joined Colonel Richardson's party on the 10th of March, they proceeded on the 11th to attack the rebels in their strongly entrenched position at Onksae, and with the same success that has attended every one of Colonel Robinson's bold attacks, the rebels at once bolted down the khuds, and were no more seen; pursuit was hopeless. On the 16th Colonel Dunsford, C. B., joined Colonel Richardson and Major Rowlett, the Deputy Commissioner at Jynteapore, assumed command of the force, and marched at once for the seat of the rebellion. On the 20th they attacked the rebels at Ralleang, a large village about twenty miles N. E. of Jowae. The village was strongly stockaded on every side, and doubly so at the narrow footpaths leading to it. The rebels are said to have numbered about four hundred with thirty or forty fire-arms, and kept up a sharp fire at first, but without effect. The attack is said to have been well planned, but the deep ravines and heavy jungle prevented the place from being surrounded, and the skirmishers, which were intended to have outflanked and cut up those flying away, were brought up by impassable ravines and joined in the assault. The place is said to have been very strong, with an earthwork six feet high, and on the top of it thick spiked bamboos as high, again loopholed throughout, and with a flanking fire from each side with a deep ditch in front well stuck over with pointed bamboos to impale any unfortunate who in his zeal might jump into, instead of over, the ditch. The yell of the stalwart Seikhs and the little Goorkhas, however, led by their gallant Colonel, struck a panic into the Khasiahs, and not a shot was fired at them after the rush was made. Two of the rebels were killed within the stockade, and three in the pursuit which followed, but they know every crick and corner of their thick jungles which afford them such friendly shelter, and it appears from all accounts to be hopeless to attempt to catch them, but Colonel Dunsford spares neither his men nor himself in the attempt. The stockade and village have been entirely destroyed, and from the fact of the rebels deserting their stockade at Munsoo the next day, at which they had been labouring for the last month, and which was a very formidable one, it is thought they are nearly used up, and although most are now ready to come in on a promise of pardon, they cannot, or will not give up their leaders. All the stockades have now been levelled.—Delhi Gazette.

MURREE, April 6.—Here we are in a sea of mountains and clouds, such weather! It has been raining cats and dogs, for I am afraid to say how many hours—no signs of the days and clean roads—plenty of rain and plenty of mud, nothing else plentiful, every body looking savage, no fresh arrivals since my last. In consequence of the bad weather we have had here, and are still having, visitors I imagine are not over anxious to rush up; in fact the weather must be still cold down below. The convalescents are expected to arrive on the 15th inst., much too cold for sickly men at present. A number of your readers will be glad to know that the Murree brewery is not yet defunct. It is struggling into life, and the beer is really first-rate, far better than any country stuff I have yet tasted. The porter is very passable too, many prefer it to the beer. The brothers McEwin seem to understand what they are doing, and are two hard working fellows—the very sort of men that are required for an establishment of the kind. I have no doubt of the beer being equal to that made in England in a year or two, when every thing is in proper working order—the only fault to be found is a sweetness in both beer and porter. The hops used must be either bad or a sufficient quantity is not used; it would be well to correct this as soon as possible. The country would save something very handsome by introducing this beer into soldier's canteens in the Punjab. The article is pure and wholesome, and after a very short time I feel sure the men would prefer it to that now supplied.—Lahore Chronicle.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle gives an interesting account of the marriage of Meean Pertab Singh, the son of the Maharajah of Cashmere, with the daughter of the Rajah of Chumba. The Cashmere Chief came to the wedding with his whole court and 10,000 followers. The marriage presents were numerous and costly. According to Rajpoot custom each chief on becoming a guest received a present of a bag of money (zyafut), and on being dismissed by the Maharajah a handsome Khillut with another bag of money (Rooksutana). On reaching a square in the town of Chumba the Maharajah was met by the bride's procession, headed by the Rajah of Chumba, her father, he and his suite being dressed in plain white garments. The Maharajah and Rajah approached on foot, took off their shoes, embraced, and returned to their cars. The Rajah then preceded the Maharajah to the Castle, and according to custom declined, as father of the bride, to receive the nuzurs offered by the family of the bridegroom. The display of fireworks on the night of the marriage was very brilliant, and for some hours the whole town was as bright as day. During the hours of the night the nuptial knot was tied, a form which is literally performed according to Hindoo custom, by tying the garments of the bride and bridegroom together while the incantations are read. The bridegroom is a boy of nine, the bride an infant. The marriage ceremonies are said to have cost the Rajah 70,000 rupees, and the Maharajah about fifteen lakhs.

THE LATE HURRICANE.—We (Phenix) are now in possession of full and accurate particulars of the hurricane which swept away on the 27th March, 1862, six villages in the Thannah of Godagaree in the Rajshahye district, by name Baraiparah, Sharunpore, Gohalbaree, Julahar, and Keshubpore. The villages which are now in complete ruin and desolation are at a distance of twenty miles west of this station, and stand on the eastern bank of the Mohanunda which running in a south-south-easterly direction falls into the Ganges about two miles below the villages. Westward of the junction of the rivers there are wide sandy churs caused by the alluvial depositions of the river Gauges. The dreadful occurrence which took place at about half-past three P.M., was preceded by an awful stillness of the air, which was followed by the appearance of a mass of dense clouds which descended in the form of an inverted cone or the trunk of an elephant, over the sandy plains westward of the junction, or south-west of the villages. Then succeeded a dreadful reverse. A whirlwind, the impetuosity of which is beyond the conception of any except the eyewitnesses, and a dismal obscurity caused by the descending clouds and by torrents of sands floating in the air, threw every thing into primeval confusion, and darkened the aspect of nature. With a roaring noise which exceeded that of a thousand cannons, the whirlwind darted with the rapidity of lightning in a north-east direction from the churs, mingling earth, air, and water together. The houses, mostly native huts, were carried away to vast distances, scarcely any vestige whatever being left behind. Large trees were torn up by the roots, or were shivered to pieces, and were transported aloft or rolled over the ground with immense velocity. Men, cattle, and wild animals were either buried, or suffocated to death, or tossed to and fro in a senseless state. Many were transported aloft through the aerial regions, and thrown considerable distances. One woman was found in the top of a tree: another was carried to a distance of two miles, where she was found in a senseless state, but without any injury being done to her life or person. The water of the tanks and of the wheel to the north of the villages was thrown up from the beds, over the adjoining land, with mud and fishes, which were all killed. The water of the Mohanunda was also raised up, and rolled in torrents over the public road in its vicinity; and a good number of boats which were on it were all wrecked, some of them being whirled from one bank to the other. The destruction of life was immense, as will be evident from the accompanying extract from an official report:—

But the actual number of deaths has been more probably somewhat greater, because not only the bodies of the majority of boatmen have not been found, but several families have been at once exterminated; the number killed has been determined by the number of dead bodies found, and it is not unlikely the bodies of some of the killed have not been yet traced. Besides men and cattle, wild animals, birds, dogs, cats, &c., died without number. In Keshulpore two tigers were found to have been killed by the whirlwind. It is evident that the hurricane was a fierce whirlwind originated from the sandy isles opposite the river. The air of that region at 3 p.m., the hour of maximum heat, must have been intensely heated and rarified; and so must have ascended into the upper region of the atmosphere, causing a partial vacuum at the locality. At such a juncture, a mass of clouds, as observed by the sufferers, came to the upper region, and was in consequence of the vacuity beneath precipitated downward with the tremendous force and velocity which a body would acquire in falling from such a height, causing, by the rushing of the surrounding column of atmosphere of the upper region, and by the pressure thereof on the descending mass of cloud, a whirlwind of the nature above noted. It is worthy of note that the years 1832, 1842, and 1852 were celebrated for storms and hurricanes of unusual impetuosity in Bengal; and it is a striking coincidence, though we are not as yet warranted in inferring a periodical recurrence of such events in every tenth year, that 1862 has witnessed a similar phenomenon. A fire has since taken place at Rampore Beaulah, crowning the devastation caused in this unhappy land by indigo disturbance, inundation, and hurricane. About one thousand huts have been burnt to ashes.

SIR HUGH ROSE.—We (Delhi Gazette) learn from Simla that his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose is quite enjoying the change after his indefatigable knocking-about. This reminds us that there are one or two incidents connected with his Excellency's recent inspection of our North-West Frontier line which should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. We are in a position to state that he was much pleased with the efficiency of the force under Brigadier General Chamberlain. To speak of Neville Chamberlain's efficiency is to repeat an oft-told tale, but to say that he satisfied even Sir Hugh, is no small merit. His Excellency was extremely pleased with the strategical distribution of all the arrangements made by General Chamberlain to repel the incursions of the tribes along the whole long line of frontier under his command. Sir Hugh has expressed his high opinion of the Brigadier. There was a grand durbar at Bunnoo of all the chiefs of tribes, whom Colonel Taylor presented to the Commander-in-Chief. Amongst them was a little boy, the son of a chief, who had given proof of great devotion, in pursuing a tribe into the heart of the fastnesses in their mountains. It appears this man had been reproved by the authorities for not preventing the incursions of some of the tribes. He expressed himself determined to show that it was not from conniving at them, and ordered his followers to enter the passes, telling them, at the same time, that to follow the enemy into their own strongholds was certain death. Under these circumstances, he requested those who were disinclined for such an enterprise to go back. Only three availed themselves of the permission. The rest went on, were soon surrounded by inaccessible crags, and died with, and for, their chief. Chivalric devotion can go no further. Sir Hugh Rose was much taken with the recital, by the son, of this heroic event. He ordered the boy's name to be enrolled for service in the Irregular Cavalry, when of proper age, as he had expressed a wish to serve. This was only one of many interesting incidents that occurred in the meeting between the rude mountain warriors of that romantic land and the military chief of India.

DR. CORBYN'S CASE.—The following is a copy of Dr. J. C. Corbyn's official explanation of his refusal to attend the late Lieut. Col. Denniss in his last illness:—"With reference to a letter from the Station-Staff at Dum Dum, forwarded to my address under your Docket No. 1,034, calling for explanation with regard to my not having gone to see the late Colonel Denniss, I have the honour to state, that on the night in question I was proceeding from Raneeungee to Calcutta on medical certificate, to appear before a medical board. Being much fatigued on account of the long journey from up country, I was asleep in the railway carriages which reached Burdwan about twelve at night, and was awake by some one asking me if I were a medical officer. To my reply in the affirmative, he informed me that there was a gentleman at the hotel dangerously ill with Asiatic cholera, had been ill for nine hours, and that he had been requested to call in any doctor travelling through by train. Feeling far from well, I remarked, "If the gentleman has been ill with Asiatic cholera for nine hours, I am afraid medical aid will not be of any use. However, if the station-master will promise that I shall not lose the train, I shall be happy to accompany you. I went to the station-master, and he informed me that the train was about to start in five minutes, and that I should certainly lose it by going to the hotel. I, however, sent for the sub-assistant surgeon, who, I was informed, had seen the gentleman said to be ill, to learn from him if by remaining I could be of any service. The sub-assistant surgeon arrived before the train started, and seemed to be a very intelligent person. He informed me that the patient was a Colonel Denniss; he had been suffering for some time from diarrhoea. When he had first seen him, nine hours ago, he had some of the symptoms of Asiatic cholera, but since he had administered calomel and opium pills, &c., &c., (medical report ending with) he considered his patient doing well. As I was of opinion that Colonel Denniss was under proper medical treatment, and as the sub-assistant surgeon did not ask me to see him, I proceeded by the train, which started immediately. The request to visit Colonel Denniss was not made in any official form, nor did I understand it came from the magistrate. However, under any circumstances, I should have remained with whatever inconvenience to myself, had the sub-assistant surgeon asked me to see Colonel Denniss, instead of giving me so favourable a report of his patient. I have the honour to be, &c." In reply, Lieut.-Col. Norman was instructed to forward the following resolution of the Governor-general in Council to the officiating adjutant-general of the army. "Sir,—With reference to your letter, No. 344, of the 20th inst. I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, that, upon consideration of the circumstances therein reported, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council does not consider the explanation afforded by Assistant-surgeon Corbyn at all satisfactory, and his Excellency in Council is of opinion that he was guilty of gross neglect of duty in not at once proceeding to attend Lieutenant-Colonel Denniss when asked to do so. The Governor-general in Council cannot accept the apology offered for Dr. Corbyn in the letter of the Principal Inspector general of the Medical Department, as it appears that, notwithstanding the alleged fatigue and indisposition of Dr. Corbyn, he would have visited Lieut.-colonel Denniss if he could have done so without missing the train. The Honourable the Lieut.-governor, North-Western Provinces, will be requested to remove Assistant-surgeon Corbyn from his appointment of Superintendent of the Central Prison, Meerut, as a mark of the displeasure of Government, and I am directed to add that had he not been about to proceed home on medical certificate Dr. Corbyn would have been brought to trial before a court-martial for gross neglect of duty."

THE HOOLEE AT CAWNPORE.—The Oudh correspondent of the Times of India draws attention to a recent disgraceful celebration of the Hoolee festival at Cawnpore. The lower classes were allowed to abuse women with obscene language and to maltreat respectable Bengalees, while the Inspector of police sat in his balcony and enjoyed the fun. One woman, who stood in the disagreeable relation of creditor to her neighbour to the extent of Rs. 10 or Rs. 12, was flung by the debtor and her daughter into a well and sustained severe injuries, but no further notice was taken of her case. Cawnpore administration of justice is exemplified in this way. "A Mahajun had a complaint to make to the cantonment magistrate, but his sheristadar took it into his own hands to settle it for him, by making him pay handsomely, put all his witnesses into confinement for a few days, and then dismissed them and the case together."

HENRY BYNG HARRINGTON Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, has been gazetted a temporary Ordinary Member of the Governor-general's Council. Mr. Harrington took the oaths and his seat under the usual salute, on the 11th April. This is the second occasion on which Mr. Harrington has filled this office temporarily. The necessity for his appointment is caused by the departure of Sir B. Frere for Bombay, and the refusal of the Hon. Mr. Morehead to accept the office.

LUCKNOW, April 7.—Lord Listowel and suite are on a visit to the Chief Commissioner, with whom it has been arranged that they spend the remaining of the present month in shooting tigers in the Terai. The Rajah of Bulrampore, with seventy elephants and an immense number of Shikarees is awaiting the party in the Baraich frontier.

DELHI, April 5.—The Maharaja of Puttiala passed through Delhi at 9 p.m. this day. A slight shower last night, and another this morning, together with a dust-storm, and a little rain again last evening has cooled the atmosphere. Kojhak Governments to deal with on this principle according to their own local circumstances, and for their own local requirements.

A proposal of this sort has been made by the Government of Bombay, and it has much to recommend it.

It is most desirable to break through the system of barren uniformity and pedantic centralisation which have tended in times past to reduce all India to dependence on the bureaux of Calcutta, and to give to local Governments the power and the responsibility of managing their own local affairs.

The great branches of the expenditure, such as the army and national debt, are imperial, and while this is the case, the great branches of revenue must remain imperial also.

But there is a wide field, both of revenue and expenditure, which is properly local, which in England is met by local rates, and which, in fact, must be met locally, or not at all.

I hail, therefore, every proposal which shows signs of independence and self-reliance, and if the Income-tax were to be perpetual, I would much rather see it transferred into a local tax than continued as an Imperial tax.

But before acting on this view, there is one paramount consideration which has to be weighed, viz., whether the Income-tax is to be looked upon as a permanent or a temporary measure.

Upon this point I have myself no doubt. The tax was imposed for a limited term, and at all hazards we must strive to keep faith with the people of India by not prolonging it.

It is, of course, impossible to give any absolute pledge as to what may occur three years hence. Necessity knows no law, and unforeseen events may upset all calculations. But the question is, are we to look on the implicit pledge given by passing the Income tax Act for five years only as a serious promise which we must strain every nerve to fulfil, or are we to follow the example of England, and treat it as one of those common forms which, like "lover's vows," are only made to be broken?

It is my firm conviction that the latter course would be alike wrong and impolitic.

The people of England can understand that whatever a Chancellor of the Exchequer may say to round a period, or elicit a cheer, the Income-tax cannot be repealed unless they are prepared either to abdicate the position of a first-rate Power by disarming, or to retrace the steps of Sir Robt. Peel's legislation by imposing crushing duties on commerce and consumption.

But the people of India see no such reasons for continuing the Indian Income-tax, and they would simply feel that the Government having got the tax on false pretences was determined to keep it.

Now, if there is one thing more than another on which our Indian Empire is based, it is on our character for speaking truth. The idea that "the word of the British Government is as good as its bond," is the keystone of the fabric of our power in the East.

Measures which, like the famous conversion of the Four per Cents, cast even a plausible suspicion on the character of the Government for straightforward and open honesty in its financial dealings with its subjects, are, above all others, to be deprecated.

Hence, without in any way pledging the Government as to what may or may not be possible three years hence, I venture to say this—that in my judgment the main object to which the Financial policy of the Government should now be directed, is to keep faith with India by getting rid of the Income-tax. That will be the great object of my endeavours as long as I continue responsible for Indian finance, and when I leave, it is the legacy I should wish to leave to my successor.

I will say, also, that although it is impossible to anticipate what the future may have in store, there is, as matters now stand, every fair and reasonable probability that we may in three years or sooner be able to dispense with the Income-tax. If, for three years, the revenue increases at the average rate of the last ten years, and if the expenditure be kept within its present bounds, the object would be easily attained.

In the mean time, although with a remaining surplus of less than half-a-million, it is manifestly impossible for us to make any large present reduction of the Income-tax, there are certain measures which the Government propose, in the hope that they will afford a most material alleviation of its pressure.

In the first place, we propose to renew for the next three years the temporary Act of last year, and to take the first year's assessment for the remainder of the tax, unless in cases of manifest inadequacy, or where the party assessed himself wishes to re-open the question.

We add a provision that parties who desire it may pay up once for all their remaining assessments.

The vexation and oppression incidental to calling for fresh returns, and renewing each year an inquisitorial inquiry, are thus, we hope, completely obviated.

There is, however, a still greater and more beneficial change which we propose to make. We find, on inquiry, that the number of persons who pay the lower rate of 2 per cent. on incomes between Rs. 200 and Rs. 500 a year, amounts to nearly two-thirds of the whole who pay the tax, while the money they pay is not above one fifth of its whole proceeds.

In other words, between 500,000 and 600,000 persons are taxed to produce a gross revenue of not more than £350,000.

I do not put the case for the exemption of these persons on the ground that they are poor; for I have no sympathy with the socialist legislation which would place taxation exclusively on the rich. On the contrary, I believe that poor as well as rich, and often even more than rich, are interested in the support of the State and the maintenance of social order, and that the middle and working classes are those who, in the long run, suffer most from the seductions of political demagogues, and from the sickly sentimentality of injudicious philanthropists.

But in the present instance there are very different grounds on which to justify the exemption of the class in question.

The cost of collecting the Income-tax was last year £160,934, and of this by far the greater part is due to the numerous class of small payers. With the number of payers reduced to one-third, and existing assessments continued, nearly the whole extra establishment may be dispensed with, and I am quite within the mark in saying that we shall save at least £100,000.

Now, a tax which affects 600,000 persons, to produce £350,000 gross, of which at least £100,000 is absorbed by cost of collection, is condemned by the mere statement of figures.

Nor is this all, for I much fear the large cost of collection must be taken as an index to a large amount of annoyance and oppression. The mere numbers show that two-thirds of the objections to the Income-tax will be got rid of by relieving two-thirds of the tax-payers.

But the numbers alone do not adequately represent the real relief, for it is beyond all question that men of property and intelligence can defend themselves against mistakes or attempts at extortion by native officials, far better than the classes who just come within the limit of the 2 per cent. assessment.

This alone is a conclusive argument against any attempt to substitute for a total repeal of the 2 per cent. tax, a partial relief to all Income-tax payers by a reduction from 4 to 3 per cent. in the rate of payment.

We could fairly afford a reduction of 1 per cent. all round, by maintaining some of the most objectionable import duties, and such a reduction would not in the slightest degree diminish the cost of collection, or the annoyance and oppression incidental to it.

I know that the tax presses unduly upon many who pay their full 4 per cent. on an honest account of their incomes, while others escape.

But those are classes to whose intelligence and public spirit we may confidently appeal. We have endeavoured to deal frankly with them for some time past in all matters of financial policy, and our reward for so doing is, that on an occasion like this, we are able to take them as it were into our confidence, and explain to them without disguise our real position.

I do not believe in "ignorant impatience of taxation" on the part of educated gentlemen, like the great majority of the official and non-official Europeans in India, when they are fairly dealt with. On the contrary, I am convinced that however strongly they may feel the natural desire of everybody to escape his own peculiar burden, they will be satisfied with the assurance that the Government is sincerely desirous not to perpetuate the Income-tax, and with the pledge given for the future by the remissions already made.

The prosperity of India is their prosperity, and I am much mistaken in their intelligence and right feeling if they are disposed to use the dog-in-the-manger argument, that because we cannot afford to relieve them, 600,000 of our fellow-subjects of the humbler classes shall, for the sake of £250,000 which we do not want, be kept under the bondage of an unpopular tax.

At any rate, such is not the decision of one class, who will continue to pay the full Income-tax, viz., his Excellency the Governor-general and the members of the supreme council; and we therefore propose that from August next, i. e., from the termination of the second year of the Income-tax, assessments on incomes under 500 rupees a year shall cease, collections for the present year being of course completed.

I estimate the cost of this great boon at £250,000, i. e., I shall lose £350,000 of revenue and gain £100,000 in expenditure. This reduces my surplus to £179,814, which is as low as it is prudent to go; nor, indeed, should I have ventured to go so low, but for the fact that we are already investing such a large surplus in public works.

The estimate of cash requirements shows that we may expect to arrive at the 30th April 1863 with a cash balance of £16,607,660 after setting apart all we shall owe England in the transactions of the year.

I have endeavoured to make this latter estimate more intelligible than it has hitherto been. It is the estimate of cash transactions of the year as distinguished from revenue and expenditure.

A man who is a trustee for others, or who is borrowing or paying off capital for improving his estates, will have cash transactions in the course of the year very different from his current income and expenditure.

So it is with us; we have receipts and disbursements on various deposit accounts for service funds, suitors' funds, and otherwise, which are classed under the general head of "debt." Our receipts in 1862-63 under this head will be £11,053,360; our payments £11,799,150; the excess of £745,790 showing that we shall have diminished our outstanding liabilities to that extent principally by the payment of all remaining instalments of prize-money.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The other entries in the estimates are adjustments, between India and England, of sums paid here and received there as for railway construction, or vice versa, and a final entry is made of the remittance which, according to the estimate received from home, is necessary, after these adjustments, to discharge all the remaining liabilities of India to England on account of home expenditure for the year 1862-63.

This amounts to £3,727,732, viz., £2,200,000 for guaranteed railway interest, and a balance of £1,527,732 in general account.

The result leaves an estimated cash balance of £17,030,673 on the 30th April, 1863, which will exist in actual rupees and be entirely our own, subject, as far as I am aware, to no extraneous claims or liabilities whatever.

It only remains now briefly to sum up the results which I have endeavoured to convey to the Council in this necessarily long statement.

The year 1860-61 closed a long series of deficits with one still estimated at £6,000,000, and which in reality was upwards of £4,000,000.

1861-62 sees this deficit extinguished by a reduction of £5,000,000 of expenditure effected within twelve months in a total expenditure of £29,000,000 open to revision.

Further reductions and continued buoyancy of revenue find us, in 1862-63, notwithstanding the remission of the License-tax, and a large increase of outlay on opium and public works, with a surplus of £1,428,623.

We apply this surplus—

First. In further augmenting by £524,813, the grants for public works and education.

Secondly. In reducing to the normal rate the exceptional imports duties imposed on manufactures.

Thirdly. In relieving two-thirds of the payers of Income-tax from all further assessments.

We close the year 1861-62 with a cash balance of £17,690,000. We have every reason to believe that our estimates are on the safe side, and that we shall close the year 1862-63 with at least an equal balance.

This is the simple state of facts laid before you without exaggeration or embellishment.

There is no doubt that it contrasts favourably with the financial statements which India has been accustomed to receive, and with those which other great empires of the civilised world have been recently making.

Let us not be too confident in this prosperity, or relax that wise economy which has been the principal means of effecting so beneficial a change.

And, above all, let us not forget that, while thankful to the Almighty Ruler of events for giving us peace and tranquillity and this foretaste of material prosperity, we shall best merit the continuance of these blessings by using them as means for higher ends, for the diffusion of civilization, the moral and intellectual elevation of our people, and all that goes to the mighty task of building up solidly and securely the foundations of a great and enduring empire.

It is, I trust, a happy augury, that as our late Viceroy was able to close his career in India by relieving 5,000,000 of her Majesty's Indian subjects from the imposition of the License tax, his Excellency the present Governor-general is enabled to inaugurate his government by relieving two-thirds of the Income-tax payers, and reducing duties which press on the commerce of India with the mother country.

I closed my statement last year with the expression of a confident hope, that India might become the brightest jewel of the British Crown.

I close it now with a still more confident expression of the same hope, and with a feeling that the twelve months have not elapsed without something done towards its realisation.

ADDRESSES TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

A deputation from the British Indian Association waited upon Lord Elgin, at Government-house, on the 1st of April. The deputation, headed by Rajah Radhakant Deb Bahadoor, was received by his lordship in the Marble-hall. The following Address was then presented:—

"To the Right Hon. the Earl of ELGIN and KINCARDINE, K.S.I., G.C.B., Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

"MY LORD,—We, the members of the British Indian Association, meeting in this metropolis, representing various classes and interests of the native Indian community, crave leave to tender your Excellency our respectful and cordial welcome upon your arrival in this city, and to express the gratification we feel at your assumption of the exalted office of Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

"We beg leave to congratulate your Excellency on the peculiarly happy auspices under which your Excellency's administration commences. Peace reigns throughout the length and breadth of the land, the finances of the State are in a prosperous condition, the people active and emulous in the pursuit of peaceful progress, and their affection drawn to British rule by new incentives of attachment, unity, and good citizenship.

"Coupled with these circumstances, when we recal to mind, my lord, the eminent administrative talents and abilities, the unswerving rectitude of purpose, the love of fair play and even-handed justice to all, irrespective of colour or creed; in fine, the high principles of conduct which have ever characterised your Excellency's administration of vast colonial possessions and important political interests of Great Britain, and your distinguished missions in the interests of peace, commerce, and international communication in different parts of the globe, we picture to ourselves a future for British India, under your Excellency's rule, which, while sustaining the credit and honour of England, must materially add to the improvement, prosperity, happiness, and contentment of the teeming millions of this vast continent.

"In the tranquil times of peace and financial security which have now succeeded the stormy days of military revolution and financial disaster, in which your illustrious predecessor found himself embarrassed, your Excellency's occupation will not be less onerous than his. But it will be your Excellency's congenial task to consolidate the empire on the peaceful and solid basis laid by your Excellency's predecessor, to nurture the seeds of progress and development sown broadcast by him, to foster the intellectual and social advancement of the millions intrusted to your care, and, in short, to realise the wishes and hopes of her most gracious Majesty as expressed in her last Royal Proclamation.

"An impetus has been given to the development of the resources of the soil to which the present facilities to the introduction of British capital, skill, and energy will not fail to operate as an effective aid. While the advance of the material progress of the country will require every just and lawful encouragement by your Excellency, we trust and hope your Excellency will see the inexpediency of violent changes in the laws of the land or artificial aid to capitalists, incompatible with justice to other classes of the community, such as cannot fail to frustrate the end which all have in view, as well as to tarnish the British name and honour.

"One of the direct advantages of material advancement will be a replenished exchequer. With this source of financial strength, added to the vigorous operation of the present policy of economy and retrenchment, carried on under your Excellency's able guidance, we early hope to see the people released from the heavy and oppressive burdens which were imposed under exceptional circumstances, and which, in the absence of those circumstances, may be withdrawn, to the satisfaction and contentment of the people, and the increased security of the State in their confidence and attachment.

"The Association are solicitous of being permitted to offer their occasional humble suggestions and information on practical matters intimately affecting the wants, wishes, and well-being of the native Indian population with which they must necessarily be familiar.—I have the honour to be faithfully, my lord, your most obedient servant, (Signed) "RADHAKANT RAJAH BAHADOOR, President,

"On behalf of the British Indian Association. British Indian Association Rooms, No. 1, Larkins-lane, April 1, 1862."

His lordship replied as follows:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I receive with much satisfaction the welcome which you tender to me on my arrival in this city and assumption of the office of Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

"The testimony which you bear to the peaceful and prosperous condition of the country, and to the loyalty and spirit of improvement which prevail among the people generally, is most valuable, and I heartily subscribe to the tribute which you pay to the wise and beneficent administration of my predecessor.

"I earnestly hope that the period of my government may be as tranquil as you anticipate, and that I may be able to devote myself without interruption to what you truly designate the congenial task of endeavouring to realise the wishes and hopes of her most gracious Majesty, as expressed in her Royal Proclamation. But you must allow me to remind you that recent events referred to in your Address, very conclusively prove that the maintenance of order and the vigorous repression at the earliest moment of any attempt to disturb it, is one of the chief duties of a ruler in the country—a condition indispensable to moral, intellectual, and social progress. Unless this condition be fulfilled, capital, to the introduction of which you justly attach so much importance, will not flow in our direction, nor can those economies be effected to which you look for a reduction in the public burdens.

"I shall always be ready to bestow my best attention on any representations which you may address to me on matters affecting the wants, wishes, and well-being of the native population, who have claims on my sympathy and protection which will ever be present to my mind."

At twelve o'clock a deputation from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, consisting of the President, W. S. Fitzwilliam, Esq., the Vice-President, and about twenty of the leading merchants, waited upon the Viceroy with the Address, which was read by Mr. Fitzwilliam:—

"To H.E. the Right Hon. the Earl of ELGIN and KINCARDINE, K.T., K.S.I., and G.C.B., Viceroy and Governor-general of British India.

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—We, the President, Vice-President, and Members of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, beg leave to congratulate your Excellency on your safe arrival in the capital of British India, earnestly praying that your lordship may long enjoy the blessing of uninterrupted health.

"In the appointment of your Excellency to the distinguished post which you have been called to occupy, we recognise the wisdom of her Majesty and her care for the welfare of her Eastern dominions.

"My lord, if we venture to advert to your lordship's career as her Majesty's representative in Jamaica, in Canada, and in China, we presume to do no more than briefly allude to the success with which you filled those offices of highest trust, and which inspires in us a just confidence that your lordship's administration of the government of this country will conduce to the welfare of the people committed to your charge and redound to the glory of her Majesty's Crown.

"We entertain a grateful recollection of the important and opportune aid rendered by your Excellency in 1857, at the time her Majesty's rule in India was imperilled, when your Excellency, on your own responsibility, diverted for the relief of India the troops intended for the China expedition; and your lordship's service to the State on that memorable occasion demands the expression of our warmest thanks.

"My lord, we rejoice in the prospect of undisturbed tranquillity throughout India, in the signs of a growing contentment on the part of its people, and to find that the belief in the supposed antagonism of interests between the non-official Europeans and the natives of the soil is passing away. Nothing that injures the well-being of the people at large can benefit us, and we ask for no privileges for ourselves which we are not prepared to advocate as well for them.

"We rejoice also to think that your lordship enters upon the duties of your high office with the finances of the State placed upon a sound footing; and the recent declaration by the Supreme Government that the financial improvement has been demonstrated beyond controversy justifies our hope soon to see the burdens removed that an exceptional state of affairs imposed upon commerce, and which have been borne cheerfully in the assured conviction that they would not be continued a moment longer than the exigency required.

"We trust that the extension of commerce may be so encouraged by the improvement of existing means of internal communication, by the introduction of railways, by works of irrigation, and other material means of progress, that capital may find its way, without obstruction, throughout the British territory, and free scope be given to

OUDE AND ITS CAPABILITIES.

As soon as it became apparent that during the continuance of the unnatural contest in North America the Lancashire millowners would have to rely in a great measure upon India for the supply of their raw material, Lord Canning took immediate measures to facilitate the satisfaction of their wants. So little, however, was practically known as to the quantity and quality of cotton which could be regularly obtained from that country, that it was found necessary to appoint a Special Commissioner, to inquire into the extent of cotton cultivation actually in existence, and the probability of its increase or improvement. The choice of the Government fell upon Mr. Paterson Saunders, senior, than whom no one better qualified could have been found within the limits of British India. Unfettered by red tape, and untrammelled by official routine, that gentleman has succeeded in accumulating a vast amount of useful information, not only as regards the culture of cotton, but with reference to the general aspect and exigencies of the country. His first inquiries were directed to the state of agricultural industry in the North-West Provinces, and in a former number we had occasion to notice at some length the very valuable Report submitted by him to the Government. Since then Mr. Saunders has traversed the province of Oude in all directions, covering an average distance of ten miles a-day. For the most part he appears to have travelled in a buggy, attended merely by his own personal servants, his luggage being conveyed in native vehicles of one kind or another. His Report, we believe, has already been sent in to Government, and will, no doubt, be published for the benefit of the public; but in the mean time we are enabled, through the kindness of a friend, to give a tolerably correct outline of the result of Mr. Saunders' extensive and enterprising explorations.

The province of Oude is estimated to contain sixteen millions of acres, of which, probably, one million is waste land, chiefly occupied by belts of jungle forest. The soil is generally fertile, and capable of producing luxuriant crops of flax, opium, sugar-cane, and all kinds of cereals, and in some districts is singularly well adapted for the growth of the cotton plant. The climate is represented as superior to that of the Doab, being comparatively cool and moist, so that drought and famine are visitations of exceedingly rare occurrence, and even then restricted to very limited areas. Water is abundant, and is everywhere met with at a trifling depth, but artificial irrigation has been sadly neglected.

Kucha wells, indeed, are found in considerable numbers, but pucks or masonry wells are quite the exception, owing to their greater expense, and the uncertainty of tenure that prevailed under the native Government. What is really wanted is a canal that should utilise the waste of waters in the bed of the Sardah, and which at present subserve no other end than that of augmenting the volume of the Gogra. It is the opinion of competent persons that a canal which should tap the Sardah at Burmdeo on the verge of the Bhabur, or Waterless Forest, might be carried through Bareilly, Shahjehanpore, and Oude to the River Ganges, at a point a little above Allahabad, without encountering a single engineering difficulty that could not be easily overcome. The volume of water discharged by the Sardah as it issues from the hills is stated to be 6,390 cubic feet per second during the cold weather, while the Ganges Canal itself needs no greater supply than 5,000 cubic feet per second. The distance from Burmdeo to Allahabad is about three hundred miles, and through a considerable portion of this the canal would be the means of reclaiming large tracts of waste land that want nothing but water to make them rival the fertility of the most favoured districts in all Oude. And it must always be remembered that the healthiness of the country is immediately promoted by clearing away the jungle, and confining the drainage of the land to proper channels. In this manner the Kumaon Terai has been rendered available for a rapidly increasing population; and where travellers only a few years ago hurried through in terror of the death blast, flourishing towns and villages now appear, surrounded by smiling fields and productive fruit-trees. It is not denied, indeed, that any scheme which should seriously interfere with the navigation of the Gogra would be decidedly injurious; but this result would not be produced by the diversion of a portion of the tribute received from the Sardah. The Gogra itself is formed by the united streams of the Sardah and the Koreallee, the latter a broad and deep river descending from the mountains of Nepaul, and of greater volume than either the Jumna or the Ganges before their confluence at Allahabad. So far back as 1856 the Lieutenant-governor N.W.P. was disposed to think well of a suggestion made by the Commissioner of the Benares Division, to the effect that the Ganges should be abandoned at Patna for the Gogra, and that a good metalled road with a single line of rails should be made from Fyzabad to Lucknow. The sepoy mutiny, however, caused that scheme, with many others, to be laid aside for a time, but now that tranquillity has been restored it is very desirable that means should be adopted to avoid the circuitous navigation of the Ganges. Good metalled roads are also an urgent necessity, and kunkur is everywhere abundant, except in the Baraitch and Gonda districts. Of unmetalled roads there is no lack, but with even a moderate amount of traffic these soon become impassable for wheeled vehicles. Bridges, too, are much wanted, while the ferry boats at present employed are a disgrace to the country. Carts are sometimes detained for two or three days waiting for their turn to cross a river. These ferries, it seems, are farmed out by Government to the neighbouring landed proprietors, who sublet them to individuals too needy to provide suitable boats; but this might be obviated by a clause in the original lease specifying the size and number of the boats to be always kept in readiness.

It has already been stated that the waste lands in Oude, a very large proportion of which is culturable, fall very little short of one million of acres. A few thousand acres have been given to both natives and Europeans, but the latter alone have exerted themselves to clear away the jungle and turn the fine virgin soil to proper account. The reason assigned for this neglect is that under a three years' settlement it is not worth while to lay out money, the immediate benefit of which would accrue to the Government rather than to the land-holder. Until a permanent settlement be conceded, both cultivators and proprietors will be content to live from hand to mouth, getting what they can out of the earth with the least possible trouble and expenditure of capital. Of course no one could ask or expect that uncultivated lands should be admitted to the advantages of a permanent assessment, but this might be arranged by vesting the commissioners of districts with a discretionary power. The first step must be to make a regular and careful survey, and then to fix the final and unchangeable cess at half-assets. The fine forests of saul and sesoo trees have unfortunately, for the most part, been ceded to Nepaul, and those that remain are becoming utterly ruined by want of proper conservancy. Mr. Saunders, we understand, has recommended that they should be leased to private individuals or companies for a long term of years, and who might be bound to preserve their efficiency while profiting by their mature timber. Of the cotton-growing capabilities of this noble province there is no manner of doubt. The present waste lands in the Mahomdee district are described as eminently adapted for that purpose. The soil is light, porous, and deep, and if the Sardah Canal were constructed every facility would be afforded for irrigation. Whether the Oude cotton will ever surpass the middling Orleans is very questionable; and after all, probably the most profitable cultivation to be encouraged is that of flax. The plant is already grown in large quantities, but only for the sake of the seed, and it would be necessary to teach the natives the process of manufacture. In the first instance it might be necessary for the local Government to establish an experimental garden and factory, as has already been done in the Saharunpore district; but it is certain that the result would fully justify this temporary departure from the principle of private enterprise. The poppy also grows luxuriantly, and the opium cultivation is decidedly popular, alike with zemindars and ryots. As yet there are but few European settlers in the province, though it may surely be expected that, as its great natural advantages become known, capital and enterprise will flow towards this new outlet. It is gratifying to learn that there is no jealousy or antagonism existing between the natives and the foreigners residing in the midst of them. On the contrary, the most friendly feeling prevails, and perfect cordiality and forbearance have hitherto characterised their mutual relations. Lord Canning's policy has in this instance been wholly justified by the fruits it has borne, and the conciliation of the people of Oude is one of the most striking proofs of the soundness of his system of administration.

THE NAWAB OF THE CARNATIC.

It is well that there are two ways of telling the same story, or truly the East India Company would stand convicted of ingratitude so base and black as to surpass even that with which the Austrian Minister threatened to astonish the world. Prince Azeem-Jah, titular Nawab of the Carnatic, claims the musnud of his ancestors, with all the rights, privileges, and immunities pertaining thereunto. These pretensions he founds on the following grounds:—His great great grandfather, Anwar-ood-deen Khan—the Aniverly Khan of English writers—was appointed, in 1744, to the Nawabship of the Carnatic by his Highness the Nizam-ool-Moolk. In 1746 this chief protected the British settlements of Madras and Cuddalore when menaced by the French, and five years afterwards fell at the battle of Amboor “while bravely combating on the side of his English allies.” Anwar-ood-deen was succeeded by his second son, Mahomed Ali, on whom the Emperor conferred the territory of the Carnatic in fee-simple. This prince displayed on all occasions the warmest attachment to the English, and even refused two valuable portraits of Louis XVI. and Queen Marie Antoinette, offered as an inducement for detaching himself from their alliance. So great were the services he rendered, that Sir Thomas Rumbold, in a despatch dated January, 1780, did not hesitate to ascribe to them not only our influence but perhaps our very existence in the East. Confiding implicitly in the honour and sincerity of the Company, Mahomed Ali bestowed upon them several free grants of territory, together with a revenue of £200,000 per annum, and actually disbanded his troops, except such as were taken into the British service. The bounties lavished by the Nawab upon the Company were accepted by them in the light of compensation for the expenses they had incurred in fighting for their own existence against their formidable European rivals. Indeed, they had positively the presumption to regard their protector as if he were their debtor, and the good-natured Prince, after making several unsatisfactory arrangements, at length made over to them four-fifths of the entire revenues derived from the Carnatic. Five years later, however, another modification was effected, and the Nawab finally agreed to contribute, in time of peace, the annual sum of £360,000 towards the defence of the Carnatic, besides paying down £240,000 on account of his debts. Notwithstanding all these favours the Company were still dissatisfied, and importuned the Prince to make over to them the entire civil and military administration of his country; but he always evinced the utmost repugnance to accede to this proposition, and they were naturally “averse to using anything like compulsion with one from whom they had received so many proofs of friendship and devotedness.” His son and successor, Omdut-ool-Omrah, was equally resolute in asserting his independence until after the fall of Seringapatam, when among the palace records were found some letters to Tippoo Sultan from his own Vakeels, Gholam Ali

Khan and Ali Reza who, in 1792, had accompanied the Sultan's hostage sons to Madras. These letters, in fact, merely conveyed complimentary messages from the Nawabs Mahomed Ali and Omdut-ool-Omrah, to “their implacable enemy,” the Sultan, but were distorted by the Court of Directors into proofs of a treasonable correspondence. “The long and rooted aversion which was known to subsist between Tippoo Sultan and the family of the Nawab” might have been held as almost sufficient evidence of the absurdity of such a supposition, and it was not until after the death of Omdut-ool-Omrah that the Company themselves thought it right to take any steps to resent his alleged disloyalty. Lord Clive, then Governor of Madras, profiting by the confusion attendant on the temporary vacancy of the musnud, endeavoured to coerce the deceased Nawab's reputed son, Ali Houssain, into making over “the administration of the country absolutely and for ever to the Company,” engaging in return that “the rank, dignity, and splendour of the Nawabs of the Carnatic should be preserved in his family.” But Ali Houssain, illegitimate though he might be, was worthy of his adoptive father, and firmly rejected those disgraceful propositions. The Company, on the other hand, were not disposed to let their prey escape thus easily. The next heir to the musnud was Omdut-ool-Omrah's nephew, Azeem-ool-Dowlah, and he, despairing of otherwise obtaining wealth or influence, acceded to all that was demanded of him. A treaty was therefore concluded on the 31st January, 1801, by virtue of which the Company recognised that prince as titular Nawab of the Carnatic, while on his part “he merely resigned the entire civil and military administration of his dominions to the Government of Madras.” Azeem-ool-Dowlah died on the 2nd of August, 1819, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Azum Jah, who in his turn was gathered to his fathers on the 12th of November, 1825, leaving an only son, Gholam Mahomed Ghouse Khan, during whose minority his uncle, the present claimant, Azeem Jah, was invested with the Regency. On the 7th of October, 1855, his Highness Gholam Ghouse Khan died without issue, and Sir Henry Montgomery declared the musnud to be vacant. Prince Azeem Jah thereupon memorialised the Court of Directors, and in reply was informed that a monthly allowance of £10,000 would be regularly paid to him from the 8th of October, 1855, but that the Nawabship of the Carnatic had passed away for ever. And yet in 1829 the Court had made mention of his Highness as the next heir in the event of his nephew's demise, and the Marquis of Tweeddale also alluded to him in public as the successor to the musnud. Such, as we understand it, is the case as put by Prince Azeem Jah's advisers, and we confess that in accordance with the new policy pursued towards the native princes of India, his Highness' claim to the titular dignity enjoyed by his deceased nephew seems to be irresistible. At the same time it is only just to the reputation of the East India Company to correct the glaring misstatements compiled by his agents in furtherance of his claims.

Now, it is true that Anwar-ood-deen did assist the English in repulsing the French troops before the walls of Fort St. David, but only because he was disappointed in not receiving the town of Madras according to the engagement made by Duplex. Soon afterwards, however, he again embraced the French interests, and joined the second expedition despatched against Fort St. David. But to this alliance he did not long adhere, for on the arrival of large reinforcements from England he changed sides a third time, and undertook to send 2,000 horse to the support of his new allies, though only 300 ever reached their camp. In 1749 the Deccan became the scene of civil war, there being two candidates for the succession to the Nizamship, and also a rival to the Nawab in the person of Chunda Sahib, who was favoured by the French. A battle took place beneath the Fort of Amboor, when Chunda Sahib's French auxiliaries defeated the native levies of the aged Anwar-ood-deen, who was slain in the heat of the fight while striving to rally his broken and disordered soldiery. His eldest son was taken prisoner, but Mahomed Ali, the second one, fled to Trichinopoly, which he was with difficulty dissuaded by his English allies from surrendering to the enemy. His position was certainly not enviable, but at the critical moment the scene underwent an entire change through the heroic exploits of Clive. The surprise of Arcot, and its successful defence against the formidable host under the command of Chunda Sahib's son, followed by the victory of Coverpauk, speedily led to the relief of Trichinopoly, and the death of Chunda Sahib himself. Mahomed Ali thus owed his elevation to the musnud entirely to British bayonets, and by the same means alone was he maintained on that slippery seat. As for the testimonial in his favour from Sir Thomas Rumbold, no one who knows anything of that individual's character would hesitate in accounting for it as a return for “value received.” It was about the same time he assured the directors that all was quiet in the Carnatic, and that no further disturbances need be apprehended, whereas at that very moment Hyder Ali had already manifested his hostile intentions towards the British, and had treated Sir Thomas' envoys with defiance and contempt. Throughout Mahomed Ali's possession of power his territories were the scene of the most frightful mismanagement and oppression, and his finances had arrived at a degree of confusion than which nothing could possibly be worse. At his death, in 1795, Lord Hobart made an attempt to obtain the cession of certain territories from his successor as security for the Company's claims, but was met by a resolute refusal on the part of Omdut-ool-Omrah, under whom his unhappy subjects possessed life and nothing more. Instead of cordially assisting his protectors against “his implacable enemy” Tippoo Sultan, he did everything in his power to obstruct the supply of their wants, and invariably failed to fulfil any engagement he had made. Like his father, Mahomed Ali—who had apprised Tippoo that the British Government had discovered his intrigues with the Mahrattas—he looked up to the Sultan as the head of the native confederacy that was to sweep the English out of the Peninsula, and probably drew up the cipher, the key to which was found among other criminating papers in Seringapatam. Some delay unavoidably occurred in pursuing the investigation which established the Nawab's dates of their departure from and return to duty from leave, other than short leave, under para. 62, page 12, Pay and Audit Regulations, the C. in C. directs the attention of officers to para. 68, page 14, of the Pay and Audit Regulations quoted in the margin.*

Capt. (brev. maj.) E. Yates, 28th regt. N.I., having been rep. fit to return to duty, the unexpired portion of the leave of absence, on m.c., granted to him in G.O. Dec. 6, 1861, is cancl., fr. the date on which he may join his regt.

Lieut. B. H. Preston, 2nd Eur. L.I., is app. to do duty until further orders with the 31st regt. L.I.; to join.

* Commanding officers and heads of departments will be held strictly responsible that the dates on which officers absent from muster, actually depart on temporary leave, as well as the dates on which they resume their duties, are duly entered in the muster rolls or abstracts.

INDIAN OFFICERS ENTERING REGIMENTS OF THE LINE.

No. 288.—The foll. G.O. by the Govt. of India, dated April 8, 1862, No. 399, is republished:—

H.E. the G.G. in Council is pleased to direct the publication, for general information, of the following paras. of a mil. letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 81, of the 28th Feb. last, and of the G.O. issued by H.R.H. the Gen. C. in C., therein referred to, No. 807, dated 19th Feb., 1862:

Para. 1. I forward with this despatch copy of a G.O. which has been published by H.R.H. the Gen. C. in C., with my concurrence, establishing the regulations under which the officers of the Indian army will enter regiments of the line. You will observe that it has been determined that an officer joining a purchase regiment from the Indian service (which he may do under the provisions of my despatch No. 154 of 8th April, 1861), will be placed on the same footing in all respects with the rest of the officers of that regiment.

2. In giving my assent to the arrangement, I was not unmindful of para. 31 of my despatch, No. 319 of the 10th August, 1861, in which it was laid down that the privilege of reckoning full time, wherever employed for Indian pension, should be granted to officers of cavalry and infantry who might be appointed under the provisions of my despatch No. 154 of 8th April, to fill vacancies in line regiments caused by the transfer of officers from those regiments to the staff corps.

3. Upon further consideration of this subject, it appeared to me not desirable that an officer joining a purchase regiment of the line should enjoy advantages differing either in kind or degree from those allowed to his brother officers.

4. Instead, therefore, of continuing to such officer a claim to Indian pension (which, under the despatch above quoted, was allowed only so long as he remained with the regiment he first joined), and denying him the privilege of purchase and of retirement on full or half pay under rules of H.M.'s service, it has been determined to place such officer on precisely the same footing in all these respects as the rest of the officers of his corps.

5. You will therefore cause para. 31, clause 3, of the despatch No. 319, to be cancelled, at the same time that the accompanying G.O. is published for the information of the army.

6. Such officers as may have made application for transfer to a line regt. under the circumstances now referred to must be afforded the opportunity of reconsidering the subject.

GENERAL ORDER—No. 807.

Horse Guards, S.W. Feb. 19, 1862.

With regard to the addition of twelve non-purchase regts. of the line to the British army, H.R.H. the General C. in C. is pleased, with the concurrence of the Rt. Hon. the Secs. of State for War and for India, to establish the following regulations:—

1. In non-purchase corps of the line no officers can sell their commissions.

Those who enter from the Indian service retain their claim to Indian pension, and all others are entitled, with H.M.'s permission, to retire on full or half-pay, according to the terms of H.M.'s Warrants of Oct. 14, 1858, and March 28, 1861.

2. An officer joining a purchase regt. from the Indian service will be placed on the same footing in all respects with the rest of the officers of that regt.

Having forfeited all claim to Indian pension, he will become entitled to retire on full or half-pay under the Warrants above specified.

Non-purchase officers of such regts. have the privilege of receiving, subject to the consent in each case of the General C. in C. and of the Sec. of State for War (which is liable to be withheld if the retirement results from misconduct), an allowance, on retirement, of £100 for each year's service, whether in the British or Indian army, provided the total amount does not exceed the price of the commission resigned.

By order of H.R.H. the General C. in C., (Signed) JAMES YORKE SCARLETT,
Adjutant-general.

TRANSPORT OF TROOPS.

Head Qrs., Camp Umballah, March 24.—Under instructions from Govt., the C. in C. directs that on all occasions when transport usually supplied by the commissariat department is required for the movement of troops in large or small detachments, or for individuals authorised to travel at the public expense, requisitions for such carriage or conveyance should invariably be made in the first instance to the commissariat department, instead of calling on that department to pay the charge for such transport supplied by other agency; and it is only on that department representing its inability to meet such requisitions, or other urgent causes preventing this course being adopted, that other arrangements are to be made, when an immediate reference is to be submitted to the commissariat department to defray the cost of such moves.

Officers commanding stations and corps will in future be held personally responsible for any unnecessary infringement of this rule, and for any avoidable delay in communicating to the commissariat department any orders creative of expense requiring adjustment thereby.

The leave granted to Brev. major G. Jackson, comdnt. 2nd Bengal cav., in G.O. of Sept. 27 last, will be held to have commenced on Dec. 17, 1861, and terminated on March 9, 1862, instead of the dates therein given.

Ens. F. W. Graham, gen. list, doing du. with 39th regt. N.I., has obtained a certificate of qualification in surveying.

NEGLECT OF RULES REGARDING LEAVE.

April 17.—Inconvenience having been experienced by pay dept. from staff officers and officers detached from their corps not entering in their abstracts the guilty complicity with the common enemy, and when Lord Wellesley's despatch on the subject reached Madras that prince was lying at the point of death. It was therefore not communicated to him, but as soon as all was over the British Commissioners distinctly intimated that Ali Housain, the deceased Nawab's reputed son, would not be recognised unless he agreed to transfer the civil and military administration of the Carnatic to the British Government. To these conditions Ali Housain at first assented, but on the following day he withdrew his consent, acting, as he said, on good advice. Prince Azim-ool-Dowlah, however, proved more tractable, and did whatever he was desired to do; and since then the territories of the Carnatic have been governed directly by the British Government. It thus clearly appears that no gratitude whatever is due on the part of the latter towards their false, fickle, impotent allies, the Nawabs of the Carnatic. British prowess alone maintained the Nawabship itself, and kept on the musnud a family totally unfit to hold a post of such dignity. If Prince Azem Jah asks for nothing more than the title, it is scarcely worth while to refuse it, however objectionable may be the means he has adopted to gain his ends. Instead of applying solely to the paramount Power, he appeals "to all the social and political clubs of Great Britain and India, to all the Colleges and Universities of Great Britain and India," and finally "to all the Native Princes of India." The appeal, indeed, is not likely to benefit him, but is rather calculated to injure his cause, as compliance with his demands might be represented as the result of pressure from without. But it is quite possible that this ill-advised step has been taken without his knowledge by his ignorant counsellors and agents, and it would be hardly fair to hold him accountable for their absurd and ridiculous proceedings.

INDIAN JUDGES.—(India Office, May 13.)—The following gentlemen, being Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlat, at Calcutta, have been appointed Judges of the High Court of Judicature for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, under the provisions of the Act 24th and 25th of Victoria, cap. 104, viz.:—Sir Barnes Peacock, Knight, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, to be Chief Justice of the High Court; and Sir Charles Robert Mitchell Jackson, Knight, and Sir Mordaunt Lawson Wells, Knight, Judges of the Supreme Court; and Henry Thomas Raikes, Esq., Charles Binny Trevor, Esq., George Lock, Esq., Henry Vincent Bayley, Esq., and Charles Steer, Esq., Judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlat, to be Judges of the High Court. And the Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of John Paxton Norman, Esq., and Walter Morgan, Esq., barristers-at-law, and Francis Baring Kemp, Esq., Walter Scott Seton Karr, Esq., and Louis Stuart Jackson, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, to be Judges of the said High Court.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The shipments of specie by the Pera will be £387,977, of which £375,375 is silver and £12,602 gold. The amount to Alexandria is £10,000, to China and the Straits £365,765, and to India £12,212.

DR. CAMPBELL, C.B., doing duty with the 19th Hussars, at Lucknow, has been suddenly obliged to leave for England on account of ill-health. Dr. Campbell is one of the "illustrious garrison of Lucknow," and, certainly, no man in his capacity worked harder or more willingly than he did during the siege.

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk routes conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP OF INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 5s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CAROL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo, bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—SAFE YET EFFECTIVE.

No other medicine combines the same purifying, alterative, and tonic properties which have raised these Pills so highly in the estimation of the public. In unhealthy situations, close apartments, and sedentary occupations, no means so potent for cooling, cleansing, and regulating the human body can be found. Holloway's Pills wonderfully improve a weak digestion by augmenting the gastric secretion and moderately rousing the function of the liver; hence their well-known power of removing tainted breath and remedying every other dyspeptic unpleasantness. They entirely overcome the lethargic symptoms attending bad digestion, and have for years been esteemed as the best and safest family aperient. They are particularly suitable for young females and children.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd of April is highly satisfactory. Mr. Laing's Financial Statement appears to have made a very favourable impression on natives as well as Europeans—the latter even refraining from grumbling at the heavy income-tax to which they are likely to be subjected for yet three years to come. The best test of public confidence is, of course, the price of Government securities, and the Five-and-a-Half per Cents. have gone up to eleven premium, with a prospect of a further rise.

A native meeting has been held in Calcutta to do honour to Sir J. P. Grant, and seems to have been as tumultuous and disorderly as might have been expected from past experience of similar gatherings. The Bengalees imitate English customs and institutions much in the same manner that a Chinaman copies the pattern of a coat or a pair of breeches. Gaping seams, missing buttons, wear and tear, are all faithfully repeated, and yet after all the garment proves a bad fit. So with Young Bengal. Public meetings are convened, a chairman duly elected, and cut-and-dry resolutions proposed in language more or less fluent and appropriate, but the hybrid affair bears unmistakable marks of its mongrel origin, and the ass's ears and tail betray its mixed descent.

Coincident with Sir J. P. Grant's departure from the scene of his obstructive labours is the organisation of a constabulary force for India, the details of which will appear in our next issue. In our present number, however, we give Lord Canning's rejoinder to the late Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, which finally disposes of Sir John's querulous and somewhat disrespectful protest.

No further accounts have been received from Afghanistan, but there can be no doubt of the gross exaggeration that pervades the statements of the native correspondent of the Delhi Gazette. It is probable, indeed, that grave disturbances have arisen in that country, in anticipation of the death of the aged Ameer, and it is more than possible that the chief actor in the troubled scene is the ruler of Herat, who may have enlisted under his banner a certain number of Turcomans. But it is hardly credible that the Shah could so speedily have forgotten the consequences of the last two invasions of Afghan territory, or that an army could have been collected and equipped for an offensive campaign without the cognisance of the British embassy. In any case there is no reason to suppose that the Russian Government is in the slightest degree concerned in producing the present state of affairs, nor is the safety of British India in any way compromised by the ever varying feuds of the fierce barbarians beyond its north-western frontier.

We invite the attention of our military readers to the Commander-in-Chief's very sensible order on the subject of cholera. Sir Hugh is clearly of opinion that prevention is better than cure, and discreetly retires from a foe he cannot be sure of defeating.

It will be seen from our advertisement columns that Lieut.-Col. W. Freeth and Lieut.-Col. W. S. Ferris are the two candidates for the post of home agent to the Bengal Military Fund. Vote papers can be obtained at the office of the Fund, and must be sent in before the 16th of June. Another advertisement relates to the extension of the Punjab Railway from Umritsur to Delhi, an undertaking morally certain of a great success.

From China we learn that the Taepings have again been attacked and routed by the Allies, and driven to the distance of thirty miles from Shanghai. In a subsequent affair Admiral Hope was wounded in the calf of the leg. At Ningpo the rebels are still in possession, but the utmost order is preserved, and amicable relations maintained with the European residents. Mr. Alcock, the British Minister in Japan, returns home by this mail.

BENGAL.

THE SONTHALS.

In the anxiety of the Government of Bengal to restore peace and quiet in the Sonthal Pergunnahs, when the people rose in insurrection in 1856, a most pernicious system was allowed to take root, which is now, and has been ever since, a source of considerable inconvenience to the Government. When Mr. Halliday, then Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, proceeded to the disturbed districts, he accorded several personal interviews to those among the Sonthals who either had, or were supposed to have, influence with the people. The freedom with which Mr. Halliday admitted these people to his presence, and the attention he gave to all their complaints, no matter of what nature or against whom, induced them to look upon the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal as the arbitrator in all their disputes and the rectifier of all their grievances. Of the kindness they met with from him in their personal interviews they have ever retained a lively recollection, and from the day on which he quitted the Sonthal districts they have been in the habit of addressing and forwarding direct to the Lieut.-governor their petitions on every subject. The permission to address direct the Lieut.-governor, whether tacit or substantive, no matter which, accorded to these people, could hardly fail to spread to others similarly situated, and spread it did. At the time this system first grew up it was thought difficult of suppression, inasmuch as it was feared that any rejection of their petitions might drive a people but recently in open rebellion to revert to acts of violence. Their petitions were, therefore, received; and whether they related to general or special cases, whether seeking for redress in cases to hear which the courts were open, or whether levelled against the officers of the Government employed in the Sonthal districts, mattered not; they were received and reports upon the subjects contained in them were called for from the local officers. Under such circumstances it was but natural that the Sonthals should consider themselves a peculiarly favoured people; or that, Asiatic-like, they should attribute the concessions made to them to fear. They regarded the officers, judicial and civil alike, as persons without authority, and against whom they could register complaints with the Lieut.-governor with a certainty of their meeting with attention. Nothing but disaster could be anticipated from so highly objectionable a system; nothing else could be expected but a recurrence of the scenes enacted in 1855-56 on any attempt being made to correct it? The spasmodic efforts at rebellion which have from time to time displayed themselves in the Sonthal Pergunnahs of late years, have arisen solely out of an endeavour to put a stop to the practice of forwarding petitions direct to the head of the Bengal Government, and the attempt to convince the Sonthals that they must make themselves amenable to the Courts established by Government, and render obedience to its officers. In consequence of the sanction accorded by Mr. Halliday to these people to address him direct, and of the length of time over which this permission has extended, it is found far from an easy task to induce the Sonthals to forego it, and to render obedience to the officers appointed to rule over them. It is found that so many difficulties stand in the way of a satisfactory arrangement between the local officers and the people, that the Government has been applied to to appoint a Commission to inquire into the subject.

One prominent cause for the existing difficulty is the vivid recollection which many of these people have of what some of their members are said to have seen when sent to Calcutta, when a person calling himself the Rajah of Benares located himself in Raneegunge and despatched agents into the Sonthal districts to incite the people to rise in rebellion. This man was ultimately exposed by Mr. Robinson, to whom he is said to have given warning of the then pending rebellion. Before, however, he was deprived of his liberty he contrived on several occasions to collect about him the most discontented of the Sonthals, whom he despatched to Calcutta, and having caused them to be shown the various public buildings, &c., and given an insight into the state of the city by introducing them to the European shop windows and the Burra Bazaar, he had pointed out to them that so soon as the yoke of the Feringhee was cut off, all this would belong to the legitimate princes of the land, who would at once reduce the Land-tax, and by distributing the wealth of the English among the people free them from debt. Incredible as it may appear, the Sonthals, who have either seen or heard from their fellows of these things, still look to the day when the British shall be driven into the Hooghly and their wealth be distributed among them. The only effect Mr. Halliday's kindly treatment has had upon them, has been to convince them that fear dictated the kindness, and to perpetuate the belief that the day will yet come when they shall possess the Feringhee's wealth, and be freed of debt and Land-tax. Concessions to natives of eastern climes have ever the same effect; and though it may put off for a time a rebellion that threatens, it will none the less surely come, and repay with treachery and bloodshed the humanity which has sought to alleviate suffering.—Englishman.

SUMBULPORE.

What the jungle of Lullupore has been on the west, that has the district of Sumbulpore been, for the last five years, on the east of Central India. In both territories the flickering embers of the mutiny of 1857 seem to have been at last extinguished. So little is known of the latter, and the work of pacification has been so well accomplished by Major H. B. Impey, the deputy commissioner, that we propose to make our readers familiar with what should yet prove a happy valley.

The river Mahanuddy which falls into the Bay of Bengal above the famous shrine of Juggernaut, divides the valley of Sumbulpore for 112 miles into two parts, the whole breadth of the district being sixty miles. Like the simple tribes of Chota Nagpore, not far distant, the people are partly low caste Hindoos and partly aborigines, whose chiefs of course lay claim to the blood of the Rajpoots. After bestowing the raj on a chief called Sahi, we reannexed the country in 1849, on the failure of his heirs. Sumbulpore has been the impenetrable asylum of the disaffected or oppressed from the days of the Maharrattas. No army could ever scour its rocky retreats unless aided by a willing population in the pursuit. Such a population was not that of Sumbulpore. When the rebellion of 1857 broke out they were prepared to suffer in body and property, to be a prey not only to the more disciplined bands of comparatively respectable rebels, but to numerous meaner villains, who, taking advantage of the times, used to follow like jackals in the wake of the former. They believed that at the commencement of the revolt, when the rebels had tested the good faith of the authorities, parties who had surrendered on a guarantee of life had been treacherously hanged. When the Queen's Proclamation offered pardon to all in arms against the Government if they would return to their homes and peaceful pursuits, these men had none such to return to. They had already been given to one man—the one who had negotiated with their favourite leader and induced him under a guarantee of life to surrender. Had this leader not been hanged, doubtless at the very commencement all would have come in, for his surrendering was an earnest of reconciliation. His execution closed the door of reconciliation and hope. Revenge and then despair and distrust kept all aloof.

Such injudicious treatment of the rebels as this, followed by still more injudicious delay, kept Sumbulpore in a state of chronic revolt previous to the arrival of Major Impey. He therefore asked for a repetition of the Proclamation. It was granted. Within the term allowed only one man surrendered. But he was a most important character, a rebel of a neighbouring State. Negotiations had, however, been opened with most of the bands, and all overt acts of rebellion were stayed. Distrust was too strong for a time, but at last Kun Nae Naik, one of the most powerful and influential leaders, surrendered. This was the more important, because he was the nephew of the poor fellow who, four years before, had been hanged. His father, too, a most dreaded leader and "karpurdaz" of the hanged man's estates, was ready to come in if only he found his nephew fairly dealt with. Meanwhile Major Rattray was marching into Sumbulpore with a force of military police, and stayed operations until the success of Major Impey's negotiations should be further apparent. One by one, as confidence became strengthened, every rebel leader of the northern part of the district, including most important men of the surrounding States, and Soorundur Sahi's brothers came in. The zemindars were restored to their estates, and immediately peace ensued. The treatment of Soorundur Sahi's brothers and sons has to be still determined by Government. The son, as not a guilty party at any time, was put in possession of his two hereditary villages. The brothers are quietly settled in the city; one has actually done good service. Oodunt Sahi engaged to proceed to the southern part to induce the rebel zemindars secreted in the hills and jungles to surrender. He succeeded in bringing in the most powerful and influential of them all, long after Major Rattray with his force had left. And now the only outlaws are Soorundur Sahi himself and two others. They still wait to see whether their brethren have been treated with good faith. The district is all quiet and secure.

The Bengal Government having, on the whole, mismanaged Sumbulpore, the district is, we understand, to be constituted a part of the Central Provinces. The truth is, Bengal is too vast to be governed by one man on an effete system. It might have been better to unite Sumbulpore with Chota Nagpore, Sirgoojah, and the surrounding petty districts, under a separate Commissioner. A road will pass through it from Nagpore to the coast. There is a population of some 300,000, and the alluvial plains of the valley produce in abundance not only rice and sugar, but wheat. The wild indigo and poppy plants abound. In the bed of the Mahanuddy gold-washers find a precarious subsistence, but not unfrequently light upon those famous Sumbulpore diamonds which bear the names of the four Hindoo castes according to their value. The hills are clothed with teak, which should be carefully conserved. While Sumbulpore is one of the least known parts of Bengal, it is one of the most promising, and should receive at least as much attention from the authorities in time of peace as it has called forth during a rebellion caused by mismanagement and bad faith, and finally quelled by a combination of political tact and firmness.—Friend of India.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S RECENT TOUR.

In a previous issue we gave some account of the Commander-in-Chief's late journey down the Punjab frontier from Peshawar as far as Mungrota, an outpost in the Dera-Ghazee-Khan district. The journey thus related extended over more than three hundred and fifty miles, and was accomplished, it will be recollected, on horseback, at the rate of from forty to fifty miles a day. It will not be uninteresting to our military readers to know how the remaining portion of what may fairly be called this arduous journey was accomplished.

Mungrota is an important frontier post, garrisoned by both cavalry and infantry, and faces the bold mountains of the Sooliman range, which afford a home to the powerful tribe of Belooches known as Bozdars. This tribe was guilty of incessant raids upon British territory from the annexation of the Punjab up to the year 1857. The measure of their offences being then full, an expedition entered their hills at the beginning of that year under General Chamberlain, and, after a severe contest, convinced them that they must for the future carry their depredations elsewhere than into British territory. It was almost immediately after their return from this expedition that many of the troops composing it, consisting entirely of the Punjab Irregular Force, were put in motion for Delhi and Hindostan on the breaking out of the mutiny. It is a circumstance which has escaped general notice, but which in importance is only inferior perhaps to the timely arrival of the China expedition in Eastern waters, that an expedition against the Muhsood Wuzurees, which it was intended should follow the reduction of the Bozdars, was postponed at the eleventh hour to a more convenient season, on account of the unusually early approach of the summer heats that year. But for this the month of May, 1857, might have found the only reliable native troops in the service of the British Government involved in a campaign in the Wuzuree-hills, instead of being in readiness to march from their cantonments in the direction of Delhi at the first news of the Meerut massacre.

The Commander-in-Chief spent the 16th of February in the modest quarters maintained at Mungrota to shelter the frontier officers on their visits of inspection to this and the adjoining posts. In the evening he looked at the fort and garrison with the interest he invariably displays in military matters, however apparently insignificant. The following morning he was early in the saddle as usual, and, resting for a few hours, after a ride of twenty-eight miles and a visit to two intermediate outposts, he reached Dera Ghazee-Khan, after a further ride of twenty-two miles, in the evening. It had been arranged that at Dera-Ghazee-Khan the Commander-in-Chief's tour on the frontier should be brought to an end, and that he should there recross the Indus, and proceed direct to Mooltan. But having seen so much, he was loth to leave his self-imposed task incomplete, and to close his tour before he had seen the remaining and southernmost part of the frontier. Accordingly he halted at Dera-Ghazee-Khan on the 18th whilst the arrangements for the onward journey were being perfected, and filled up the time by holding a levee for the officers and a durbar for the native chiefs, and afterwards inspecting the troops, consisting of cavalry and infantry—a regiment of each arm. On the morning of the 19th of February a squadron of the 4th Punjab cavalry was paraded that he might see how regiments of irregular cavalry encamp, and might examine their tents. In the afternoon he again took horse, and rode thirty-eight miles to a camp which had been prepared at the small outpost of Gungehree. Here frontier life is seen to perfection, the inhospitable desert in which the post is situated affording hardly a trace of animal or vegetable life, and the solitary well which gives water to the post being the only one for miles.

The first stage the next morning was Hurrund, a place of sufficient importance on this portion of the frontier as a military post to claim a few passing words of notice. The fort was planned and commenced by General Ventura, when he held charge of the Dera-Ghazee Khan district for Runjeet Sing. General Ventura was removed elsewhere however before the fort was completed, and the Goorchannees, a truculent though insignificant tribe of the adjoining hills, forthwith fell upon and mastered the Sikh garrison. Stout-hearted and able Sawun Mull, the Maharajah's Dewan at Mooltan and father of the rebel Moolraj, immediately marched to the rescue, drove off the Goorchannees, whom he followed through the Hurrund pass into the hills, and then harried the tribe for eight consecutive days with fire and sword. The fort was then completed, and the control it conferred over the pass always enabled the Sikhs to deal at an advantage with the Goorchannee and adjoining hill tribes and to keep them in tolerable subjection. Thus Jawahir Mull, General Ventura's successor at Dera-Ghazee-Khan, entered the hills once in military array from Hurrund, and even the effeminate Moolraj is reported to have swept the Goorchannee valleys on one occasion of twelve hundred camels, besides sheep and goats innumerable. The part that the Hurrund fort played in Moolraj's rebellion will be in the recollection of many.

After leaving Hurrund, the Commander-in-

Chief had still a ride of thirty-three miles before reaching Rajunpore, the last military station on the frontier, where he was to pass the night; and it was evening before he quitted the saddle. Rajunpore has only lately been occupied as a cantonment. The troops to whom is intrusted the guardianship of this portion of the border, were formerly located at a place called Asnee, a few miles south west of Rajunpore, which was abandoned for troops after many years' trial, for the same reason which had previously led the aborigines to leave it—namely, the bad quality of the water. At Rajunpore, which is the quarters of a regiment of Punjab cavalry, a pleasant looking little station is growing up, under the auspices of Lieut. col. Hughes. On the 21st the Commander-in-Chief rode over to Mittancote, distant about fifteen miles, where a diminutive gunboat of the Indus Flotilla awaited him. Embarking in the Fox, he steamed up the Indus to the confluence of that river and the Chenab, and, returning to Mittancote, rode back from thence to Rajunpore—a fair day's work, indeed, for a nominal halt! Unfortunately no steamer except the Fox (which affords no accommodation beyond what her crew require) could be made available from Mooltan, or Sir Hugh Rose would have completed his tour on the frontier by steaming from Mittancote to Mooltan. He was therefore obliged to ride back from Rajunpore to Dera-Ghazee-Khan, and pass thence to Mooltan. Accordingly on the morning of the 22nd of February he first inspected the 1st Punjab cavalry, and then held a levee of the Belooch chiefs on horseback preparatory to riding to Jampore, forty-two miles. After a night's rest in the small traveller's bungalow at Jampore he brought his tour to a close by cantering into Dera-Ghazee-Khan, thirty-two miles, and the same afternoon crossed the Indus and reached Moznufgurh, twenty miles further. On the 24th of February he reached Mooltan.

Those even who think least of Sir Hugh Rose will admit that he deserves great credit for the enterprising spirit which prompted him, at the cost of so much personal discomfort and fatigue, to undertake and carry through the tour of which our columns have thus chronicled the main incidents. Even assuming, which it would be most unjust to do, that the motives which led his Excellency to undertake the tour were not of the highest order, and that idle curiosity or an ostentatious display of vigour and activity have been the springs of action rather than a bonâ fide desire to do the State service, he is surely entitled to our applause for the physical exertions he has made, and for the excellent example he has afforded to every officer in command throughout the country. That such an example was not superfluous—on the contrary, that it was urgently needed—we believe that no officer who lives with his eyes open and has the good of the service at heart, will doubt.—Friend of India.

NATIVE MEETING IN HONOUR OF SIR J. P. GRANT.

A large number of the native inhabitants of Calcutta met at the rooms of the British Indian Association on Wednesday, April 16th, to adopt an address to Sir John Peter Grant expressive of their regret at his approaching departure.

Baboo Rajendro Mullick having moved that Rajah Radhakant Bahadoor take the chair, the proceedings were opened by

The Chairman, who said that they had assembled to determine in what manner they could best testify their regret at the approaching departure of Sir John Peter Grant. They felt under obligation to him more deep than language could convey, and it was to relieve themselves in some degree of its weight that they intended to give expression to their feelings of gratitude, and to render to excellence its due reward of praise. So complicated and conflicting were the interests of the presidency of Bengal, that it was natural that much diversity of opinion regarding the conduct of its ruler should prevail. In the midst of Sir John Peter Grant's administration the widest scope had been given to this diversity; but he hoped that would not prevent an unanimous expression of esteem for his motives and for his exertions in the cause of justice and humanity. He had benefited millions, and had offended but a few, whose main objects were not, as his were, catholic and disinterested. He would not detain them long on account of the heat, but before he sat down would read a highly satisfactory letter which he had received from the Nawab Nazim of Moorsshedabad.

"To the Chairman of the meeting held for the purpose of testifying public respect to the Hon. Sir John Peter Grant, &c.

"SIR,—I am requested by his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal to express his cordial sympathy with the objects of the meeting. His Highness has read with much interest the proposed address to Sir John Peter Grant, every word of which has his full concurrence. His Highness desires to place at your disposal a cheque for Rs.2,000 as his subscription towards any object on which the meeting might decide.

(Signed) "RAJENDRO NARAIN DEB."

Rajah Kalikrishna Bahadoor, in Hindostanee, proposed the first resolution:—"That this meeting desires to record its deep sense of respect and gratitude to the Hon. Sir John Peter Grant, K.C.B., for his eminent public services during the period of his administration of Bengal."

Baboo Ramanath Tagore seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Baboo Cowar Suttanund Ghosal rose to propose the next resolution:—

"That the following address be presented to Sir John Peter Grant on the occasion of his retirement from the Lieutenant-governorship of Bengal, and that the address be signed by the Chairman on behalf of the meeting."

He then read the address, which was as follows:—

"HON. SIR,—We, the native inhabitants of Calcutta and its suburbs, at public meeting assembled, desire to approach your Honour with this address, expressive of our deep sense of respect and gratitude for your wise administration of the Bengal provinces during the period of your Honour's government.

"The duties of the Lieutenant governor of Bengal are peculiarly arduous; yet unaided by an Executive Council, till lately deprived of legislative authority dependent on the Supreme Government even in minute detail of administration, with a province for years the victim of neglect and misrule, though the richest and most productive in the empire, your Honour's rule, short as it has unfortunately been, has been marked by measures of reform and progress, which, while attesting the high ability and wisdom that guided them, have not failed largely to promote the general well-being of the teeming millions of this country.

"A momentous social revolution in the history of Bengal has been effected under the auspices of your rule, establishing beyond question the liberty of the subject to the full exercise of his rights of labour or property. In the prosecution of your just and enlightened policy on this vitally important question, your Honour naturally met with much personal opposition, misrepresentation, and obloquy, but the calm courage and the lofty sense of duty and justice with which you nobly pursued your object, not only materially advanced the righteous cause in which you were embarked, but greatly enhanced the public respect for your administration.

"Amidst the cares and anxieties of watching and directing this important social revolution, you were not unmindful of other pressing administrative reforms and improvements. By multiplying magisterial subdivisions in some of the leading districts of the country you have struck with awe the oppressive and the evil-disposed, and lent the weak and the helpless an effective shield of protection. By the enforcement of strict discipline you have impressed the subordinate authorities with a just sense of their duty, and carried out the objects of many hitherto neglected Acts of the legislature. By a wise, thoughtful, and ingenious distribution of the local Public Works' funds you have given the country an earnest of improvement in the multiplication of roads and communications—as important to the cause of commerce and inter-communication as beneficial to the people. By earnest intercessions with the supreme Government you have opened a prospect of financial justice to Bengal hitherto unknown. By a liberal construction of the policy of the Government of India, regarding the sale of waste lands and the redemption of the land-tax, you have recommended arrangements which, if adopted, will secure important advantages to capitalists. By these, and similar other measures, you have diffused over the country elements of progress and prosperity, which, it is hoped, under the fostering care of your successors, will not fail to produce the desired fruits.

"Opinion may differ regarding particular acts of your Honour's Government, but we unhesitatingly declare that your general administration has won the respect and lasting gratitude of the people of this country. Nor have your claims to the approbation and support of her Majesty's Government been the less fully recognised. More than once was that approbation expressed in the Imperial Parliament by her Majesty's Indian Minister, and just at the termination of your administration we have had a solid proof of the estimation in which your services are held by her gracious Majesty in the bestowal on you of the high honour of the Bath.

"We deeply regret, hon. sir, that ill health has compelled you to close prematurely your administration of Bengal. We hope and pray that under the blessings of the All-dispensing Providence you may soon recover your health in a more genial climate, and be in a position again to give to the people of this country the benefit of your tried ability, rare judgment, and accumulated experience. Our good wishes attend you.—Farewell!"

The resolution was seconded by Baboo Kissory Chund Mittra, and greeted with loud applause; at the conclusion of which an amendment on the address, the author of which we could not discover, made its appearance on the table, viz., that, for the words, "We the native inhabitants of Calcutta and its suburbs," be substituted, "We the native inhabitants of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa," and after some general conversation was agreed to.

Rajah Upurva Krishna, in Hindoostanee, then proposed the third resolution—

"That a portrait be taken of Sir John Peter Grant, as a memorial of his Honour's wise administration of Bengal, and that the portrait be hung at such public place as the committee be hereafter appointed may determine."

This was seconded by Moonshee Ameer Ali.

The Rev. Lall Behari De rose to propose as an amendment that "Sir J. P. Grant should be solicited to allow a marble statue of himself to be taken, for the purpose of being erected in Calcutta, in memorial of his successful administration of Bengal." This was followed by another amendment, moved, as nearly as we could discover, by Rajah Kalikrishna, which elicited a general discussion, during which two or three other amendments were put before the meeting, and such a hopeless state of confusion ensued that the Chairman was overwhelmed, and Baboo Ramanath Tagore had to take the duties temporarily upon himself. After considerable difficulty in deciding as to which amendment out of the batch should be first put to the meeting, The Rev. Lall Behari De withdrew his amendment, and, as nearly as we could understand, it was determined that if there were sufficient funds a statue should be given, if not, a portrait.

Mr. Manickjee Rustomjee then proposed the fourth resolution, "That the following gentlemen be requested to wait in deputation on his Honour to present the address."

Moulvie Abdool Luteeff proposed the fifth resolution.

"That a committee be appointed to receive subscriptions for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the portrait, and to carry out the object of the preceding resolutions."

This was seconded by Raja Prosunno Narain Deb and carried unanimously.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CANPORE MEMORIAL CHURCH.—Mr. Walter Granville has been requested to prepare the required working drawings for the Cawnpore Memorial Church. The competitors were Captain George Price, Mr. Granville, Mr. C. J. Wray, Lieut. col. J. Harley Maxwell, and Lieut. J. Watts, each of whom received 500 rupees for his trouble, while a further sum of 1,500 rupees is to be given to Mr. Granville for his successful design in the Lombardic style. The Church is to accommodate a congregation of 600 persons, and the expense of its erection is limited to £12,000, of which one-half has been contributed by the Government.

HILL TRACTS OF ORISSA.—The Khoonds here appear contented and happy, and seem particularly thankful that small-pox, which committed great ravages last season, has not again appeared. The only events which can give cause for mistrust are the intrigues of certain Dombos, some of whose relations fell in the disputes between the Khoonds of Huthoymoondda and Thumungiah, which were amicably adjusted in the year 1859 by Captain MacNicol. During the recent visit of the Agent to that division it was brought to his notice that certain Dombo chiefs had attempted to induce the Khoonds to renew the feud again. Captain MacNicol ordered these chiefs to accompany him, which they did for a few marches, till at length they were released at the request of the Shant Rajah, and on his becoming security for their future good behaviour. The Khoonds of Godary all remained true to their pledges, and no rumours of intended sacrifices were heard. These Khoonds were well acquainted with all the circumstances which took place at Purkrigoochundha some time ago, but yet they denied that any person of their district had visited the place. The Khoonds of Kassipore, however, and of Toomool, most positively asserted that numerous parties from these districts were present when the intended victim was rescued by the Sebundies; and they have accordingly been warned against any infringement of the bond entered into with the Government. At Bissen Cuttack some Meeriahs, hitherto concealed, have been surrendered, but as they were principally women with large families they were released on the security of the Shant Rajah. The Khoonds of the Bissen Cuttack district denied to the authorities all knowledge of the attempted sacrifice, and declared that a deficiency in their rice crops was owing to their abstinence from human sacrifice. The number of Khoond chiefs who had visited our agent at Kassipore this season has been less than usual, and this falling off has been, they say, caused by a fear of the Rajah of Toomool, who, with a view of making the Khoonds of Toomool obey his orders, lately plundered and burned their houses, killing several who attempted to escape to the Hills. On the appearance of the agent several of these Khoonds waited upon him and told him that they had left their villages, not only from fear of punishment from the Government, but because the Rajah, in the month of September, had surrounded their villages and carried off all their property. They also said that in the previous month the village of Dhomonogoodah had been plundered by the Pant Rajah, and several of its inhabitants killed and imprisoned, but afterwards released. The only reason they could give for his treatment was that they had always hitherto been in the habit of visiting the Pant Rajah of Kassipore and obeying his orders. The agent having duly recorded all this, proceeded to Sundapodro, where he found only a few charred posts marking the site of a once populous Khoond village. The inhabitants, who had secreted themselves in the neighbourhood, hearing that other Khoonds had been kindly treated, waited on the agent, and in a short time he was surrounded by men, women, and children from all the villages about, who evinced no fear, but pleaded for justice and reparation for the injuries inflicted upon them by the people of Karoondoe. The agent informed them that any statements they wished to make should be recorded and brought to the notice of Government. They then stated that their village had been suddenly surrounded by armed men early one morning in the month of September last, before any one was awake. As soon as the alarm was given the inhabitants tried to escape to the hills, and while doing so were fired upon. One man of the Dombo caste was seized by the hair of his head while inside his own house, dragged outside and decapitated, as were several others. Many also were wounded, shot, and cut down with swords. Among these was a woman, and a child seven months old. The whole of their property, consisting of buffaloes, bullocks, cows, sheep, goats, farming implements, &c., had been plundered, the village had been set on fire, and two men carried off to Joompagudda, where they were imprisoned in irons for two months and then released. The wounded men, and those that had been imprisoned, appeared before the agent and made the same statement, and the graves where the dead bodies had been buried were also pointed out to the agent. When the agent arrived at Rampore he questioned the Pant Rajah on the subject of these atrocities. That individual acknowledged having acted in the manner described, but stated that such harsh measures were necessary, as the Khoonds of Toomool would neither obey his orders nor visit him, but preferred going to Kassipore. He also stated that the inhabitants of these villages had been for the last twenty years in the habit of cattle-lifting and plundering villages in the lower country, and that the Rajah of Khoondoe had frequently requested him to put a stop to these depredations, and that on his pleading his inability the Rajah had sent a number of armed men who plundered and burned several villages. I hear that two Meeriahs, who had long been concealed, were taken away from Rampore, and ten persons, whom the Orissa Chief of Chinghoree had purchased or detained with a view of selling them to the Khoonds as Meeriahs, were also surrendered.—Englishman.

DARJEELING, April 14.—The Bishop of Calcutta came in here on Saturday. I believe he and his family are delighted with our lovely climate; it is certainly very warm in the day, up to 93 in the sun, but in the house 64 and 68. Still at night a fire and two blankets are very comfortable. Captain Trevor came here, and has played the devil with us; he foolishly raised the coolies wages to six rupees eight annas a-month; he will not get any more men but less, as half the men will now only work four days in the week instead of six. If he had kept to five rupees, and given to each sirdar one anna a man they had for every coolie, he would have got two thousand men; now he has ruined the cart-road by his folly, and will make this a most expensive job. The station is very full—no house to be got. I am told by a party that a planter here merely wanted Rs. 500 an acre for his land at Lebong the other day; this very piece cost but five rupees an acre some few years ago. Two girls' schools will be opened here next month, but still no school for boys. The committee appointed to choose a site for soldiers' barracks will commence their trip next week. I think the lower end of the station will be chosen.—Englishman.

LAHORE, April 11.—Yesterday was the opening day for public traffic of the line between Lahore and Umritsur, the rate of fare for the thirty-two miles being fixed, so the company's time-tables told us, at Rs. 3, Rs. 2, and third class, four annas, the latter low figure being fixed, I believe, with the hope of stopping the ekka traffic. Yesterday the company took nineteen carriages and trucks, all densely crowded, into Umritsur; and this morning two trains have started, "full to overflowing," and which are to be followed by two more this afternoon, the company, to meet the requirements of the present native feast and fair, running four trains daily. My bungalow lying on the Umritsur road, I stood watching the number of ekkas passing, and instead of something like the former number of ninety or one hundred in the two hours from six to eight, only counted three. I was convinced that ere long ekkas betwixt Lahore and Umritsur will be as scarce as coaches between London and Southampton. This morning was quite as bad, and it is plain to see ekkaism has got its death-blow. The weather is beginning to get "hot," and the birds of passage begin to talk of Murree. Sickness, too, prevails amongst the natives. Grain keeps up in price, and altogether it is "hard times" for the native population.—Englishman.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—Those medical officers who, not having previously resigned the service, got the Medical Retiring Fund Annuities assigned to them in November last, and who, under ordinary circumstances in past years, would have retired on the 31st March, are now holding on in expectation of the long-coming retiring scheme, and its supposed liberal pensions. These officers, according to the rules of the Medical Retiring Fund, pay Rs. 250 a month forfeit to the fund, as long after the 31st March as they continue to remain in the service.

PORT BLAIR.—A short time ago some aborigines came to Viper Island and begged hard for some plantains. These were given them, and we tried to make them understand that they could get more by bringing bamboos in exchange for them. After a few days another party came and were treated in the same manner, but to show that ingratitude is not, as the cynics would say, purely a civilised vice, they returned in the night and stole some more plantains. Soon after this some convicts were at work in the jungle, when the Andamanese came up and began to steal their tools. The convicts very naturally resisted, upon which the savages shot arrows at them, and wounded several. The convict guard, however, fired upon them, and they ran away. In the evening they landed on Viper Island after dusk, and began to steal plantains, but on a musket being fired they decamped. After some days another party of Andamanese carried off a wild pig which a Burmese was bringing to Atalanta Point, but some convicts who were near attacked them and recovered it. On this occasion the Andamanese did not shoot, but they made threatening gestures with their bows and arrows. On another occasion some men and women came to Viper Island, but as the men were armed they were ordered off. On this they threatened to shoot, but the women pushed the bows aside and began to beg. Some plantains were given to them and they went away. Another party landed at Viper Island on a subsequent occasion, bringing bamboos with them as presents, which shows that they partly understood our request. Since this they have several times landed on Viper Island in the night, and fights have taken place between them and our police guards, in which some of both sides have been killed and wounded. Those convicts who have run away and returned have lately represented the aborigines as treating them kindly after a preliminary plunder of all that was worth having, and this, perhaps, may lead to some further attempts at escape.—Englishman.

SPORT AT RUNGPORE.—The Berhampore Shikar party, consisting of Messrs. A. G. Macdonald, J. D. Gordon, H. Holm, and C. B. Stewart, have had very fair sport during the time they have been out on the churs. By last accounts twenty-one tigers, and seven rhinoceroses had bitten the dust; besides an immense quantity of miscellaneous game, such as buffaloes, large deer, hog deer, hares, peafowl, florican, partridges, wild ducks, &c., too numerous to be mentioned. And the pig-stickers, who went out every morning at daybreak, were rewarded with the heads of about thirty boars, which fell to their spears. On the whole the list is a truly noble one, and we suspect that three distinguished sportsmen who recently came out here from England on tiger shooting thoughts intent, would gladly give a small fortune to have made such a splendid "bag" in one short month.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—Six lakhs of the Delhi prize money has been disbursed to meet the claims of India, and it is calculated that four more lakhs will meet those of England. Ten lakhs are not a third of the whole booty captured, and at this rate the next and final share declared will be worth 200 rupees. This would give a captain 2,400 rupees.

DR J. FORSYTH, Principal Inspector General Army Medical Department, was to leave for England in the P. and O. Company's steamer Nubia, on the 23rd April, after a continuous service in India of forty-two years. The medical staff officers at the Presidency were desirous of expressing their esteem for Dr. Forsyth at a parting dinner, but it was declined for reasons alike creditable to both sides; and it is intended, as soon as Dr. Forsyth is out of power, to take measures for presenting him with a more lasting testimonial of good will.

MALABAR COAST, March 29.—Our weather is getting exceedingly oppressive, the thermometer ranging from 80 to 87 degs. Fahrenheit. The sky has been overcast for the last few days, indicating the approach of the mango showers, the precursor of the south-west monsoon. Most of our big wigs who can obtain what is called privilege leave are leaving the plains to enjoy the bracing mountain air of Wynaad. A club-house has been established there since last year, which has proved a great convenience to the European planters and other gentlemen coming up to these hilly regions. The planters have also succeeded in securing the services of a clergyman, to whom the Government have sanctioned an allowance of a hundred rupees per month. They have lately held a meeting to appeal to Government for assistance in building a rectory. The road to Wynaad is in a shocking state, particularly the narrow path up the Periah Ghaut. An unfortunate traveller taking this route, being the nearest from Cannanore, instead of going round to Calicut and up the Tamhercherry Pass, fell into an open cross drain, and was most seriously hurt. The district engineer has applied to Government for the services of two companies of sappers and miners now at Madras, who are skilled labourers, to assist the company at present in Wynaad in completing the Ghaut road up the Tamhercherry Pass, and it is expected that the application will be complied with, the disbanded men being re-enlisted into the Wynaad Coolie Corps, which is now being organised. The transfer of North Canara from the Madras to the Bombay Presidency is being carried out slowly but surely. The services of several Bombay civilians have been placed under the orders of the Madras Government for employment in that district, and the following are the appointments already made:—Mr. W. A. Goldfinch, of the Bombay Civil Service, to act as collector and magistrate of North Canara, vice W. Fisher, Esq., of the Madras Civil Service, appointed resident of Travancore and Cochin. Mr. K. White, of the Bombay Civil Service, to act as civil and sessions judge of Honore. Mr. Hearn, of the Collector's office at Dharwar, to be a deputy collector of the 4th class, and to have charge of the treasury in North Canara. The entire line of the Madras Railway from Royapuram, on the eastern coast, to Beypoor on this coast, is to be opened to the public in the beginning of May next. The following arrangements for the working of the trains from Salem (up to which station the line is now opened from Madras) to Beypoor have been sanctioned by Government. One mixed train with 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class passengers and goods to leave Salem at 6.15 A.M., and to arrive at Beypoor at 5.30 P.M., Ditto ditto to leave Beypoor at 6.30 A.M. and to arrive at Salem at 5.15 P.M. The table also provides for a train leaving Coimbatore with 1st, and 2nd class passengers and goods at 7 A.M. and arriving at Palghaut at 8.40 A.M. For leaving Palghaut at 3.15 P.M., and arriving at Coimbatore at 5 P.M. Pending the opening of the line through, from Salem to Beypoor, the company intend running trains from Coimbatore to Beypoor, and vice versa; the arrival and departure of these trains being regulated as follows. To leave Coimbatore at 11.45 A.M., and to arrive at Beypoor at 5.30 P.M. To leave Beypoor at 6.30 A.M., and to arrive at Coimbatore at 12.30 P.M. The intermediate train between Coimbatore and Palghaut to be worked during the hours notified in paragraph 2. A serious dispute has arisen between the present Mopla Queen of Cannanore and Sultan Ally Rajah, the son of the late Queen, who died in October last, relative to the possession of landed property in the town and military cantonment of Cannanore, and which is likely to result either in the dethronement of her present Highness, or the banishment of the young Rajah from the district.

TABLE-TALK AT MADRAS.—In Madras the ordinary dullness has been broken by one or two matters which call for a slight notice. A fortnight ago the Bishop consecrated a new church in Black Town, which has been built by subscription. We can now boast of seven churches in the town of Madras; none of them, however, can be said to possess much architectural beauty, but the new one, we think, carries off the palm on that point. The meeting of the Bank shareholders turned out to be a complete farce. From what had transpired before the meeting took place it was expected that the chairman would find some difficulty in explaining certain transactions respecting the purchase of the present premises; but no such thing happened. Those who had been foremost in getting up the meeting were only too eager to make matters as pleasant as possible, and the real point at issue was not touched upon. Rumour says that the apparent dissension among the proxy holders has arisen from jealousy, and that as soon as Mr. Campbell acknowledged that he should be beaten if he put his case to the vote, a compromise was at once effected.—Thursday, the 24th of April, a young lady took the black veil, and renounced this struggling, toiling world. The ceremony was performed in the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Black Town; Bishop Fenelly was the celebrant. For a full hour before the service commenced the church was well filled, and by the time the nuns entered it was crowded in several parts. The performance of the ceremony was most impressive, and made a deep impression upon the whole congregation. After the service a breakfast was provided in the convent, at which almost a hundred persons were present. There are now six nuns in the convent, who spend the greater portion of their time in the schools attached to their building.—The second criminal sessions of this year have just terminated. The calendar was rather a heavy one. In his address to the grand jury, the Chief Justice again called attention to the perjury of natives holding respectable positions in life. His remarks were almost as strong as those of Sir Mordaunt Wells. The most celebrated case which has been tried this session is that of the French Visconte. He was found guilty of forgery, and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment. He defended himself, and read a rather clever and sentimental defence to the judge and jury. This is the man who managed to get into good society in Madras, and who was about to propose to a General's daughter some three or four months ago, but who suddenly disappeared, and did not make his appearance again until brought forward by the police.—The new penal code is now in full operation. Some of its provisions are necessarily liberally construed by the judges, who, one and all, complain of certain parts of the code as being too severe. There is but little doubt that the clause relating to adultery will either have to be altered, or the judges must look upon it as a dead letter; for as it at present stands, a man is liable, if found guilty of the offence, to transportation. In a country like India, where mortality is confessedly much lower than in most European countries, it seems rather strange that such an offence should be treated criminally; for nothing is easier than to trump up a charge of this nature. The single case which has been tried at Calcutta resulted in the acquittal of the man charged with the crime.—Madras Athenæum.

BIDEN TESTIMONIAL FUND.—The committee of the Biden Testimonial Fund having brought their labours to a close, desire to make known to those who so liberally subscribed to it what has been done towards carrying out the object of the public meeting held on the island on the 29th March, 1858. This meeting was convened to enable the public to consider and discuss the question of how best to do honour to the late Captain Biden, then recently deceased, most deeply and deservedly regretted by all sections of the community. On the proposition of the Hon. Mr. Morehead it was then resolved that a testimonial fund should be raised, as a manifestation of the respect and esteem in which the late Captain Biden was held, and the Honourable Mr. Walter Elliot proposed that the sum to be raised should be appropriated to the construction of a building or the endowment of an institution, to be called "The Biden Home for Sailors," the erection of a monument over his grave, and of a tablet in the cathedral, and the payment of his funeral expenses. The whole amount of subscriptions realised was Rs. 9,686 6 1, portions of which were contributed by friends at Calcutta, Bombay, and in England. The committee likewise, on the motion of Mr., now the Honourable, Sydney Smyth, advocate-general, memorialised the Honourable Court of Directors, who then held office, for the grant of a pension to his widow and daughter, in consideration of his long, zealous, and loyal services, and it is understood that an annuity of £50 a year was bestowed on Mrs. Biden. After paying all expenses, a sum of Rs. 9,017-0-3 remained for disposal. This sum was manifestly too small for the erection of a suitable building to be called "The Biden Home for Sailors." The committee, therefore, determined to endow the present Sailors' Home with the same, provided the committee of that institution agreed to alter its designation to meet the requirement of Mr. Elliott's resolution. They at once undertook to do so, and the Government paper, amounting to Rs. 8,500, has been made over to four trustees of the Sailors' Home Committee, to be used in building or purchasing more suitable premises, when a sufficient addition may have been made to it to admit of the original intention being carried into effect. The balance, Rs. 517-0-3, with what further sum has accrued from interest since the accounts were audited, has been paid into the general funds of the Biden Home for Sailors.

PHYSIOLOGICAL COMPARISONS.—Dr. Shortt, surgeon of Chingleput, publishes in the Madras Medical Journal the result of observations on the physical differences between some of the Europeans and natives of the Caucasian and Mongolian subvarieties of the human species. An average of twenty-five cases of passengers and recruits on board the Clarence on a recent voyage to India, showed that passengers aged 21½ years were 66½ inches in height and weighed 135½ lbs.; The English recruit, 21½ years old, was 65½ inches high, and weighed 141½ lbs.; the Scotch recruit 22½ years old, was 66½ inches high, and weighed 148½ lbs.; and the Irish recruit, 20½ years old, was 65½ inches high, and weighed 140 lbs. On this, he remarks, "The Scotch are senior, and have the greatest weight and height, and the largest chests. The English passengers have the largest heads and necks. The Irish recruits have the largest arms, and the English recruits the largest thighs." A similar examination of natives showed that the Brahmans have the largest heads, thighs, and the greatest weight. The Hindoos have the largest chests, and are the tallest. The Pariahs have the largest arms and necks, and the Corovas or tank-diggers are wanting in every particular. The results of a comparison between 100 Europeans and natives was striking. The European aged 21½ was 66½ inches in height, and weighed 141½ lbs. The native of the same age was 64½ inches in height, and weighed 112½ lbs. The heads, necks, chests, and thighs of the Europeans measured some two inches more than those of the natives.

CAIRNS IN THE NEILGHERRIES.—The Church Missionary Intelligencer contains an extract from Colonel Ouchterlony's Geographical and Statistical Survey of the Neilgherries, which attempts to explain the origin of the cairns lately discovered near Coeniu. They are evidences of the existence of a race previous to the Todars, who are the most ancient inhabitants still lingering there. "It is a singular fact, that on breaking up the strong pavement of slabs of stone with which the cairns are covered in, and mining down until a second pavement is come upon, which, from its tightness and weight has, to all appearance, never been disturbed since it was first laid, we find, on removing it, that the contents of the vault below, instead of being laid in the order befitting the repose of consecrated ashes, are generally smashed and broken up, and mixed with the soil, leaving barely one or two pots of bones and ashes entire, just as though the pickaxe of the destroying explorer had been already there. All clue being lost, it would be idle to follow out further any speculation as to the history of the Neilgherries prior to the first coming to them of the Todars; for, as no coins or inscriptions, or even hieroglyphics, have been found in any of the cairns, or on their contents, there exists no evidence whatever by which inquiry could be guided into the right course."

MISCELLANEOUS.

MUSCAT.—The Sindian gives an account of the recent cruise of the Hugh Lindsay, which conveyed to Muscat the new agent, Major Malcolm Green, who has succeeded Lieutenant Pengelly. The Imam's brother, who was imprisoned through the thoughtlessness of the latter, was released. On his way Major Green inspected the coasts of the Persian Gulf as far up as Bushire. His object was to ascertain the comparative merits of two distinct routes, by one or other of which it is proposed to carry the telegraphic wire, for the purpose of avoiding the territories of the Shah of Persia, who has demanded the most exorbitant terms for allowing the line to pass through his dominions. The first of these is by means of a sub-marine cable across the mouth of the Persian Gulf from the town of Chaubar direct to Muscat. This would require a cable of about 200 miles in length, the actual distance between the two points being about 170 miles, and the remaining thirty not being considered too much to allow over. Should this plan be not considered feasible, it is proposed to carry the wire a little further up the Gulf to Kishin Island, on which stands the town of Bassadore, and then to cross over to the Arabian Coast by means of several short-lengths of cable, connecting the three small islands before mentioned, viz., Surdey, Bomosah, and Sharjah. The line would then proceed down the Arabian Coast, from Ras-el Khy-mah, past the towns or villages of Dibbeh, Sohar, and Burkha to Muscat. From the latter point the line will proceed direct to Bagdad, so that the expensive and uncertain route through Persia will be entirely avoided.

REFORMATION v. SUPERSTITION.—The late conspiracy case against the nine leading members of the Bhattia community, and the Maharaj libel case, have given rise to a caste dispute among the Bhattias, the caste itself being now divided into "reforming party" and the "Maharaj party." One of the reformers is about to prosecute some of his adversaries for defamation, in consequence of his having been subjected to humiliating treatment at one of the caste dinners given a few days ago by the Mahajans.

BOMBAY VOLUNTEER CORPS.—A meeting of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps took place at the Exchange-rooms on Monday, April 7th, at half-past four; Captain Sillar in the chair. The Chairman gave to the gentlemen present a short history of the corps from its commencement, pointed out where mistakes had been committed in the management of it, and spoke with regret of the apathy that had exhibited itself amongst the members; the last general parade for the inspection of arms only numbering ten men, of whom seven were Europeans and three Parsees. The only course which appeared to be open for the purpose of placing the corps on a more efficient footing was either to exact the fines for non attendance, or to dissolve the corps. The former was at all times an unpopular act, and he did not think it would have the desired effect; he, therefore, most reluctantly came to the conclusion that the latter was the only course left. After some discussion it was decided by a majority of the members present that the corps should be dissolved, and one or two gentlemen were selected to assist the commanding officer and the existing committee in winding up its affairs.

PARSEE LAW COMMISSION.—At the last meeting of the Parsee Law Commission, the President, Sir Joseph Arnould, after the examination of witnesses, intimated that there would be no more public sittings of the commission for recording any further evidence, every Parsee having had sufficient opportunity for expressing his views on the subject of the proposed code of law for that community. The number of Parsees who had come forward to assist the commission in its work was very small, and the honourable president said that there was no further occasion to keep the meetings of the commission open to the public. The gentlemen of the commission would in future hold private meetings to discuss the question whether there exists any necessity for special legislation for the Parsees, and if so, to frame a code suited to the peculiar circumstances of that nation. A report embodying the views of the commission will then be submitted to the supreme Government, through the local authorities.

CHINA

HONG KONG, April 15.—The rebels show no signs of evacuating the province in which Shanghai is situated, or even of keeping at a proper distance from the city itself. The following have been the movements made against them since we last wrote:—On the 22nd March 300 marines and small arms men from her Majesty's ship Imperieuse went out and drove off a large body of rebels. On the 24th March they made a similar excursion, with even greater success; for a plundering party fell in their way, laden with spoil. They dispersed the party and destroyed the loot; on this occasion one marine and one seaman were wounded. On the 25th March the same force from the Imperieuse revisited the town they had captured on the 21st February; the rebels had returned to it thirteen days after they were driven out. On the 27th March a reconnoitring party proceeded towards Wong-ka-dza, about twelve miles west from Shanghai; they found here that the rebels were in force and strongly entrenched. On the 3rd April a force left Shanghai and proceeded to Woa-ka-dza; they slept under arms during the night of the 3rd, and on the morning of the 4th advanced and took the place. The North China Herald gives the following account of the affair:—

"On the morning of the 3rd inst. a combined expedition of English and French naval and military forces started from the Settlement to attack the rebel camp at Wong-ka-dza, which has been the head quarters of the marauding parties devastating the western environs of Shanghai. The expedition had been in contemplation for some time past, and only awaited further reinforcements, which were obtained on the arrival of the 5th Bombay N.L.I. from Hong Kong. All the available troops and blue-jackets from the ships of war in harbour were mustered, and marched out on the day mentioned, equipped for active service, and the prospect of a warm engagement. That night the whole force bivouacked at a rendezvous a few miles from the camp, which was twelve miles west of the settlement.

"On the morning of the 4th they marched on the camp, driving in the outposts of the enemy, and about ten A.M. stormed the intrenchments, which were of a very formidable character. The rebels showed fight, but evidently the great body of them had escaped by the rear. There was a sufficient number, however, to do some damage to the attacking force, for we learn that two or three men on our side have been killed and several wounded. Among the latter is Dr. Escoff, of the Snake. The camp was soon taken by storm, and the rebels who fled beyond the entrenchments were attacked in the rear by some Imperial troops, with considerable loss. The fortifications were, as far as practicable, destroyed, and the entrenchments rendered untenable. It was conjectured that the retreating rebels would retire upon Tsing-poo, where, in all probability, their progress would be intercepted by Colonel Ward's troops, who were to have attacked the camp in the rear. That further fighting had taken place was supposed by our informant, who heard heavy firing in the afternoon as he started to return to the settlement. On his way he met some Imperialists carrying heads of Chang Maos to their camp, one man having fifteen strung up by the hair.

"In addition to the foregoing, we learn that Admiral Sir James Hope, seeing so little accomplished in consequence of the main body of rebels having fled, accompanied Colonel Ward with a party of his men, told off to attack a second position of the enemy. They had scarcely come within gun-shot of this post, when the insurgents, seeing only Chinese troops advancing, made a rush at them, and the Imperialists retreated with out effecting their object. In the skirmish a stray bullet wounded the British admiral in the leg, which necessitated his returning to Sik-ai-way for medical assistance. The whole party is expected to return to the settlement to-morrow."

We have since learned that the admiral's wound will confine him on board for six weeks or more. His conduct in exposing himself so much is not according to military rule. Troops having been ordered from Tien-tsin to Shanghai, it seems as if more fighting were in contemplation. As mentioned in our last paper, French troops are also being concentrated upon some part of the coast, eight hundred having left this place in the Rhone under sealed orders.

From Pekin we have news stating that the Imperial energies are being awakened, and that the foreign alliance is growing in approval day by day. The young Emperor's education has been commenced. Hereafter, foreigners will be allowed to visit the capital, under the passport system, instead of, as heretofore, in the capacity of guests of the legation. Access to Pekin is open for the season, the ice having broken up in the latter part of February. Mr. John Gibson has been appointed British vice-consul at Taku.

From the three northern ports we have no particular news; but now that a communication is re-opened we may expect intelligence in due course.

At Hankow and Kiu-kiang, ports on the Yangtze River, the disaffection of the Imperial troops towards foreigners still continues. Hitherto the residents have not actively resented any of the insults offered to them, and in this respect their conduct is entitled to admiration. By all accounts, Hankow promises to become a very useful and thriving port for trade.

At Nankin the Emperor's forces have been making their appearance on the bank of the river opposite to the city; they still continue to increase in numbers, and the insurgents are strengthening their forces in the city in a corresponding degree. A concentration of the rebel forces at Nankin may relieve Shanghai of their presence and prepare the way for a decisive blow being struck if circumstances demand it.

From Shanghai we learn that the crowded state of the city and settlement still continues.

At Ningpo matters remain quiet. There is still some considerable traffic between this port and Shanghai; it has been affirmed that the steamer Fei-ma, which has changed owners, is to be used for goods and passenger traffic between the two ports.

From the other ports on the coast we have no news.

At Canton everything is quiet. An army of Imperialist troops is getting ready for the protection of the Fuhkien province. This is equivalent to the protection of Kwangtung, as the enemy will not invade it if successfully met in Fuhkien; in other circumstances, the rebels will continue to subsist, as they have done, by the devastation and plunder of successive provinces.

From Macao there is not often any news of interest. The place is very much in favour here, as affording change of air and scenery.

In Hong Kong the volunteer movement continues to maintain itself in favour. Lady Franklin is here just now, en route for Europe; she has visited the Sandwich Islands, California, and Shanghai.

From Japan the only news of much importance is the retirement of Mr. Alcock, who leaves Dr. Winchester as his provisional successor, Mr. Alcock returns to England by the present mail; he has worked hard for his country in China and Japan, and deserves both honour and reward.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, April 30.—We are now in the midst of the true South-West monsoon weather—hot as yet, but cloudy, with thunder, lightning, and rain. The change is most welcome so far as reviving vegetation and allaying dust go; but, of course, those who have still coffee to prepare and ship are placed at a disadvantage. The bulk of the crop was off, however, before the rains began—a very different result to that which was obtained some eight or ten years ago, when a very large proportion of the coffee crop was shipped after the South-West monsoon rains had regularly set in. The earlier shipment is attended with many advantages. The coffee not only gets earlier to market but arrives in a far superior condition. Indeed, the prices now ruling show how much has been done for Ceylon coffee by care in preparing and despatching it.

In the past fortnight the addition to our exports has been considerable. Six ships have sailed for London with

The increase in native over last season will take most people by surprise, for in that particular kind, more even than in plantation, was a great deficiency anticipated. We have still five months of the season to run, and no one can now doubt that in that period we shall export at least the 60,000 cwts of both kinds wanted to make up the half million.

The exports of cinnamon are somewhat above the average, while cocoa-nut oil is making up leeway. In round numbers the exports are now 60,000 cwts., against 100,000 cwts. to the same period of last season; but this year's figure is equal to that of 1859-60, and above 1860-61 at the corresponding period. We trust "there is a good time coming" for cocoa-nut oil as well as for coffee. A cocoanut plantation in full bearing, on fair soil, will by and-by be no undesirable inheritance. The returns are slow when compared with coffee; but under anything like favourable circumstances they will be sure and long continued. Arreca nuts formed no inconsiderable item in the exports of Ceylon for 1861. The quantity was nearly 70,000 cwts., valued at £52,158, and yielding, at two and a half per cent. £1,159 in duty. We exported also 22,000 cwts. of tobacco, 31,632 cwts. of salt, 35,000 oz. of lemon grass oil, 219,000 oz. of Citronella oil, and 40,000 oz. of cinnamon oil, all articles of which the Chamber of Commerce statement takes no account. Copperah ought certainly to be included if it goes on increasing as at present. It is the raw material from which cocoanut oil is manufactured, and our exports in 1861 reached 27,270 cwts., valued at £16,367. The equivalent of the exported copperah in cocoanut oil would be about 17,000 cwts., or more than 200,000 gallons; sufficient to provide part cargoes for at least a dozen of our ordinary sized coffee ships. We also exported 2,709,000 cocoanuts, valued at nearly £8,000, or half as much as the value of the copperah. From Cochin the exports of copperah and cocoanuts are on a scale far more extensive,—exceeding, indeed, the export of oil. Until the prices went up so considerably, India consumed the larger portion of its own cotton. With the advance of wealth in the native community it now really seems likely that, ere long, India will consume most of the products of its own cocoanut palms.

The Governor and Lady MacCarthy are still in the Mountain capital, where they have been gracefully dispensing their hospitalities to all classes of the population. The steamer which carries this mail to England takes away the Deputy Queen's Advocate, Mr. Charles Stewart, who goes to England on leave. Consequent on his departure, and in view of exigencies of a public nature, Mr. R. F. Morgan has consented to act as Deputy Queen's Advocate; the Governor, it is understood, wishing specially to avail himself of his services in that capacity. His claims to promotion are, we believe, reserved; and, looking at the precarious state of Mr. Byerly Thomson's health, we shall not be at all surprised to see Mr. Morgan sit as acting Queen's Advocate during the approaching session of the Legislative Council. It is, at any rate, pretty certain that within six months he will be either Queen's Advocate or one of the puisne judges of the colony.

New and very liberal minutes, calculated to encourage the members of the Civil Service to resort to Europe periodically, have been published. A civil servant can get twelve months' leave on half-pay after six years' continuous service, or soon after, if illness or "urgent private affairs" call him away. The leave can be extended by the Secretary of State. The contract passages by the P. & O. Company's steamers are superseded by a much more satisfactory arrangement. A civil servant and his family, to the number of five, can take a passage in any vessel that suits them, and Government will bear one-third of the cost of such passage.—Coleombo Overland Observer.

MR. J. D. WALKER, who has been many years in the service of the Oriental Bank Corporation, has been appointed Manager of the Chartered Bank of British Columbia and Vancouver's Island at Victoria.

Court Martial.

ENSIGN G. HILL, 88TH FOOT.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, H.M.'s British Forces, Calcutta, March 28.—Head Qrs., Camp Umballah, March 18.—No. 43.—At a general court martial assembled at Moradabad, on Feb. 10, Ens. G. Hill, of the 88th regt. of foot, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Moradabad, on the 6th of August, 1861, been shamefully drunk at the mess of the 30th (now the 26th) Bengal N.I., and behaved in a violent manner to the native guard at the mess house.

Additional Charges.—1st. For having, at Moradabad, on the 9th January, 1862, before being set at liberty by proper authority, broken his arrest, in which he had been placed by his commanding officer, by going to the sergeant's mess of the left wing 88th regiment.

2nd. With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at the same time and place, been drunk in the sergeant's mess of the left wing 88th regt., where he had ridden on the same horse with Sergt. J. Goode, 88th regt., who was also drunk at the time, and whence he was removed by the non-commissioned officers of his own regiment.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, Ens. George Hill, 88th regt. of foot, to be cashiered.

(Signed) J. Glyn,

Lieut. col., rifle brig., President.

Moradabad, Feb. 13.

Remarks by the Court.—The Court desires to record its opinion that the course adopted in removing the prisoner from the mess by the means of sepoys of a native guard, though doubtless done from motives of kindness, is prejudicial to the interests of the service.

The Court wishes further to animadvert upon the evidence given by Lieut. Macdonald, late 19th regt. N.I., for the defence, which appears to be wanting in straightforwardness.

Approved and Confirmed.

(Signed) HUGH ROSE, Gen., C. in C. in India.

Remarks by H.E. the C. in C. in India.

The Court have very properly brought to notice the extremely injudicious proceeding of Captain Williamson, for which he will be severely reprimanded by the general officer commanding the division, who has been further directed to assemble a Court of Inquiry to investigate and report upon the conduct of Lieut. Macdonald, when under examination as a witness before the court martial.

Retirement of Dr. Forsyth.

Fort William, April 21.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council desires, upon the retirement of Dr. J. Forsyth, principal insp. gen. of the medical dept., to record the approbation with which the Govt. of India regard his long and valuable services, extending over a period of upwards of forty-one years, as well as to express the regret of the Govt. at losing the advantage of his presence at the head of the medical dept. in Bengal.

Dr. Forsyth's career has been one of continued usefulness and honour, but the Gov. gen. desires particularly to advert to his services as superintending surgeon of the Shah's force in Afghanistan, and especially as principal medical officer during the memorable siege of Jellalabad; as well as to his unwearied exertions in a period of unusual pressure, during the four years he has been at the head of the medical dept., and for which he received the thanks of Lord Clyde and the Govt. of India, as announced in G.O. No. 423, of March 29, 1859.

The Gov. gen. in Council trusts that Dr. Forsyth will enjoy many years of honourable retirement in his native land.

(Signed) H. W. NORMAN, Lieut. col.,
Sec. to Govt. of India.

Precautions against Cholera.

Head Quarters, Simla, 7th April.—1. Officers commanding divisions, stations, &c., will make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the ground in the neighbourhood of their stations to the extent of twenty miles, with a view to at once selecting sites for encampment in the event of cholera appearing, and care will be taken to ensure these places being always kept in a fit state for occupation by troops, and with a sufficient supply of wholesome water available on each.

2. The officers of the Quartermaster-general's department of each division will prepare a plan of the required extent of country, with the different encamping grounds marked on it, so that when the disease approaches, measures may be at once taken to place the troops under canvass without delay.

3. On the outbreak of cholera in an epidemic form, either in neighbouring villages or cantonments, officers commanding stations will be prepared to move the troops into the selected camp on the shortest notice.

4. As soon as any case of cholera is reported in the station, the troops will be moved into camp, and no unfavourable condition of the weather is to prevent this movement being carried out.

5. The force will be broken up into as many detachments as the number of the medical officers will admit, allowing one to each party. Should the medical staff be insufficient to afford such medical aid to the several detachments, experienced medical subordinates will be placed in charge of the smaller, or less distant parties.

6. Officers commanding stations are authorized to call directly for aid from other stations, divisions, or districts free from cholera.

7. The sick labouring under other diseases than cholera, will move with the force, and share the benefit of removal from the choleraic atmosphere.

8. It must be insisted on, that all discharges from stomach and bowels of cholera patients be instantly removed and buried in pits.

9. Strong deoderants are to be thrown into the receiving vessels, as well as into the pits, latrines, and privies.

10. Should cholera follow the troops, they will be moved short distances at right angles if possible, to the prevalent wind and track of the disease, every second or third day, care being taken that the marches in no way fatigue the men.

11. The breaking out of cholera in a regiment or at a station is, on no account, to cause the suspension of the soldier's daily amusements and occupations, care being taken that the latter in no way fatigue them; and commanding officers will use their utmost exertions to develop any recreation or employment of which the effect is to keep the men's minds in their normal state.

12. It often occurs that soldiers on a visitation of cholera indulge in the use of spirituous liquors, in the belief that they are a preventive against the disease. The medical authorities unanimously condemn this supposed remedy as a certain promoter of the disease: commanding officers are therefore enjoined to use their utmost endeavours to prevent so baneful a practice.

13. One of the several cholera antidotes is the early treatment of premonitory symptoms, of which looseness of the bowels is a principal one; commanding officers are therefore requested to give the most precise orders on the subject, and to cause all men affected by premonitory symptoms to be placed at once in a premonitory ward.

14. The troops are not to return to cantonments until all traces of the cholera shall have disappeared from the neighbourhood, either amongst the European or native population. The barracks and hospitals will be thoroughly fumigated, the walls whitewashed, and the doors and window frames painted before they are re-occupied.

15. The men will be supplied with hot tea and coffee before going out in the morning; they will invariably wear flannel belts, and all precautions must be taken to prevent their remaining in wet or damp clothes.

16. The Commander-in-Chief feels persuaded that all officers share his feeling, that when cholera breaks out in a station, they should be with their regiments, and at their posts.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.,
E. B. JOHNSON, Lieut. col.,
Offg. Adj. gen. of the Army.

Official Papers.

LORD CANNING'S REJOINDER TO SIR J. P. GRANT.

HOME DEPARTMENT, JUDICIAL.

From W. GREY, Esq., Sec. to the Government of India, to E. H. LUSHINGTON, Esq., Sec. to the Government of Bengal, dated Fort William, March 8, 1862.

Sir,—I am directed by the Governor-general in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 253A, dated the 4th ult., and its enclosures, expressing the doubts of the Hon. the Lieut.-governor as to the expediency of appointing special commissioners for the purpose of effecting an adjustment of rent disputes between the zemindars and ryots in the districts of Jessore and Nuddea, advocating, in lieu of that measure, a plan recommended by Mr. Schalch, the Commissioner of the Nuddea Division, and by Mr. Herschell, the Collector of Nuddea—namely, the appointment of an officer in each of those districts to exercise the powers of collector, judge, and commissioner, under Act X. of 1859, and vested, in these united capacities, with appellate jurisdiction in all cases of rent, and with the general superintendence of all the courts of original jurisdiction under that Act.

2. My letter, No. 137, dated the 8th January last, conveyed an expression of the opinion of the Governor-general in Council that the Landholders' Association were justified in again asking, as they did, that a Special Commissioner, or as many Special Commissioners as might be required, should be sent into the districts of Nuddea and Jessore for the purpose of restoring mutual confidence and good feeling between landlord and ryot, for effecting a peaceable adjustment of differences wherever that might be possible, and for supporting by their counsel and influence the action of the law. It appeared to the Governor-general in Council that if an officer representing the Government were to bring the Zemindar and ryots of any village together they would probably come to terms, and the Lieut.-governor was requested to give the subject of deputing Special Commissioners to Nuddea and Jessore, with a view to promote reconciliation, his earliest and best attention.

3. Before this suggestion reached the Lieut.-Governor his Honour had himself received a letter from the association, in which a request was made for the appointment of Special Commissioners for the above-mentioned purpose, and this letter his Honour had sent to the Local Commissioners with an expression of his own opinion "that more immediate good would result from energetic action in the way of exhortation and explanation, and personal influence, on the part of the several sub divisional officers on the spot, by reason of their neighbourhood and local knowledge, than from the exertions of a single Special Commissioner in a district," and with orders that strong injunctions in the above sense should be issued to the collectors and sub-divisional officers within whose jurisdiction the several factories complaining of arrears of rent are situated. And in the final paragraph of your letter of acknowledgment, the Lieut.-Governor, while advocating the plan proposed by Messrs. Herschell and Schalh, expresses his entire agreement "in the opinion that whatever can be usefully and unobjectionably done to encourage moderate and reasonable conduct in all parties, and to promote an amicable spirit between them, should be done." "What he doubts"—it is added—"is the policy of appointing a Special Commissioner for reconciliation as a means of advancing the object."

4. From these two passages it is evident that the Lieut.-governor agrees in opinion with the Governor-general in Council, that much may be done by Government officers, in the way of explanation, exhortation, and the use of personal influence, to promote reconciliation between the zemindars and their ryots; and that his Honour differs with the Government of India only as to the machinery by which this process of reconciliation may best be effected. This being so, it seems to the Governor-general in Council hardly consistent to argue, as his Honour does throughout the letter under acknowledgment, that attempts at reconciliation are objectionable, and that the nature of the difference between the opposing parties is such as not to admit of amicable adjustment.

5. The wishes of the Government of India are correctly stated in paragraph 5 of your letter, except that the "differences" referred to are not "all differences between planter and ryot," but all difference between them relating to rent. The Lieut.-governor observes that the "matter of differences is too substantial and of too vital an importance to the permanent interests of the parties to be blown away by the common-places of reconciliation;" but it must not be overlooked that those who represent one of the parties have been pressing upon the Government a policy of reconciliation and adjustment, and that the ryots also, according to Mr. Herschell (as stated in the papers now submitted by the Lieut.-governor), are "weary of the contest, and would be glad of any means of arriving at a settlement." The Governor-general in Council is, therefore, unable to understand the difficulties, which though all parties are desirous to come to terms, render it impossible, according to the argument of the Lieut.-governor, to adjust their differences except by the tedious process of a civil action in every case.

6. In the first place it is stated as a difficulty that the Indigo question is at the root of the differences which have arisen in regard to rent; that the Government of India has rightly decided against interference in questions relating to indigo; that the late Special Commissioners were specially enjoined to make it clear to the ryots that their mission had no connection with indigo; that for the most part a Special Commissioner cannot adjust questions of rent without deciding questions of indigo (the latter being the root of the former); and that the obstacles in the way of adjusting such disputes are insuperable. It is perfectly true, I am to remark, that the differences which have arisen in regard to rent have their origin in the late indigo disputes. It is in consequence of being unable to bring about the cultivation of indigo to the same extent as formerly that the planters have been compelled to pay more attention to their Zemindars rights, which have heretofore been allowed to remain to a great extent in abeyance. They have been obliged to insist on the payment of arrears of rent which were formerly allowed to lie over; to press for the punctual discharge of current rents, to demand enhanced rates of rent, and by measuring their lands, to take care that none escaped rent-free. The ryots naturally regard these proceedings as taken for the purpose of forcing them to cultivate indigo, and it appears that in some instances they have agreed to take indigo advances rather than submit to the more urgent demands of their landlords in the matter of rent. But in the great majority of cases the ryots refuse to cultivate indigo, and are at issue with the planter simply as to the amount of rent they are to pay for their lands. That is a question which the Gov.-gen. in Council thinks, if submitted to the arbitration of a Government officer, can be adjusted entirely irrespective of indigo. The question is simply this—how much rent will the landlord agree to take, and how much will the ryot agree to give, and the adjustment of these two terms constitutes the solution.

7. But, doubtless, there are many cases in which collateral conditions may be urged on either side. The planter may say, "I will agree to a lower rate of rent, provided the ryot will agree to sow indigo for me." And the ryot may say, "I will agree to pay a higher rent, provided I am not asked to take indigo advances." These, merely as collateral conditions to a pacific solution of the main question of rent, the Gov.-gen. in Council would not think of placing beyond the cognisance of a Government officer, though his Excellency in Council would strictly prohibit him from entering into or listening to any discussion as to the terms on which indigo cultivation is to be carried on. His course in every such case would be to explain to the parties:—"I have come here to endeavour to bring your differences respecting rent to an amicable adjustment irrespective altogether of indigo, and to put an end to law suits on the subject. The only question I can decide is the question which the law courts would decide, namely, the fair rate of rent to be demanded, or the fair amount of rent due, in each case, irrespective of other considerations. But if you choose to agree between yourselves to any other conditions whereby the question of rent may be affected, I am ready to sanction by my award a different rate of rent to be demanded, or a different amount of rent to be paid, from that which I consider by itself to be fair, provided my award is accepted by both parties as a final adjustment of the dispute as far as rent is concerned, and that during any term to which the award may extend, it shall not be affected by any extraneous circumstances whatever." This course is something very different from interference in indigo disputes; while, as the Governor-general in Council thinks unobjectionable, would practically, in most cases of that kind, be successful. The Lieutenant-governor supposes that it would be necessary for the Government to tell the officer "explicitly what he should endeavour to induce the planter to do, and what he should endeavour to induce the ryot to do in this matter of indigo." But the Governor-general in Council can see no reason why, for the adjustment of a dispute regarding rent, the officer should endeavour to induce either the planter or the ryot to do anything in the matter of indigo.

8. It is shown in your letter how large a proportion of the suits recently brought by planters against ryots are for enhancement of rent. This the Lieut.-Governor, in your separate letter No. 252A of the 4th ultimo, calls a form of difference which is susceptible of adjustment only by an action at law in each case. Mr. Herschell anticipates no success from any endeavours to conciliate differences of this kind except in the regular course of law. If exhortation only is to be used to settle them, the Lieut.-Governor thinks the local officers can exhort more effectually than a special officer. And his Honour thinks it impossible that any single officer in a district can deal with such a mass of cases, because he must make himself acquainted with the rights of every ryot before he can propose to him to abandon those rights, a process which, his Honour observes, would be equivalent to making a settlement of the district.

9. It appears, however, to the Gov.-gen. in Council that claims for the enhancement of rent within reasonable limits are just those to which a rough process of arbitration is particularly applicable. These claims are almost all, after a first decision, decreed by the courts as a matter of course, and they are generally for an uniform rate of rent over large areas of country. It requires no minute inquiry into the rights of each ryot to enable an intelligent officer to come to a general conclusion as to the rates of rent which are fairly demandable. Disputes of this kind, though they look formidable in number when each is made the subject of a separate suit, may often be easily settled in the mass by such an officer, especially by one whose sole business it is to settle them. And though the Gov.-gen. in Council admits that the local officers may be able beneficially to exert their influence so as to bring about a general settlement of these disputes, the fact is that they have not yet done so, and this is the main reason why the employment of a special officer seemed to be so much required. It may ultimately be found desirable to have a detailed field survey and settlement of these districts, or of portions of them, such as has been completed in the permanently settled districts of the North-Western Provinces, but this, if it be undertaken, must be a work of time, and meanwhile the adjustment of these disputes, even if it be only for a few years, is a matter of pressing urgency.

10. The plan recommended by Messrs. Herschell and Schalh, and supported by the Lieut.-governor, has no doubt great advantages. It is certainly most important that some step should be taken to give uniformity and weight to the decisions passed by a number of inferior Courts of concurrent jurisdiction in the same district, and the Governor-general in Council accordingly authorises the Lieutenant-governor to appoint, in Nuddea, and in Jessore also, if it should appear to be necessary, an additional officer, to exercise in respect of all suits under Act X. of 1859 the united powers of a collector, of a judge, and of a commissioner.

11. But this cannot be received as a complete substitute for all attempts at general adjustment and compromise. The Governor-gen. in Council would have these officers appointed without in the least degree giving up the endeavour to reconcile conflicting interests in the matter of rent. A hope is expressed by the Landholders' Association, in their letter dated the 14th ult., that the officers to be appointed under Mr. Schalh's and Mr. Herschell's plan will not omit to do anything that may be fairly and reasonably within their power in the way of endeavouring to adjust the differences between landlord and tenant, and this appears to the Governor-general in Council to be a just and reasonable expectation, although, therefore, his Excellency in Council will not, in the face of the Lieutenant-governor's strongly expressed objections, and of the acquiescence of the Landholders' Association in the plan proposed by his Honour as a substitute, insist upon the appointment of special commissioners for the express and distinct purpose of promoting reconciliation between the contending parties, it is expected that the local judicial and revenue officers, including those to be appointed on the plan now authorised, will be steadily impressed by his Honour with a sense of their duty in this respect, and that his Honour will still consider it incumbent upon him to employ a special agency for the purpose wherever the exhortations of the local officers fail to produce a satisfactory result.

12. I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your subsequent communications of the Nos. and dates noted in the margin,* which do not call for any separate remarks.—I have the honour to be, your most obedient servant,

Sec. to Govt. of India.

JUDICIAL No. 696A.

From E. H. LUSHINGTON, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to C. H. CAMPBELL, Esq., and E. JACKSON, Esq., Fort William, March 18, 1862.

SIR,—I am directed to inform you that the Lieut.-governor has been pleased to appoint you to be an additional officer in Nuddea, with the powers of commissioner of revenue, under Regulation I. of 1829, of civil judge, and of collector of land revenue in the abovementioned district, for the purpose of the trial of all suits, and the conduct of all proceedings, under Act X. of 1859. You will exercise the above powers, exclusively, in cases under that law, and in proceedings connected with such cases.

2. A copy of the accompanying correspondence will explain to you the circumstances under which your appointment has been made.† It is expected that by placing in your hands the entire management and control of all suits connected with Act X. in the Jessore District, and the exclusive superintendence of all the courts and officers in that district employed in the disposal of such suits, uniformity of practice and despatch in the disposal of these suits will be ensured; whilst unity of purpose in the settlement of opposing claims, and the determination of existing disputes regarding rent, will be secured.

* No. 547a, dated Feb. 13; No. 379a, dated Feb. 14; No. 400a, dated Feb. 15; No. 402a, dated Feb. 15; No. 406a, dated Feb. 17.

† Letter No. 253A, dated 4th February, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, with enclosures.

Letter No. 1,276, dated 8th March, from the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, with enclosures.

3. The Sudder Court, the Board of Revenue, and the Commissioner of the Nuddea division have been requested to arrange for all appeals under Act X. now pending before any of the authorities in the Nuddea district being at once transferred for disposal to you. The whole staff of deputy collectors which is now employed in Act X., cases in that district will be placed under your orders. Mr. Gray with the powers of a district collector, and Mr. Maclean, deputy collector, will be subordinate to you.

4. It will rest with you to employ these officers at whatever places, and in whatever manner connected with Act X., you may think fit. You will also make such use as you may think proper in this department of business, at their respective subdivisions of the spare time of the several Small Cause Court judges, all of whom have powers of a collector under Act X.

5. It seems hardly necessary to explain to you that, while you have been thus vested with the powers of the three distinct officers, it is not intended that you should ever receive in appeal, in one capacity, any suit which you have yourself tried in another capacity. As it is only in cases tried by you as collector that such a result requires to be provided against, it will only be necessary for you to abstain from trying, as collector, cases in which an appeal lies to the judge, and from passing orders as collector in proceedings appealable to the commissioner. Such cases and proceedings can always be left to your subordinates.

6. There are two great objects which the Lieutenant-governor has in view by your appointment—first, to enable persons to whom rents are payable, whether as zemindars or talookdars, to realise their rents with regularity and promptitude; and, secondly, to dispose, with no delay that can be avoided, of a vast mass of claims for enhancement of rent, and of a considerable though smaller number of suits for ejectment which have been already instituted, and of which a still larger number are expected to be instituted in your district. It is of infinite importance to all parties concerned that all these cases should be justly disposed of as soon as possible; whilst it is of great importance to persons in receipt of rent that their dues, according to old and admitted rates, should not fall into arrear, pending the settlement of disputed claims to rents at enhanced rates.

7. Apart from your duties as a judicial and executive officer under Act X., I am desired to point out to you the great importance attached by the Government of India in the concluding paragraph of Mr. Grey's letter, No. 1275, dated the 8th inst., to your promoting reconciliation between the contending parties, and to your exerting your influence so as to bring about an amicable settlement of the disputes between zemindars and ryots on the subject of rents. The Lieutenant-governor hopes that you will lose no legitimate opportunity of promoting so desirable a result, and that you will also impress this point upon all the officers who may be employed under you, as it is one upon which the Government of India lay great stress.

8. You will be so good as to submit fortnightly returns of the number of cases disposed of under Act X. by yourself and by all your subordinates, in the same form as those now furnished by the Commissioner of Nuddea.

9. You will be so good as to furnish, at an early date, a statement of such establishments as you may consider will be required, appointing the whole or such a portion of them in the meanwhile as may be sufficient for the conduct of your own business and that of any of your subordinates.

10. The judge will be directed to place a part of his court-house at your disposal.—I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) E. H. LUSHINGTON,
Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

INDIA AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

It is to be regretted, perhaps, that the Indian Court was not placed on the ground floor. Comparatively few visitors care to ascend to the galleries, and scarcely any find their way to Indian department except old Indians with their families, unless it be for the sake of the seats that look down upon Minton's Fountain or command a view of the nave. And yet there is very much to be admired, not merely as curiosities, but as objects possessing high artistic merit. The beautifully carved furniture, indeed, sent by Bhimjee Biramjee, of Bombay, appears to have been thoroughly appreciated, as most of it is already sold—though, of course, it cannot be removed until the middle of October. But it may be doubted if this can be taken as a fair specimen of native skill, for the designs are evidently European, and there is nothing to show that even the mechanical labour has not been performed by Europeans or Eurasians. The same remark applies to the handsome racing cups and other articles of purely English origin. It is curious, too, to observe the influence of English wants and fancies in the different specimens of ornamental carving. Whether the material be sandal-wood or ivory, soapstone, lacquer ware or inlaid work, it is sure to take the form of work-box, writing-desk, dressing-case, pen-holder, or some objet de luxe adapted to the library, drawing-room, or boudoir. Many of these trifles are exceedingly pretty, and evince mechanical skill of a high order, which is all the more surprising when allowance is made for the wretched tools with which they are executed. A small collection of these miserable implements has been very judiciously placed in the same case as the beautiful objects in horn, sandal-wood, and ivory. The jewellery also bears the impress of Feringhee taste, though some of the native devices in silver filigree work are perfectly exquisite. The collection of arms is hardly worthy of the occasion, and seems to attract very little attention. Scientific agriculturists will probably be more surprised with the rude ploughs and other agricultural implements of the simplest construction than with the silver armlets or anklets, with the clumsy jезай or the primitive spear and shield, with the elaborate carving or the gorgeous embroidery. It speaks well for the improved taste of the present day that not even ladies pause long before the barbaric splendour of gold and silver brocade; nor has the Calcutta chicken work any charms for the eye accustomed to Brussels, Valenciennes, or Honiton lace. A passing and depreciatory glance is all that is bestowed upon what only a quarter of a century ago would have elicited murmurs of envy and admiration. So with the silks, which look poor and faded in comparison with those of Lyons, Antwerp, or Derby. As for the specimens of manufacture from Indian cotton, exhibited by the Indian Cotton Supply Association, it is impossible to imagine anything more hideous or intolerably vulgar. For this the natives are in no way responsible, and the fabric itself, for anything we know to the contrary, may be all that can be desired, however ugly and staring may be the patterns. Compared with the Turkish Court, the Indian one is far and away superior. In the brocades there is a marked resemblance, as far as the designs go, but the Indian workmanship is infinitely the best. The same may be said of the arms, of the saddlery, and of the carving in wood and stone. Indeed, one may gather from the Turkish Court what sort of manufactures India would have turned out under the sway of the Great Mogul before the Western Islanders introduced their notions of art. The resemblance would likely hold good in many other respects, such as personal security, the administration of justice, the condition of the commercial and industrial classes, and other points to which we need not further refer. The preparations of fruits, seeds, and other natural productions are likewise worthy of notice, and some of the fancy woods from Penang are particularly beautiful. The collection of minerals is almost too small to give anything like a just idea of the underground wealth of India, and the few bottles full of various kinds of soil are of the slightest possible use. Dr. Campbell's specimens of tea from Assam, Cachar, Darjeeling, &c., are, however, full of promise for the future, and will probably inspire many a young man with a small capital with the resolution to betake himself to a genial and profitable occupation, instead of plodding on in a dull purposeless way in the midst of London fogs and London follies.

MR. LAING'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

EASTERN romance contains nothing more wonderful than the sudden restoration of the Indian Exchequer to a sound and vigorous condition. Resuscitation is, perhaps, a more appropriate word than restoration. And not only was the Exchequer sunk in "cold obstruction's apathy," but it seemed so utterly decomposed as to be no longer recognisable. In some respects it appeared to be in even a worse state than the finances of the Austrian Empire at the present moment. The annual deficit, at least, was greater, and persons most competent to form an opinion were agreed that it would be equally impolitic and fruitless to attempt to raise an additional revenue by means of direct taxation. The wisdom of the wise, however, has proved to be folly, and the sagacity of the official world has been shown to be mere prejudice or empiricism, when contrasted with the practical experience of a trained financier. It is true, a quite unexpected increase of the revenue has largely contributed to the realisation of Mr. Laing's seemingly too sanguine expectations when enunciating his first Budget; but that very circumstance testifies to the conscientiousness of his calculations. Without this unlooked-for augmentation of receipts there would, undoubtedly, have been a deficit, for which no provision had been made, but caused by an expenditure that could not have been foreseen at the commencement of the financial year. No human foresight could have foretold the necessity of laying out a million sterling on public works, or of raising the price paid to the cultivators of the poppy. It would be asking too much of any financier to demand the literal accomplishment of his predictions. That the result should fairly coincide with his promises, is all that can be reasonably expected, and Mr. Laing may justly claim credit for having so well grounded his statements that the equilibrium was attained which he had so boldly, and as some thought so rashly, undertaken to achieve.

During the twenty years preceding April, 1861, the national debt of India had increased by the enormous sum of fifty millions, while from 1857 to 1860 the annual deficit averaged no less than twelve millions. By reducing the expenditure and imposing new taxes, the Government succeeded in getting through the financial year 1860-61 with only six millions on the debtor side of the account, but without any apparent hope of ever bringing its outgoings within the compass of its income. In one short year all was changed, and that which was despaired of in April, 1861, is enjoyed, with scarce a feeling of surprise, in April, 1862. Although the total annual disbursements of the Indian Government amounted in round numbers to forty two millions, the process of retrenchment was necessarily confined to twenty-nine millions, for the balance consisted of interest on the National Debt, the home charges, and the cost of collection. And yet through the persistent labours of Colonel Balfour and his colleagues a reduction was actually effected to the extent of five millions, without in any way impairing the efficiency of the army or the civil administration. The exact sum thus saved was £5,071,279, of which fully £750,000 was appropriated to public works, in addition to what had already been set apart for that purpose. A glance at the military expenditure for three years will show how such economy was safely practicable. In 1859-60 the army cost £20,909,307; in 1860-61, £15,279,005; and in 1861-62, £12,800,000. This desirable consummation, too, was brought about so as to strengthen instead of weakening the stability of the Government, for the native armed force was reduced from 350,000 to less than 130,000 men, thereby rendering it possible to reduce, also, the European army from 90,000 to 70,000. The charges for the navy and marine were further cut down by £426,000, and miscellaneous and contingent expenses by £1,500,000. Notwithstanding all this, the actual expenditure of the year exceeded the estimate of the Budget by £1,714,370, the greater part of which was laid out in fostering the cultivation of opium, and in promoting public works of undoubted utility. On the other hand, the actual revenue exceeded the Budget estimate by £1,616,492, of which £870,000 arose from land, £340,000 from stamps, and £370,000 from Customs, illustrating the progress of material prosperity, and the revival of confidence, which is likely to be confirmed by the remission of the vexatious Licence-tax, and the knowledge that no further loans or imposts will be required to rivet the foreign yoke.

For the current year the estimated revenue is £43,796,200, or an increase of £885,110 over that of the previous year, and after deducting expenditure, Mr. Laing anticipates a surplus of £1,428,623. We confess, however, our inability to test this statement, which is not borne out by his figures, as reported in the local journals. Probably, some clerical or typographical errors have crept in, which will hereafter be explained; but, in the mean time, we are forced to accept his totals without any clear knowledge of the separate items. The expenditure is to be still further reduced—the military charges by £600,000, the naval by £150,000; but as there will be an increase caused in the extension of law courts and the administration of justice, and also in opium advances, the positive diminution, as compared with 1861-62, will not exceed £400,890. There is some confusion, however, in this part of Mr. Laing's statement; but accepting his estimated surplus of £1,428,623, we shall proceed to show how he proposes to turn it to the best account for the good of the country. In the first place, he sets apart £146,453 so as to raise the grant for education, science, and art to half a million. He then appropriates one per cent. Income-tax, or £380,000, to public works. Having thus disposed of £526,455, he next renounces an expected revenue of £475,000 from Import Duties, by reducing the ten per cent. on manufactured cotton goods to five, and the five per cent. on yarn to three and a-half per cent. Paper and carriages are admitted free. The duty on beer is lowered from twenty to ten per cent., on tobacco from an almost prohibitory duty to twenty per cent., and on wines of less value than twelve rupees per dozen from three rupees to one rupee and a-half per gallon. These various reductions, as already stated, strike off £475,000 from the estimated receipts of the year, but a margin still remaining, Mr. Laing wisely propitiates a large body of poor and industrious natives by remitting the tax of two per cent. on incomes below £50 per annum, the net amount of which was only a quarter of a million, though collected from nearly 600,000 different individuals. The actual surplus at the end of the year is thus brought down to £179,814, though it is probable that both land and opium will produce more than is stated against them. The cash balances on the 30th April, 1863, are estimated at £17,050,673, which, as Mr. Laing complacently remarks, "will exist in actual rupees, and be entirely our own." Within two years, instead of an annual deficit of six millions, and a rapidly increasing national debt, India possesses a surplus, small indeed, but resulting after the remission of taxes and increased grants for the benefit of the people; and capitalists buy up the hitherto despised Government securities with so much eagerness as to send up their prices. To Mr. Laing personally is largely due the merit of having re-established a financial equilibrium, and restored confidence in British honour. But even he must have failed to attain the goal he has all along had in view had not the elasticity of the Indian revenue been so infinitely greater than the most sanguine ever anticipated. If peace only be maintained for the space of ten years, no practical limit can be assigned to the productive powers of that marvellous empire. Equal laws, and the prompt administration of justice, alone are needed to make India in fact what she has hitherto been represented to be only in fiction—one of the very richest and happiest countries on the face of the earth.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 20.

HERAT.

Sir M. FARQUHAR was anxious to know whether it was really true that the Persians were marching on Herat?

Sir C. WOOD replied that, from information which had reached the Government by the last mail, the Persians did not seem to have moved in any way whatever.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 22.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY rose to ask the Secretary for India what was the position of the Indian navy; whether that service was to be abolished; and, if so, how the guarantee of the naval prospects of the officers of that service would be carried out. By the 56th section of the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, the prospects of the officers in the Indian navy were especially guaranteed. It was provided that while they should remain under the obligation under which they then lay to serve the Queen they should be entitled to all the pay and privileges, and, above all things, to the promotion which they would have enjoyed if the Government of India had not been changed. The gentlemen who were in the Indian navy were a most valuable class, and were most deserving of the consideration of Parliament. Beyond that, however, the faith of the Legislature was pledged, and he was anxious that the pledge should not be violated.

Colonel SYKES said that the officers of the Indian navy were distinguished not only in a military but in a scientific capacity. The surveys of the coasts of India, the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, and China, had been laid down by that service.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE was afraid that the prospects of this unfortunate service were not very bright. There seemed to be a disposition on the part of the Government of India to violate the guarantees which Parliament had enacted for the safety of the services under the new régime. The officers of the Indian navy were men of high attainments and had done good service. If it was abolished he was afraid that we should have trouble in India such as had never occurred before. The peace of the Persian Gulf was maintained by the Indian navy. The officers of that service had an intimate knowledge of the usages and customs of the tribes which inhabited the shores of that gulf, and were by that means, and by the semi-diplomatic character which they possessed, enabled to preserve the peace of the country. He was perfectly convinced that if that district were placed under the charge of her Majesty's navy, and that officers were sent there who were not cognisant of the habits and usages of the tribes, we should soon be drifted into one of those expensive contests with which the House was painfully familiar. He was informed that a number of officers who had been in the enjoyment of appointments equal in value to £1,000 or £1,200 a year, were now congregated on board the flagship at Bombay. If that service were to be abolished, the superior officers ought in justice to be handsomely pensioned, and to the inferior officers the opportunity ought to be offered of competing for the Civil Service appointments, for which by their long residence in India they were well qualified.

Sir CHARLES WOOD was prevented, by certain rules of the House, from making a reply.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 23.

WASTE LANDS IN INDIA.

Mr. SMOLLETT called attention to the resolutions of the Governor-general of India in Council, and the documents connected therewith, authorising the sale of waste lands in perpetuity, and permitting the redemption of the land revenues in certain cases; and to the bearing of these measures on the development of the resources of our Indian empire. He discussed the policy of these measures, which, he insisted, would be nugatory and inoperative so long as the Government held the fee simple of the whole cultivated area of the country, of which it must denude itself. He suggested the reforms which, in his opinion, India required (not, he said, these small and fragmentary reforms), but of which he despaired when he considered (looking round upon the almost deserted benches) the apathy and indifference of that House. He asked for copies of the resolutions.

After some observations from Mr. VANSITTART, who advocated the extension of the permanent settlement of Bengal to the North-West Provinces, Sir C. Wood said he was ready to produce the papers referred to. In giving his general approval to the resolution regarding waste lands, he agreed that care must be taken in carrying it into execution. There was a great delusion as to waste lands in India; a great deal of land so called was not, in the true sense of the term, waste. As to the redemption of the land revenue, it was not intended to carry it to any great extent, and he did not believe it could be so carried.

MUNBEE'S DIVORCE (INDIA) BILL.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—May 20.

Their lordships sat this afternoon for the purpose of considering the second reading of this Bill for the dissolution of the marriage of Lieutenant Colonel Gore Boland Munbee with Sophia Catherine, his now wife, and to enable him to marry again.

The noble and learned lords present were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Cranworth, and Lord Kingsdown.

Mr. Lush, Q.C., and Mr. Macqueen, Q.C., appeared for petitioner; the respondent was not represented.

The learned Counsel, in opening the case on behalf of the petitioner, stated that Colonel Munbee, of the Royal Engineers, being then thirty-six years of age, married Sophia Catherine Frankland, who was then twenty-three years of age, at the Church of Sattara, in the Presidency of Bombay, on the 28th of September, 1846, and that they lived together happily until January, 1860, when Colonel Munbee was obliged to proceed on a tour of district inspection, which compelled him to leave his wife for a few months with her sister, the wife of a brother officer, at Poonah. In April of the same year Mrs. Munbee succeeded, by the will of her brother, to about £1,500, which she prevailed upon her husband to settle upon her for her separate use; shortly after which she eloped with the alleged adulterer, Lieutenant Charles Payne Barras, of the 29th Native Infantry, with whom she has lived ever since in open adultery, sending her husband the following letter:—

"To Colonel Munbee,—I have at last taken a step which will enable you to release yourself and me from a tie which has become each year more irksome to both. I cannot hope that, at first, even the recollection of the miserable terms on which we have long lived will reconcile you to my having sought the protection of Captain Barras, but if you take the only proper course open to you under the circumstances, you will in the end congratulate yourself on my having done so. What I have now done is done after long and mature consideration, and I have well weighed all the disadvantages attending such a step, and I prefer setting every consideration at defiance to continuing to lead a hopeless, aimless, and miserable life. Circumstances so far favour you that the usual talk and scandal attending such a case may be entirely avoided. I have made no confidants, and am going to such an isolated place that if you choose to apply immediately for a divorce nothing need be known until you are thereby rid of me. You may not choose to afford me the release which I desire. If so, you will regret it hereafter, and the disgrace of my position will be reflected upon you. Nor can you satisfy yourself by a hostile meeting with Captain Barras—for my sake he cannot and will not give you satisfaction—duelling, too, is out of fashion and redress by law is within your reach. If you seek 'damages' only, you will oblige me to bring forward evidence of a disagreeable nature to prove that no happy home has been destroyed, and you must fail in gaining them—therefore, for your own sake, refrain from such a course.

"SOPHIA C. MUNBEE."

Since that period the petitioner has held no intercourse with her whatever, and the result of an action he brought against Lieutenant Barras in the Civil Court at Bombay was a verdict in his favour, with 3,000 rupees damages. He had also obtained a divorce à mensa et thoro in the Ecclesiastical Court, and now prayed their lordships to dissolve the marriage. The learned counsel having read portions of the evidence taken in India to prove the marriage and the adultery,

Their lordships expressed themselves satisfied that the petitioner had made out his case, and read the Bill a second time.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.—(Balmoral, May 21.)—The Queen, as Sovereign of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, has been graciously pleased by letters patent, under the Great Seal of the Order, bearing date this day, to dispense with all the statutes and regulations observed in regard to installations, and to grant unto the Right Hon. John, Earl Canning, Knight of the said Most Noble Order, full power and authority severally to exercise all rights and privileges belonging to a Knight Companion of the said Most Noble Order of the Garter, in as full and ample a manner as if he had been formally installed, any decree, rule, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.—Gazette.

MILITARY BUTCHERY IN PERSIA.—A letter from Teheran, dated the 18th April, in the Levant Herald, has the following:—"On the 27th March 55 Turcomans were brought here as prisoners, and shot in a barrack outside the town. They were tied up to the walls by their hands, and a detachment of 100 men fired upon them at 40 paces, with such bad practice that the detachment had to be changed six times, and nearly 4,000 rounds of ammunition were expended before the wretches were slaughtered. The whole affair lasted nearly an hour and a half, and several of the victims received as many as 30 shots before life was bulleted out of them. So much for the firing of the regular Persian troops. The Mushir ed Doulep (who was Ambassador in England) made an ineffectual endeavour to save the lives of the Turcomans whose execution I have just mentioned. M. Anitchkoff, the Russian Minister, also used his influence, but with no better result, as the Shah had unfortunately gone out hunting, and did not return until long after the butchery was over. Had he been here, doubtless the lives of the wretches would have been spared, and we should have been saved the pain of witnessing so horrible an exhibition as their execution in the way narrated presented."

THE LATE SIR HARRY SMITH.—Mr. G. G. Adams, sculptor, of Sloane-street, has been commissioned to execute the monument to the late General Sir Harry Smith, G.C.B. It is to be erected at Whitelesea, Cambridgeshire, the gallant general's birthplace. A marble bust, executed from life, will form the summit.

A NEW INDIAN BANK.—A prospectus has been issued of the new joint-stock bank projected for India under the title of the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, with a capital of £1,000,000, in shares of £100 each. Its claim to support consists in the fact that there has been no increase of banking facilities in connection with the East in any degree commensurate with the growth and prosperity of that region. The existing banks have all for a considerable period paid high dividends, and there is of course a good field for the new establishment, provided it pursues an equally prudent system of management.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA.—At a meeting of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, held on the 20th, the report for the year ended the 31st of December last was submitted and approved. It showed net profits amounting to £60,040, out of which £50,000 has been already distributed in two half-yearly dividends of 5 per cent. each. £10,000 has been placed to the reserve fund, which has thus been raised to £90,000, and is invested in the Indian Government Securities, and a balance of £40 has been carried forward.

APPOINTMENT, CHINA.—(War-office, May 20.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Harry Smith Parkes, Esq., C.B., her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,
OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,

A white powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the teeth, and ensures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and antiscorbutic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of the decay of the teeth, induce a healthy action of the gums, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath also attains a grateful purity and fragrance. Price 2s. 9d. per box.

Caution.—The words "Rowlands' Odonto" are on the label, and "A. Rowland and Sons, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp. Sold by them, and by chemists and perfumers.

The Delhi Railway, about 280 miles in length, will form the connecting link between Umrutur, the upper terminus of the Punjab Railway, and Delhi, the northern terminus of the East India Railway, and complete that great chain of steam communication which will connect the opposite sides of the Peninsula, having Calcutta for its eastern and Kurrachee for its western or European port.

The importance of the early completion of such a line is apparent, whether on political or commercial considerations. The attention of the Government of India having been directed to the necessity which existed for placing Lahore and Umrutur in railway communication with Delhi, the Secretary of State for India in Council, on the recommendation of the Governor-General of India, offered to the Directors of the Scinde and Punjab Railways the construction of the work, with 5 per cent. interest guaranteed on the requisite capital.

This offer the Board at once accepted: it being evidently for the interests of the Proprietors of the other associated enterprises of this Company that the construction and working of this important line should be entrusted to one and the same agency, although the capital would be entirely distinct and separate.

The route of the proposed railway has been surveyed; plans and sections prepared, and the other preliminary arrangements made; with the exception of the bridges, there will be no works of any magnitude; the cost, including rolling stock, is estimated under £11,000 per mile; the average height of embankment for the whole of the railway is only four feet; ballast is easily procurable along the line.

The railway will traverse a fertile, level, and populous country, with a large existing traffic, a great portion of which, there is reason to believe, will be carried by the combined undertakings of this Company to Kurrachee.

The trade of Umrutur, the northern terminus, has been officially valued at £3,500,000 per annum. It is the grand entrepot for the commerce of the Cis-Sutlej States, and of the region eastward to Kote Kangra; for the horses, fruits, and woolsens of Cabul and Bokhara, and the shawls and other produce of Cashmere, Yarkand, and the country towards the north-east. It contains a population of 120,000 souls, and is the religious capital of the lately dominant race. For these reasons the influx of travellers, traders, and visitors is great and continuous.

Delhi, the southern terminus, on the western bank of the Jumna and on the Grand Trunk road, occupying a commanding political and strategic site, must, with Railway communication, become a grand central entrepot in Hindoostan, similar to Umrutur in the Punjab, though on a vastly extended scale.

Although Delhi had not recovered from the effects of the mutiny, its trade in 1860 amounted in value to £1,000,000.

Through the good offices of Mr. McLeod, the financial Commissioner of the Punjab, statistics of the existing traffic between Umrutur and Delhi have been collected and placed at the disposal of the Board. From these returns it is estimated that 621,582 passengers annually pass through the Jullundur Doab, to wards Umrutur or Delhi; 27,340 being on horseback or in carriages, irrespective of troops and travellers journeying short distances.

The total amount of the tonnage of merchandise conveyed is not given, but the cost of the carriage of goods between Umrutur and Delhi exceeds £300,000 per annum.

The following tabular statement shows the extent of the movement of travellers and commodities passing through the central district of Umballah.

| ABSTRACT STATEMENT OF TRAFFIC ON THE GRAND TRUNK ROAD IN THE UMBALLAH DISTRICT. | Carrriages. | Carts. | Horses, ponies, mules, and asses. | Camels. | Buffaloes, and other cattle. | Elephants. |
|---|-------------|--------|-----------------------------------|---------|------------------------------|------------|
| Aggregate traffic in both directions from 6th Jan. to 21st Feb. 1861.           | 2,614       | 15,788 | 7,411                             | 10,214  | 2,393                        | 102        |

Besides the traffic existing on the Grand Trunk Road that of others nearly parallel to it will be drawn to the Railway; and the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi is of opinion that the Central Asian traffic, from the Bolan Pass to Delhi, via Bhawalpore and Sirsa, will, from the expense and difficulty of that route, be diverted to the Punjab Railway at Mooltan, and proceed, via Lahore and Umrutur, to Delhi, and other southern markets.

As to the probable direction of the traffic of Upper India and Central Asia, the Punjab Government remarked, in their first report on railways that:—"A glance at the accompanying rough sketch map will show that Northern India has two natural divisions—first, the provinces of the Ganges and its tributaries; second, the provinces of the Indus and its tributaries. In the first or easterly division, the stream of trade and wealth must ever flow down the valley of the Ganges to the natural outlet of Calcutta. In the second or westerly division, the power of art and science be brought to the aid of nature, the commerce would follow the direction of the Punjab rivers to the Indus, then down the valley of the Indus towards the rising port of Kurrachee, which is destined to be to the north-west of India what Calcutta is to the north-east. A line drawn north to south, somewhere near Agra and Delhi, will form the probable boundary of the two natural subdivisions. And if the same facilities were created westward which exist eastward, then all the commerce west of the line would follow the Indus to Kurrachee, in the same manner as the commerce on the east follows the Ganges to Calcutta. At present, however, the major part of the commerce of the extreme north-west travels eastward, merely from the want of a more direct route. But if the great route of the Indus were to be thoroughly opened, this commerce would go straight to Kurrachee. To this port there would then come the products from North-western India and from the Central Asian countries beyond that frontier; and in exchange for these the products of European countries. In this mode of direction there would also arrive the vast quantities of Government stores and material for the military and public establishments in that quarter, and a large number of European travellers would frequent this line (in preference to the eastern route), on account of its comparative shortness and proximity to overland passage to Europe."

There is, within the borders of the Punjab, an area of nearly 200,000 square miles, with a population of 22,000,000, subject to our rule or influence, nearly equaling in numbers the inhabitants of Great Britain.

No recent census of the population has been made, but the annexation of the Delhi territory and other changes have led to a revision of the returns made in 1855-56 with the following results in the divisions to be traversed by the Delhi Railway, viz., in the Umrutur Division, 416 per square mile; in the Trause-Sutlej 334; in the Cis-Sutlej, 341; and in the Delhi Territory, 327 per square mile.

In the five years since 1855-56 the revenue has increased by one million sterling.

The report on the administration of the Punjab for the official year ending 30th April, 1861, contains most valuable remarks on the trade with Central Asia and on the growth of cotton, tea, and other products. Of cotton 44,399,790 lbs. are grown, and 13,773,950 lbs. exported to neighbouring countries, net 4,100,000 lbs. reaching the sea. The local price is about 4d. a pound. The Government Tea Plantations produced 26,532 lbs., and distributed 103,156 lbs. of seed among 22 Europeans and 375 natives.

The Punjab was the granary which fed the starving millions during the recent famine, and is the great bulwark of British India, behind which all other provinces repose in safety, so long as it is impregnable.

Forms of application for shares may be had at the Offices of the Company, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street, E.C.

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA; showing the British

Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 8s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP OF INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 6 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 8s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA.

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."

—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, considerably lower than those now charged by this or any other Company, but differing from the old system in respect that no reduction takes place on the insured returning to Europe or proceeding to any other part of the world not chargeable with an extra premium.

According to this method, the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

DR. ROBERTS'S CELEBRATED OINT-

MENT, called "THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND," is confidently recommended to the public as an unfailing remedy for wounds of every description, a certain cure for ulcerated sore legs, if of twenty years standing, burns, scalds, bruises, chilblains, scorbutic eruptions, and pimples in the face, sore and inflamed eyes, sore heads, &c. Sold in pots at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 11s., and 22s. each.

Also his PILULE ANTISCROPHULE, confirmed by sixty years' experience to be, without exception, one of the best alternative Medicines ever compounded for purifying the blood, and assisting nature in all her operations. Hence they are useful in scrofula, scorbutic complaints, glandular swellings, particularly those of the neck, &c. They form a mild and superior family aperient, that may be taken at all times without confinement or change of diet. Sold in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 22s. each.

Mr. Northway, Chemist, Great Tower street, London, says, "The Ointment is much valued by Soldiers in Foreign Service."—Oct. 26th, 1857.

Sold wholesale by the Proprietors, BEACH and BARNICOTT, at their Dispensary, Bridport, and by the London Houses; and retail by all respectable Medicine Vendors in the United Kingdom, the Colonies, &c. Observe.—No Medicine sold under the above names can possibly be genuine, unless "BEACH and BARNICOTT, late Dr. ROBERTS, Bridport," is engraved and printed on the Government Stamp affixed to each package.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

GLORIOUS TRIUMPHS.—Any unnatural discharge from the skin is at all times disagreeable, but in hot weather it becomes irritating, sometimes offensive. Bad legs, old wounds, scrofula, and scorbutic eruptions are cooled, soothed, and cured by Holloway's Ointment. It at once arrests all diseases of the surface by purifying and regulating the circulation in their neighbourhood, by giving energy to the nerves of the afflicted part, and by expelling all poisonous and noxious matters. It ejects the seeds of all virulent eruptions and ulcerations, and thus confers no partial or temporary boon, but a complete and permanent cure. By means of these remedies all sufferers may aim at attaining health and will invariably succeed.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-down language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Horn News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received by the Bombay Mail of the 12th May is chiefly of a thoroughly local nature. The new Governor, Sir Bartle Frere, held his first levee on the 28th of April, and his first durbar on Mayday, when Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy presented an address from the native inhabitants of Bombay, expressive of their satisfaction in having as their ruler one whom they had so long known and respected. In his capacity as Chancellor of the University, his Excellency also held the first convocation on the same day as his first levee, and delivered a really excellent address, evincing a well-stored mind and a refined taste. The degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on four graduates, and that of Licentiate of Medicine on the like number. The whole affair appears to have passed off very successfully, a large number of European and native residents being attracted by the novelty of the proceedings.

The Bombay Chamber of Commerce has memorialised the Government of India on the subject of compensation for the great losses sustained by the merchants from the sudden reduction of the import duty on cotton goods and yarns. The Chamber has requested that, as a partial compensation, all goods in unopened packages in their warehouses may be treated as if they had been bonded, or that other equivalent allowance may be made to them.

Dr. Harkness, for many years Principal of the Elphinstone College, and Professor McDougall, of the Poona College, have sent in their resignation. The former will be succeeded by Sir Alexander Grant, Bart., who will also officiate as Director of Public Instruction on Mr. Coke's departure for Europe. Commodore Wellesley has likewise retired from the command of the Indian Navy, and will no doubt be of the greatest assistance to the Secretary of State in planning out the gradual extinction of that service.

The Persian invasion of Afghanistan turns out to have been a fiction, more creditable to the ingenuity of the news-writer with whom it originated, than to the judgment of the Anglo-Indian journalists who accepted and propagated his false or exaggerated report. Neither the Russians nor the Persians have had anything to do with the disturbances that have disquieted the aged Ameer, Dost Mahomed. Whatever fighting has taken place has been simply a series of noisy but not very sanguinary skirmishes between the half-disciplined soldiery of Sultan Ahmed Jan of Herat and the equally barbarian retainers of the Candahar chieftains. One of the up-country papers, we observe, recommends the occupation of Quetta by British troops and a subsidy to Dost Mahomed. A notable scheme, in truth, beginning with an act of spoliation, followed up by a return to the injurious and exploded system of subsidies. The English press in India is, for the most part, still sadly deficient in sound and varied knowledge, and in editors of real literary ability and experience.

On the north-eastern frontier General Showers has acted with such judgment and energy that the pacification of Sylhet and Cachar may be said to be almost completed. His first step was to issue a proclamation offering a reward of 1,000 rupees for the apprehension of the original instigator of the rebellion, and an amnesty to all who should at once return to their ordinary occupations, excepting only the head-men of three villages. But he did not content himself with fair words alone. A cordon of troops gradually moved forward, sweeping every height and ravine, and driving the insurgents before them like wild beasts at a battue. The result of these operations is expected to be the definitive reduction of the country in the space of ten days, after which good government must supersede the direct action of arms.

In our advertisement columns will be seen a notification from the India-office referring to the twenty cadetships conferred by her Majesty's Secretary of State in Council upon the sons of civil and military officers who have served in India. These fortunate youths will be educated at Sandhurst, and all their expenses defrayed, at the charge of the Indian revenue. No time, therefore, should be lost in making the proper application to the Under-Secretary of State at the India office, Westminster.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

CALCUTTA, May 17.

Mr. Laing leaves for England on the 21st instant.

The case of McArthur versus Grant has resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff—damages one rupee.

The opium crop has failed in Bengal. Mr. Laing estimates it at 50,000 chests.

The last centre supports were successfully removed yesterday from the great railway bridge over the river Soane.

SHANGHAI, April 21.

The rebels have twice been defeated with great loss. Colonel Ward has been created a mandarin. The Taepings are receiving large reinforcements at Nankin. The foreigners at Ningpo still remain undisturbed by the rebels. There are rumours, however, of impending danger. The ice has broken up at the northern ports.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

BENGAL.

DEPUTATION OF THE TRADES' ASSOCIATION.

On the 11th of April, at half-past ten A.M., a deputation, consisting of about forty members of the Trades' Association, attended at Government-house for the purpose of presenting Lord Elgin with an address of welcome. They were received by his lordship in the Throne-room. The Master, Mr. F. Jennings, after briefly introducing the deputation to the notice of his lordship, and stating shortly the object of his visit, proceeded to read the following address:—

"To His Excellency the Earl of ELGIN and KINCARDINE, K.T., G.C.B., and K.S.L., Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

"My LORD,—We, the Master, Committee, and Members of the Calcutta Trades' Association, would beg most respectfully to wait upon your lordship to offer our warm congratulations on your accession to the government of this vast empire.

"We do so under the full conviction that your lordship's rule will promote the happiness of the teeming millions of her Majesty's subjects in India, and also add to the many honours your lordship has won in the high and responsible positions you have already held in other lands.

"We feel convinced that India, under your lordship's sway, will rise to an elevation it never before attained; that her resources will be developed, her trade encouraged, her commerce extended, and her people advanced in mental and social culture.

"Not the less do we feel assured that the energy and enterprise of our countrymen, to which India owes so much, will be fostered by your lordship, and that all classes under your rule will be encouraged to act for the common welfare.

"The policy recently inaugurated by your lordship's predecessor receives our warm approval, and it will rest with your lordship's government to extend and perfect it.

"We trust you will accept the assurance of our desire cordially to co-operate as far as our position in the State will permit us, in the support of your lordship's administration, and we trust the Almighty will bless your Excellency with health, strength, and wisdom, to fulfil the mighty work before you.

"We have the honour to subscribe ourselves, your lordship's most obedient and humble servants, on behalf of the Committee and Members of the Trades' Association.

(Signed) "F. JENNINGS, Master.

"Calcutta, April, 1862."

His Excellency read the following reply:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I am greatly obliged to you for coming forward in this manner with a tender of welcome and good wishes when I am entering on the discharge of the important duties that attach to the office of Governor-general of India.

"Public men must be judged rather by their acts than by their professions. I do not, therefore, dwell on the expressions of personal confidence and anticipations of benefit from my administration which are contained in your address.

"You may rest assured, however, that the development of the resources of India, the extension of its trade, the advancement of its people in moral, intellectual, and social culture, and the encouragement of the energy and enterprise of our countrymen, are objects near to my heart, and to the attainment of which my best efforts will be directed. If, under the good providence of God, the blessing of peace be preserved to us, and if the disposition to co-operate for the common welfare, of which I think I see indications around me, bears fruit in the establishment of mutual confidence and forbearance among those classes of her Majesty's subjects in this country who differ widely in habit and mental training, I am not without hope that some of your most sanguine expectations may yet be realised."

INTOXICATION IN INDIA.

We have been at the pains to compile from various sources the following table, which will show at a glance the duty raised from the vices of drinking, smoking, and eating intoxicating articles. The table is on the whole under the truth, for Mr. Laing in his financial estimate for 1861-62 fixes the abkaree net revenue at £1,327,804. Sixteen per cent. must be added to the whole as the cost of collection, to arrive at the amount actually paid by the sellers. We shall not err, then, if we say the State this year has received £1,050,000 sterling.

Wherever we have been able, we have separated opium from spirits and drugs, the truth being, we believe, that one-third of the whole revenue is derived from the consumption of opium. But these figures, without a standard of comparison, give us no idea of the evil of which we complain. If we take Bengal as a fair example of the rest of India, we find how rapidly the demoralisation of the people is proceeding under our rule.

| Year.       | Spirits and Drugs. | Opium.    | Total.    |
| 1845-46 ... | 21,19,358          | 3,83,666  | 25,03,024 |

Here we find that in fifteen years the excise officers have raised the revenue just 100 per cent. If we allow a little for an increase in the duty on gunjah, rum, and country spirits, we have at least a consumption of deleterious liquors and drugs extended in fifteen years by 80 per cent. among a population whose increase is believed to be trifling. Do our readers realise what this means? All over India during the most enlightened period of our rule, the number of drunkards and drug-consumers has increased by one-half, and those who drank and poisoned themselves before have largely increased their consumption. Yet the compiler of the Bengal Report writes—"The increase of Rs. 3,99,733 in the net revenue of the past year (1860-61) is very satisfactory." And if we look away from the empire or the fifty millions of the presidency to one town, what do we find? In Serampore, a few years ago, there were only two liquor shops. The Christian population has been stationary, yet now there are at least twenty-seven public houses and eleven gunjah and opium shops, all flourishing. As in London so in India—if a shop seems better built or in a better position than any other, be sure it is a gin-palace. Natives reel along the Serampore streets drunk with doasta, a spirit made from rice, molasses, and a certain root, in the Government distillery. Our readers in towns will be able to record similar facts. These figures, with the complacent comment "very satisfactory" attached, speak for themselves. And they are true of a country which requires no stimulating drink, where soothing tobacco is universally consumed by man, woman, and child, and where the Koran of the Mussulman and the superstition as well as caste of the Hindoo, forbid drunkenness. It is notorious, too, that what intemperance is in the cold North as a feeder of crime, intoxication is in the tropical East. The Malay does not run a muck, the devotee does not lacerate his body, the dacoit does not go forth in the darkness of the night, the thug does not waylay his unsuspecting victim, without first plying himself with bang, hasheesh, opium, or drink. There is the same relation between intoxication and crime in India as in England.

But more than the figures of our revenue reports, and the returns of our criminal courts, a consideration of the abkaree system itself will show that the object of the Government seems to be not to check immorality but to procure gain. Our system is in all essential respects that of the Mahomedan Foudzars, which we received as an inheritance from them, only it is more immoral. As the Koran forbids "drink," a Government based on it could not acknowledge a system of excise. But secretly the Foudzar of each district, for his own benefit, let out the monopoly to one man who licenced retailers. We abolished the middleman that we might get his profits, and now deal with each vendor separately, although the 16 per cent. which our establishment costs, shows that the Mussulman plan was as cheap as ours, while it was not so demoralising. The abkari superintendent till recently used to dispose of the right of sale of all intoxicating articles by auction to the highest bidder. One case is recorded of a retailer who bid a high price on the understanding that two men would continue to consume, as they always had done, each a bottle of country spirits daily at six annas. They died, and the retailer applied for a decrease of the tax accordingly. There was an implied breach of contract! The retailer used to pay a daily tax, which he must recover from his sales, and so "cajoled the people into drinking." This daily tax is still paid in the case of opium. To collect the duties there is a whole army of darogahs and chupprassees—the vilest in the country, for the work is not liked—who fatten on the retailer, the former securing his "nuzzur" to wink at evasion of the law, and the latter his "muscabar" to abstain from annoyance or tout for customers. While the darogah and chupprassie thus extend the consumption, the Christian superintendents are proportionally as busy. One of the latter class honestly confesses:—"We have often known it to be jokingly urged against abkari superintendents that when two of them meet, the first subject of discourse between them is, how much they increased last year and how much they anticipate increasing the next, and so on. How long is this increasing to go on? There are but two sources—viz., an increase in the number of drunken wretches, or that those who drank before should drink the more—neither of them very desirable objects to bring about." The system, we believe, has been somewhat reformed, but the figures we have given show with what effect. Rum and doasta are manufactured in Government distilleries by the licenced abkars, and are subject on removal to a duty recently raised. Opium is bought from the abkaree darogah at Rs. 20 a seer, and gunjah or hasheesh is purchased from licenced cultivators at the market price, to which Rs. 2 per seer is added as duty. The daily tax of eight or twelve annas on each opium retail shop is still continued, and is collected with difficulty, for it is irrespective of the amount sold. The "crack" collector or abkaree superintendent, no longer allowed to squeeze up a land settlement till he has ruined a district, now rejoices in a growing excise revenue.

With a bad system, based on immoral principles, and carried out by worse management—all pronounced "very satisfactory" by the subordinate Government responsible—the abkaree department is fast demoralising the abstemious Asiatics, who, amid all their vices, have at least this passive virtue. And in the Presidency cities we find that intoxication with English drinks keeps pace with the spread of English education. Truly we pay dearly for our national vice. We leave the subject meanwhile, with these little facts in our readers' minds. We derive an annual revenue of £6,000,000 from our opium monopoly, and of £1,650,000 from our forced spread of intoxication; we spend not less than £300,000 on our prisoners, and £4,000,000 on justice and police. But up to this day we give only £200,000 for schools.—Friend of India.

EASTERN BENGAL—A CHIEF COMMISSIONERSHIP.

The necessity for consolidating our scattered provinces, governed on different and often conflicting systems, has not ended with the erection of British Burmah and the Central Provinces into Chief Commissionerships. In the course of years we expect to see a process going on in India similar to that which caused a reform in the representation of the people of England in 1832. In England large cities were gradually developed out of villages or fishing ports, like Manchester, Leeds, Liverpool, and Glasgow. Rural districts become vast manufacturing provinces, like the Yorkshire Riding. Cities threw out new suburbs, which in time became great towns, like the metropolitan boroughs. The territorial completion of the empire, the restoration of financial ease and the continuance of peace, allow the Government to perform a similar process in India. There is not a province, whether opened up by settlers or brought into prominence by rebels, which does not cry for better government, for more detailed attention to its wants. A good time has come for the Cinderellas of our Indian family, and it will be their own fault if they longer submit to neglect. No one supposes that the Wynad district of Madras, the pushing community of Scinde, the fast increasing knots of settlers on the Himalayan slopes, will always be satisfied with the mere crumbs of government, which, from the small number of rulers in some places and their carelessness in others, are thrown to them under the table. No one believes that half a century hence the three old Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and the three Lieutenant-Governorships into which the first is divided, will maintain their present size, and that they will not be broken up into smaller states.

The largest and most unwieldy is Bengal proper. In all our strictures on the shortcomings of its Government we are too apt to forget its enormous extent, its varying populations, and their conflicting interests. No one man can rule well a population twice that of Great Britain, and an area thrice its extent. So much is this felt, that already the work of disintegration has begun. Arracan has been taken from Bengal and added to British Burmah, and Sumbulpore is about to follow, dropping into the lap of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. The process cannot stop there. Assam, or rather Eastern Bengal, must follow. At no distant date it must be made subject to a separate chief commissioner, not less for its own sake than that of the Lieutenant-governor, who has enough to do with pure Bengalees and Beharees. How badly the Bengal Government is served in the Eastern Provinces, and how indifferent it is to the condition of the people, may be understood from the fact that it has not and cannot obtain from one of its officials even a vague knowledge of the cause of the revolts in Nowgong and the Jyntea country. Is it the prohibition of opium cultivation, is it the intrigues of Bhootan, is it the attempt to levy taxes, or is it, as we believe, the oppression of our own native officials? General Showers is now on the spot with full civil and military powers, and martial law has been proclaimed in the Cossya Hills. Major Houghton, who has done so well in the Andaman Islands, has temporarily succeeded Major Hopkinson as Civil Commissioner of Assam, and we look for some improvement on the hitherto existing state of things. The people may be less oppressed, the officials may be increased in number, and the public as well as the Government may be better informed.

What Assam and all Eastern Bengal wants is detailed administration. It lacks everything which a decently governed district ought to possess—courts, police, roads, bridges, inland navigation, and a fair amount of population. Long devastated by the Burmese, who carried off whole colonies of Assamese whose descendants are met with in Burmah now, the country has been as much abused and then neglected as the Central Provinces. What the latter possess in cotton, coal, and gems, Assam has in tea, coal, lime, and many of the productions of a temperate climate. The former are inaccessible at present from the sea, the latter is traversed by the mighty Burampooter and its affluents. In the former there is hardly a European settler as yet, in the latter there is more than a hundred, and every year adds largely to their number. To what is the prosperity of Ceylon, Pegu, and even Scinde, owing, if not to the detailed administration of a sufficient number of able and justly paid officials. Ceylon is a Crown colony, ruled by a governor who is frequently a peer, by an executive and legislative council, and separate civil and military services; yet it is little more than half Eastern Bengal in area, its population is somewhat less, and its physical advantages, with the exception of its island character, are inferior.

| Eastern Bengal ...    | 42,892        | 1,831,155   |

Whether Eastern Bengal be raised into a Chief Commissionership or not, its revenue is growing so fast from the increase of settlers that its administration must be improved at some cost. At present a pretence is made of governing a country larger than Scotland, and with more than half its population, by fourteen officials. The increased expenditure which is necessary for good government would be a mere modicum of the excess of revenue resulting from the prohibition of the poppy cultivation and the introduction of the Abkari drug, apart from the increase caused by settlers. In a few years, as both settlers and labourers still further increase, the number of officials must be enlarged.

But, besides the good of the people and the settlers of Eastern Bengal, there are other reasons, political and commercial, why the province should be put under a Chief Commissioner with a large and better paid staff of officials. On all sides it is surrounded by savage tribes, semi barbarous States, and dependent provinces which require to be checked and civilised. In the first class there are the Kookees, Abors, Nagas, Garrows, Cossyais and others. In the second there are Independent Tipperah, Bootan, and Cooch Behar. And in the third there is Munnipore. To carry out measures of pacification and maintain proper political relations in the case of all these, requires much of the time of a higher official than a commissioner. And the time must come when our highway to China will lie along a road connecting the valleys of the Yangtsekiang and Burumpooter, rivers separated by only a few hundred miles. Beyond Suddya an exploring expedition must yet penetrate, and reveal to us the least known part of Central Asia. North-Eastern Bengal has been thirty years under our administration, and it is time that it should cease to deserve the character of a "dead-alive" province.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.—His Excellency the Governor-general in Council has resolved that, in supercession of all former orders in respect to public holidays in Calcutta, the following days, and no others, shall be observed as close holidays in all the Public Offices, except the Courts of Law and the Offices of the Department of Public Works, for which special arrangements exist:—

|  |    |
|--|----|
| New Year's-day...                                    | 1  |
| Sri Panchomi (February) ...                          | 2  |
| Good Friday and the day after ...                    | 2  |
| Chait Sankranti (April) ...                          | 1  |
| The Queen's Birthday (May) ...                       | 1  |

BENGAL.—Sir John Peter Grant left Calcutta on the 23rd April. Mr. Beadon, we understand, after being duly installed in Government House, Allipore, will before the rainy season take up his residence in Bhaugulpore, a place more conducive to his health, within easy distance of Calcutta and Darjeeling, and at the same time separated from the imperial influences of the former, which always overshadow the local Government. Major H. C. James will act as his Private Secretary. If the present Bengal Secretary, Mr. E. C. Lushington, carries out his intention of taking sick leave, in England before the rainy season, it is probable that Mr. Gordon Young, late Director of Public Instruction, will officiate for him. Thus Lieutenant-Governor and Secretary will be in accord in their policy, and the action of the administration will be at once direct and energetic. Mr. Grey has been appointed member of the Supreme Council, and is succeeded by Mr. E. C. Bayley in the Home Office.—Friend of India.

THE COSSYAH REVOLT.—From his camp at Jowai General Showers issued the following proclamation to the rebellious tribes, on the 14th of April last. Communication with these Hills occupies a fortnight. The rebels still show determination, and the difficulty is to see that this proclamation really reaches them. General Showers expects to have reduced the whole country to order, and to return to Calcutta by the end of June:—"Brigadier-general Showers, c.b., commanding the presidency division of the army, has been appointed the Commissioner of the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills. He has assumed charge of his office, and has this day established his head-quarters at Jowai Poonjee. The Government have at the same time ordained that Act XI. of 1857 be brought into force in the Jynteah Hills; and Brigadier-general Showers hereby proclaims it to the people. The British Government had in its clemency withheld this measure in the hope that the people would have returned to their allegiance without obliging it to resort to such severity. The people have continued headstrong in their rebellion, and now this severe law has been established and will take its course. Brigadier-general Showers calls upon all those who are friends of order and the loyal subjects of the British Government to assist him in restoring the peace of the district. At the same time he warns the inhabitants of the district that all who are found harbouring the rebels, or supplying them with provisions, or in any way assisting them, will render themselves liable to the penalties of the Act. The British Government has no wish to inflict the miseries of a severe law upon the people. It would be better pleased to act for the peace and the happiness, and the welfare of its subjects; and Brigadier-general Showers, guided by the spirit of his Government, urges the people to apply for pardon, and to return to their allegiance. If the people have any grievances to be redressed they should make them known as the law directs, and they will be listened to, but no complaints will be received so long as they are in a state of insurrection. Brigadier-general Showers has been informed that the mass of the people are loyally inclined, but that they are prevented from coming in by threats of certain evil disposed men. Is any threat such men can hold out more dreadful than to behold wives and children perishing from want and the inclemency of the weather? Brigadier-general Showers exhorts the people to give up such men or proclaim them to the Government, that they may be treated as the disturbers of the public peace and in conformity with the penalties of the Act."

THE IMPORT DUTIES.—Copy of Message by telegraph from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, under date April 9:—"The mercantile body of Bombay are unanimous in considering the immediate reduction of the duties on piece goods as a useless sacrifice of revenue and unjustly prejudicial to the interests of holders of large duty-paid stocks. They regard the present high rates as injurious to the trade, and wish to see their gradual reduction, say to 5 per cent., from April next, and total abolition the following year."

MELA AT AYODHA.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette describes the great Mela held at Ayodha, the birth-place of the hero Ram, near Fyzabad. Upwards of 20,000 people were present, some of them from the most distant places in India. They bathe in the Surojoo to purify themselves from sin. Some ten or twelve men were trampled down under the feet of an unruly mob, in attempting to ascend the stairs of Honoomaunguree, where from six o'clock in the morning the people continued to rush up and down through a gate too narrow to admit of four persons abreast. After the accident the gates were most properly closed, much to the disappointment of the priests.

THE RENT LAW.—Government are at last convinced that Act X. is working the same social ruin in Chittagong as elsewhere, a fact to which we (Friend of India) recently directed their attention. In that district there are no large zemindars, and the few men of any property have their estates scattered in different pergunnahs. Since the landlords are unable to keep law agents in the various subordinate courts, the ryots universally refuse to pay rent of any kind, and in many places have thus become proprietors. There is no indigo in Chittagong. The result is what we predicted a year ago, and a whole posse of deputy collectors have been sent to the spot to enable the ruined landlords to save some of the wrecks of their estates.

A WARNING TO MR. GLADSTONE.—A curious sort of superstition has prevailed amongst the natives in reference to the Income-tax. They believe that a blight has fallen upon the Council which imposed it, and will remain until the tax is repealed. They point to the deaths of Messrs. Wilson and Ritchie, and the illness of Messrs. Deacon and Laing. Now that the tax upon incomes under 500 rs. is repealed, the native mind will probably be reassured both as to the personal fate of members of Council and as to the genuineness of the prosperity which Mr. Laing depicts.

APPOINTMENTS.—Dr. Forsyth's departure causes the following temporary promotions till the Amalgamation scheme is published:—Inspector-General of Hospitals John McClelland to be Principal Inspector-General; Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals John Burnie Dickson to be Inspector-General; Surgeon Major James Alexander Guise to be Deputy Inspector-General; Major G. Verner succeeds Major Dalton as Officiating Commissioner of Chota-Nagpore; Mr. Hugh Fraser is appointed Honorary Magistrate in the 24 Pergunnahs, Mr. J. Botelho in Midnapore, and Chowdry Lulletram Singh in Kamroop—all with the powers of Subordinate Magistrate of the second class.

MILITARY SCANDALS AT LUCKNOW.—We (Oudh Gazette) hear that Lieutenant-Colonel Hinde, of the 10th Native Infantry, has sent in charges against his commanding officer, Colonel McPherson, of rather a serious character, which, if substantiated, cannot fail to relieve the latter of his appointment. They are, we believe, framed on his conduct to the officers on parade, and gross maltreatment of, and violence to, the sepoys. A medical committee assembled last evening (17th April) to determine whether Colonel Hinde is too ill to be detained to give his evidence before a Court of Inquiry, which is about to be assembled to investigate the charges. This was hardly necessary, as the steamer in which he is about to proceed to Calcutta will not be in for two or three days, during which interim his evidence might have been taken. We shall be curious as to the result, as it will be remembered that, on the 18th of December last, we published a letter from a Dinapore correspondent, in which he animadverted on Colonel McPherson's violent behaviour in the regiment under his command, which statement that officer denied in no measured terms in a letter to us, dated 25th December, 1861, which letter we also published. We also hear that Col. McPherson has handed Brigadier Barney up to the Commander-in-Chief, for presuming to drive Colonel Hinde on the course, while the latter was on the sick list!

SIR BARTLE FRERE AND THE TRADES' ASSOCIATION.—Copy of a Resolution passed at the meeting of the Committee of the Calcutta Trades' Association, on the 3rd of April, 1862:—"That this Association do record upon its minutes their high appreciation of the services rendered by the Hon. Sir Bartle Frere, K.C.B., during his official connection with this Presidency, and particularly acknowledge the courtesy which has marked his reception of the members who have had the honour on several occasions to wait upon him on matters seriously affecting the trading interests. The Association would further record their congratulation on his appointment to the Government of Bombay, opening out as it does a more extended field of usefulness and honour.—(Signed) F. JENNINGS, Master."

PAPER CURRENCY.—The following is the first statement of the amount of Government Currency Notes in circulation, and of the amount of Coin and Bullion Reserves and Government Securities held by the Departments of Issue of Paper Currency on March 31, 1862:—

| Amount of                  | Calcutta.   | Bombay.     | Madras.   | Total.      |
|----------------------------|-------------|-------------|-----------|-------------|
| Notes in circulation ...   | 2,30,00,000 | 1,14,00,000 | 35,00,000 | 3,69,00,000 |
| Silver Coin Reserve ...    | 2,30,00,000 | 1,14,00,000 | 35,00,000 | 3,69,00,000 |
| Silver Bullion Reserve ... | ...         | ...         | ...       | ...         |
| Government Securities ...  | ...         | ...         | ...       | ...         |

By the 1st of May the limit of four millions will be reached.

COLONEL A. BROOME has been appointed to officiate as Chief of the Military Finance Department and member of the Board of Audit, and Col. Vincent Eyre, C.B., as Inspector General of Ordnance and Magazines. The "officiating" part of the notification is formal. Colonel Ballhas left India nominally on leave, but will not return.

RAJAH DEO NARAIN SINGH ON THE BUDGET.—At the meeting of the Viceregal Council, on the 22nd April, after Mr. Laing had presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Act X. of 1860 (to amend Act VII. of 1859, to alter the duties of customs on goods imported or exported by sea), with a similar motion as to its passing, Rajah Deo Narain Singh observed that he gladly availed himself of the opportunity now offered to express his admiration of the clear financial statement made by Mr. Laing on the previous Wednesday, which statement had shown such an increase of revenue, and led to such advantages in the shape of remission of taxation, as the repeal of the two per cent. Income-tax, the Licence-tax, and the reduction of the Import-duties. The two per cent. Income-tax had pressed very heavily on incomes of Rs. 200 per annum, and the Licence-tax had been most oppressive to small artisans and traders, and their hearts had been cheered by its removal. Although the Income-tax had been only enacted for five years, the people had always suspected that it would be permanent, as had been the case with the same tax in England. The partial repeal, however, lately made would remove the surmises and make the people devoted and loyal. It was true that the Income-tax had been introduced at a season of financial difficulty to enable the Government to meet expenses brought about by the mutiny and other contingencies; but the people at large had never thought this, and the statement had been looked upon as a mere excuse for getting money. The present repeal, however, would show the people that it was not so, and that the Government had not merely imposed the tax to screw money out of the people. The honourable speaker here passed a high encomium on Mr. Laing for his exertions in such a good cause, even when suffering from illness; and concluded by stating that India and her people owed him a great debt of gratitude. The native members of that council, he said, ought to feel especially grateful to Mr. Laing, for the fact of such events having taken place while they had the honour to occupy seats in the Council had raised them considerably in the credit and estimation of their countrymen.

LAHORE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The second annual examination of the Lahore Medical College was held on the 17th April. Dr. Scriven, the Principal, stated in his address that there were seven students in the English and forty-seven in the Hindustani class during the year. Mr. Forsyth, the Commissioner, addressed the many natives present in English, and Captain Hall, the deputy, in Hindustani, congratulating the native gentry on the progress of medical science in the Punjab. Thus far the College seems to have been a success. It is remarkable how, in every province of India, caste offers no obstacle to colleges which require the students to dissect the human body, as an indispensable part of their training. In Bengal the native doctors make comparatively large incomes by private practice.

THE MUTLAH ASSOCIATION have issued their third report. They complain that Government will not clear their own lots of jungle which makes the settlement unhealthy, and will not allow the landowners to acquire the fee-simple of their estate, in spite of Lord Canning's resolution on the subject, which, the Board of Revenue says, is not applicable to building town-lots. They approve of Mr. Bolden's plan for raising water from the Hooghly at Chitpore, conducting it through a pipe to Sealdah, and thence in an open channel along the line of railway to Mutlah. At a capital charge of Rs. 4,39,156, and a working cost of Rs. 48,000 per annum, Mr. Bolden would thus supply the town. "With the Mutlah developed," he expects a revenue of nearly 9 per cent. on 5 lakhs, the European residents being estimated at 1,000 in 250 houses, and the natives at 20,000. Mr. Bolden has also projected a southern extension of the Calcutta and Mutlah Railway, which would join the main line at Sonapore, and terminate at Bistopore, traversing about twenty-two miles of a most populous and rich district. Bistopore is only about fifteen miles distant from Culpee, and should it ever become desirable to establish wet docks at a convenient point on the lower portion of the River Hooghly, the proposed extension could easily be continued, so that the line would connect the capital with the two largest ports of Bengal. The line should connect Diamond Harbour with Calcutta, and thus save both mails and passengers a day in the Hooghly.

THE AMENDED CUSTOMS ACT passed into law on the 23rd April, in accordance with Mr. Laing's Financial Statement, fixes the following rates of duty. Under Schedule A the following are free—Bullion and coin, Precious stones and pearls, grain and pulse, horses and other living animals; ice, coal, coke, bricks, chalk, and stones; cotton wool, wool, flax hemp, jute, hides and skins, raw, books, paper, maps, prints, music, and works of art; seeds when imported by any public society for gratuitous distribution; agricultural implements, machinery of all kinds. The collector of customs, subject to the general orders of the Government of India, shall decide what articles come within the definition of machinery, and such decision shall be final in law. Military and other regulation uniforms and accoutrements, when imported for private use by persons in the public service, and guano and manures of all kinds, are free. The rates of import duty are on porter, ale, beer, cider, and other similar fermented liquors, two annas the imperial gallon; wines and liquors, two rupees the imperial gallon; except light wines of value not exceeding 12 rupees per dozen, which shall pay 1 rupee the imperial gallon; spirits, 3 rupees the imperial gallon. The duty will be rateably increased as the strength exceeds London proof. Bottles are free. Tobacco unmanufactured and tobacco manufactured, 20 per cent. ad valorem. Piece goods, 5 per cent. ad valorem. Twist, 3½ per cent. ad valorem. All articles not included in the above enumeration, 10 per cent. ad valorem. Under schedule B. the export of the following articles is free, bullion and coin; precious stones and pearls; horses and other living animals, sugar and rum, spirits, tobacco and all preparations thereof; tea, coffee, raw silk, and silk chussum; cotton wool, wool, flax, hemp, jute, hides and skins, raw; books, maps, prints, and works of art; Teak timber; coals, iron. The export duty is on the following articles, grain and pulse of all sorts, 2 annas the Indian maund; saltpetre, 2 rupees the Indian maund. Indigo, 3 rupees the Indian maund. Lac dye and shell lac, 4 per cent. ad valorem. All country articles not enumerated 3 per cent. ad valorem.

A FELON NAWAB.—The Lucknow correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says that the Nawab Ikram-ood-dowla and his servant have been fined respectively Rs. 40,000 and Rs. 10,000 for forging the name of Captain Hayes to documents said to have been written before the mutiny, and guaranteeing the nawab a large pension. The writer remarks, "The sentence is very severe, compared with others imposed previously on the nawab, for the same crime; but the authorities perhaps think that leniency has been thrown away. This, however, would not apply to a case of such old date as this. The unfortunate part of it is, that the natives look upon these heavy fines as merely a variety of our new system of tikkus, i.e., taxation." We see no severity, but a criminal leniency. If the nawab was guilty penal servitude should have been his fate.

KATMANDOO, 10th April, 1862.—Maharajah Jung Bahadur has returned from his sporting expedition into the Terai, ceded by the British to the Nepaul Government, for the services rendered during the mutiny by the Durbar troops. The Maharajah has not evidently given his time up entirely to pleasure; but during his tour in these newly-acquired districts has carefully examined the boundary, or that which struck him as affording the most marked features for demarcation between the Nepaul and British territories. Since his return to Katmandoo, the Maharajah has reassumed his ministerial office from his brother who held the post during his absence in the Terai; and on his resuming diplomatic relations with the British representative at Katmandoo, Jung lost no time in bringing to his notice the delay caused, and inconvenience arising therefrom, by the boundary between the Nepaul and British territories not being sufficiently marked; and he has asked that the question in dispute as to boundary may be settled without further procrastination. The Maharajah has suggested that the River Mohur, from its source to its junction with the Koreallee, and the River Raptree, so far as it tends in a westerly direction, and to where it bursts through the hills and makes a sudden bend to the south, form the main features of the line of demarcation between the two states; and that the same be continued by striking a line from this point on the Raptree in a north-westerly direction, until it touches the Koreallee, where it receives the waters of the Mohun. It is suggested by the Maharajah that this line will intersect the villages of Jumoh, Hurdoe, and Mathoora, and that they be therefore fixed upon as main features in the boundary. As this certainly appears to be the most judicious arrangement for fixing the boundary, supposing the villages named to be in the positions ascribed to them by Jung Bahadur, we imagine there can be no necessity for any delay taking place in marking out. From Mr. Saunders' report we imagined, however, that this had been already done, and that the line between the rivers Koreallee and Raptree was clearly defined by the jungle having been cleared and masonry pillars erected; and further more, that the same had been done from the point where the Mohur takes its rise, to the Sardah river below Bhurmdoe. If this has been done, it would be as well to advise the Maharajah of the fact, and to inform him that the boundary having been struck and clearly defined, no rectification can take place for the purpose of constituting the villages named by him as points of demarcation. It is clear that they must belong to the Government which claims the territory to the north or south, as the case may be, of the boundary line laid down.—Englishman.

SIMLA, April 16.—Neither business nor gaieties have yet commenced in earnest, although a good show of equestrians and pedestrians may be seen every evening on the mall. Few, however, too few, avail themselves of the early morn, and the varied aspects of the snowy range before and at sunrise; but amongst the few is to be seen the Commander-in-Chief, in plain clothes, enjoying a quiet ride without any attendant. His Excellency seems well disposed to put officers at their ease, in the matter of dress, during his sojourn here, as you will see by the following memorandum of the 7th instant, which is posted up in the station library "for the guidance of military residents at Simla." "Uniform is to be worn by military residents at Simla when visiting the Commander-in-Chief on duty, when dining at His Excellency's table, and at any evening entertainment at his house. On no other occasion, whether at balls, parties, or places of public assembly, does the Commander-in-Chief wish officers to wear uniform, whether His Excellency is present or not, unless particularly specified before hand." Our last fall of snow, an inch or two fell about midnight of the 26th March, had been preceded by a day of thunder, lightning, and rain, the thermometer indoors going down from fifty-four deg. to forty-eight deg. at eight A.M. During the month of January snow fell on several days; the deepest only five inches. In February light falls twice, with rain on four occasions and hail once, pretty heavy. In March snow twice, and two days some rain. This month, so far, has been fine, with one exception, a slight fall of hail on the afternoon of the 5th, followed at five P.M. by a heavy squall from the south, and rain for some hours after the wind had lulled. The approach of the squall was a spectacle worth a pilgrimage to witness. The lower margin of the deep dark mass of clouds was about the general level of our roads, leaving a distinct view of Subathoo and the low valleys between us for many minutes, during which no rain fell below, the clouds reserving their contents until broken by the high ranges bounding Simla on the south and south-west. The sight to new comers must have appeared marvellous, the kites, crows, and eagles avoiding the higher atmosphere, and whirling about with much outcry, a thousand feet or more below, as the storm approached. Winter here is not the gloomy season known at home; a bright sun and an Italian sky reign for days after each fall of snow or rain, and the roads are passable in a few hours, except in deeply shaded spots on the northern face of the mountain, where the snow thaws but slowly; even those patches do not deter our winter residents from a ride or walk. To-day the sky is slightly clouded, and horses and jhuppons seem nothing cared for. From my window I have seen at high noon more than fifty ladies and gentlemen walking about shopping and visiting. Thermometer in-doors 58 deg. The Hindostan and Thibet road, to which the Simla is as a carriage drive, or an undulating lawn, is at last to be completed. The works on this great undertaking commenced in July, 1850, were suspended in 1856, when financial difficulties rendered a stoppage necessary of all but works of absolute and immediate utility. Since then only a small establishment has been retained, to improve and keep the road in repair; but before operations were closed, the road was open for lines of carts which pass each other up and down, the termini being at Simla and Umballa. And north of Simla the road was made from six to ten feet wide, as far as Serahn, two short breaks excepted; the whole distance from Kalka being 116 miles. On this line there are fifteen excellent bungalows for travellers, and the maximum gradient is not more than five feet in 100, and this in but very few places. From Serahn, the summer residence of the Rajah of Bushahir and Kunawar, to Chini, the principal town of the latter district, is 58 miles by the present or old road; and from thence to Shipki, on the Chinese frontier, 38 miles. A branch road from Kotgurb, constructed on the same principle as to gradients as the main line, will run through Kooloo for the convenience of visitors to Leh, in Ladakh, en route to Kashmeer. An iron suspension bridge will span the Sutlege at Wangto, but as the materials will not be ready for some time, a sangha or wooden bridge will be put up as a temporary arrangement. Several years ago a partial survey was made for a line of road from Simla to Mussoorie, but the project was dropped, for the same reason that led to the works on our great road being suspended. Notwithstanding the inconveniences of the present rough mountain tracts, and the paucity of bungalows between the elder Sanitaria, there is a frequent interchange of visitors during "the season."—Englishman.

NORTH EASTERN FRONTIER.—Some time back the Durjoon Rajah entered a claim against the British Government on account of the Doar Revenue for the past year. The agent resisted this claim, but under instructions from Government he has now admitted it, and has caused a payment of ten thousand rupees to be made to the Rajah on account of the revenue claimed. The arrangements which have been made by the officer commanding the 43rd regiment N.I. at Gowhaty for the suppression of the insurrection in the Nowgong district have met with the approval of General Showers, who has described them as being satisfactory in every respect. They may appear so to the General, but they are far from doing so to the uninitiated. The country is in fact in a most disaffected state, and scarcely a day passes but some act of insurrection is committed; it is but a day or two since a Sepoy of the Burpathan guard, who had strayed a short distance from his comrades, was seized and foully murdered by a party of Nagas who had been on the look-out for some similar chance of wreaking vengeance on the servants of that Government they look upon as the despoilers of their people and ruthless invaders of their country. Yet all is quiet in Gawalparah, and there appears to be no inclination on the part of the people to join the disaffected of the bordering States in their acts of rebellion. Reports appear in all the papers that quiet is fast being re-established in the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills, and that it is anticipated that the country will now speedily settle down. Do not believe it. "The snake is scotched, not killed," and will not fail to assume fresh vitality so soon as the heavy hand of the foe is removed from off him. Unless a body of troops be permanently stationed on some central spot, such as Shillong, which is in every way admirably adapted for the location of Europeans, from its delightful climate, sufficient to overawe the country; no sooner will the troops have moved into quarters than the whole of the Hill people will be in arms again. They can build a stockade in a few nights, and they know they are safe there for a time at any rate; and thence they issue, plunder and destroy, in every direction. There is little doubt now that the Bhootanese contrive with promises of assistance, and by one means or another, to keep up the inimical feeling of these people towards Government. There is said to be a Bhootanese force now on its march towards the Assam frontier. Whether true or not, it is difficult to say, but it is believed to be the case.—Englishman.

THE BLUNDERING AT SAUGOR.—The mismanagement of the relief of the Bengal troops by those of the Madras Presidency, in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, turns out to have been of Madras birth and preparation. It appears that the Madras Quartermaster-general's department informed the Quartermaster-general of the Bengal Army, that the relieving troops would reach their destinations at Saugor, on the 17th of March, and at Jubbulpore on the 17th of April. Orders were accordingly transmitted from Army Head-quarters, and duly received by Brigadier Travers, arranging for the march and destination of the relieved Bengal troops; but all was frustrated, and the confusion and inconvenience which we noticed, were created by the premature appearance, at Saugor and Jubbulpore, of the Madras troops, some weeks earlier than they were expected.

SOLDIERS' CLUB AT LUCKNOW.—The public-spirited community of Lucknow, at a large public meeting, have resolved to establish a Soldiers' Club. The public have already subscribed 6,500 rs. in answer to the appeal of the chaplain, the Rev. T. Moore. The Municipal Fund will give 5,000 rs. more, and Government is expected to assist. The talookdars subscribed a third of the amount.

UNNECESSARY LIBERALITY.—Questions having arisen as to whether officers of Government, members of the Council of the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, are, while absent from the appointments in attendance on the Council, entitled to the full emoluments of their offices, the Government of India, with a view of at once preventing any future discussion of the subject, has ruled that all officers, official members of the Council of the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, who may be summoned from their appointments in the Mofussil to attend the Council in Calcutta, are to be regarded as on deputation, during the period the Council is in Sessions; and are to draw the full salary of their permanent offices, and, in addition thereto, a deputation allowance at the rate of Rs. 7,400 a year, during the time they may be actually employed in their capacity as legislators. As there is no necessity for the appointment to the Council of the Lieut.-governor of Bengal, of any official member who may not be a resident in Calcutta, we (Englishman) cannot see the force of the decision which saddles the revenue with an unnecessary expenditure for the deputation allowance here granted, in addition to the extra salary which must of necessity be paid to the locum tenens of the member of Council summoned to Calcutta from his permanent post in the Mofussil. We never object to see men well and sufficiently paid for their services, but we do object to such arrangements as this, when an expenditure of public money is involved for which there is no earthly necessity.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE'S ALSATIA.—We are glad to find that the Government is alive to the necessity of exercising some supervision over the disorderly horde which has assembled from all quarters in that modern Alsatia established by the ex-King of Oude in Garden Reach. We have reason to believe that offences of a serious nature have taken place more than once in that locality within the last few months; one, at least of such a description as to have caused families residing in and about Garden Reach serious uneasiness. That these circumstances have been brought to the ears of Government there can be no doubt, and that the investiture of Major Herbert with magisterial powers within the domains of the ex-King at Garden Reach, has resulted therefrom. That Major Herbert's office may not be simply a nominal one, but that every facility may be afforded him for maintaining respect for the law among the lawless hordes of ruffians collected there, a sufficient police force has been detailed for employment under him; and an office establishment, for which an expenditure of two hundred rupees a month has been sanctioned, has been organised. Those who remember Garden Reach as it was a few short years ago, and revisit it now, cannot fail to be struck with its altered appearance. The pleasant villas and mansions which lined the river bank, and lent a home-like aspect to the place, have been mostly transformed into such dwellings as are met with only in purely native towns, where gaudy colouring, innumerable shabby lamps, and Zenana walls, disfigure nature. What was once the pride of Calcutta, is now, in truth, its disgrace; typical, perhaps, of the vicious tastes of the Eastern monarch, and so much the more unseemly in a civilised city.

LAHORE, April 26.—I am glad to be able to inform you that some strong evidence has been elicited from the Abkary Sherishtadar at Gwalior against the Rao Sahib, which, if proved to be true, will doom the miscreant to the gallows. The Sherishtadar states that while the Rao Sahib held Bithoor, he was detained there in prison, and that he heard from the guards set to watch him that on one occasion a gentleman and lady were brought into Bithoor for the orders of his excellency. The Rao directed that the former should be executed at once, and the brutal deed was accordingly carried out in his presence. The unfortunate lady was spared for some time, but eventually met the same end as her unhappy husband. He also states that on another occasion he heard that when the Futteghur fugitives were making for Cawnpore, the Rao Sahib despatched a gun to sink the boat they were in, but that his murderous intent was frustrated as the crew made their escape. The evidence of the Sherishtadar, though only hearsay, bears strong impression of truth, and it is to be hoped further inquiries will corroborate his statement. When the Rao was captured he pleaded that he had attempted to save the life of a lady who had sought his protection. The Sherishtadar's version, however, appears the most probable.—Delhi Gazette.

A FORAY ON THE DERAJAT FRONTIER.—We learn from the Derajat that some of our sowers stationed at the Turkmanee post have had a severe skirmish with a marauding party of the Sheoranees tribe, who descended from the hills in the vicinity in quest of plunder. It appears that our sowers had received some notice of the contemplated attack, and had consequently kept a good look out, and their horses ready saddled and accoutred; and that, consequently, when the Sheoranees advanced upon the post, though the night was dark, the signal of their approach was given, and the guard turning out, a hand-to-hand fight ensued, which lasted some minutes, our men behaving with great spirit and energy. Although none of the enemy were left behind or captured, it is certain that some severe wounds were inflicted upon the marauders, from the report of the villagers, who saw them retreating in a very discomfited condition.

FEROZE SHAH.—The latest about the notorious Feroze Shah is that he has adopted the honourable profession of dacoitee, which he is at present, or was, very lately pursuing, in conjunction with a noted dacoit in Meywar, with a gang of about a hundred followers.

REGIMENTS FOR EUROPE.—Two of H. M. regiments now in and near the Presidency—the 92nd Highlanders and the 43rd Light Infantry—the former in Fort William and the latter at Barraokpore, are under orders to return to England next cold season; and there is mention made of H. M. 35th, now at Agra, coming down to the Presidency; but whether to garrison Fort William for a year, and then embark for England, or to go home direct, is not stated; probably the former.

H. M. 92ND GORDON HIGHLANDERS, now garrisoning Fort William, have gone through their half-yearly inspection by Brigadier Harris, commanding at the Presidency during the absence of General Showers, to the complete satisfaction of the brigadier, who expressed himself much pleased with everything connected with that superb regiment. We are glad to be able to state that cholera has disappeared from the garrison, where its visitation this year has been comparatively very slight.

ANOTHER DELHI PRINCE IN THE DOCK.—The Delhi Gazette says that Kojhak Sooltan, one of the sons of Bahadoor Shah, ex-king of Delhi, a lad of twenty years, is now on trial for being a ring-leader in the rebellion. He was captured at Jeypore.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GODAVERY WORKS.—Captain F. T. Haig, Engineer of the Godavery Works, reports that at the first barrier the ancient is to be commenced, all the materials being ready. Six and a half miles of tramway round it are well forward. The foundations are cleared for the Seetumpett tunnel, where 2,800 labourers are employed. At the second barrier the seven miles of tramway are completed. The sub-engineer in charge speaks hopefully of the completion of the whole line by next freshes, but another outbreak of fever caused him the loss of 400 out of 1,000 coolies, and laid himself up twice with many of his best men. About 700 coolies, besides carpenters, are present. At the third barrier the earthwork of about three miles of tramway is finished. Little progress has been made at Baddrachellam.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—The examinations of the Madras University were recently closed, the address to the successful graduates being delivered by the Rev. Mr. Halley, member of the Senate and Principal of the Doveton College. Of six candidates for B.A. five were successful, and of two hundred and sixteen for matriculation some eighty passed. There were five successful Bachelors of Laws, of whom one was Mr. Maskell, a local police magistrate.

A "VISCOUNT" IN TROUBLE.—The Supreme Court of Madras was lately the scene of a "screaming farce." "The Viscount Edward Blois de Farcy" went from Calcutta to Madras in the Hydaspes, where he became acquainted with a Mr. Jones. In Madras, in payment of an account, he gave a tradesman a forged cheque on the Mercantile Bank for Rs. 617, receiving in return a balance of Rs. 264. He immediately left for Pondicherry, where the police arrested him. The jury found him guilty, and the Chief Justice reserved sentence till he should inquire into the truth of the extraordinary defence made by the "Viscount." In an address made up of quotations from Sir Walter Scott and "a celebrated author," the prisoner reviewed his past life. "At the age of twelve I was obliged to leave my native shores; an ungrateful people repudiated their lawful sovereign to pay their homage at the feet of an usurper whose only right consisted in a name caused by the first Napoleon, infamous by the many families rendered wretched by the loss of husbands, sons and brothers immolated at the shrine of his insane ambition. I followed my father into exile, and there saw him close the eyes of his dethroned sovereign—unfortunate martyr." After thirteen years' banishment from France he began his travels, visiting China and "her Majesty's Britannic Empire in the East." It was Jones, he asserts, who in the Hydaspes gave him the forged cheque. He was delivered up by the Pondicherry authorities because, he says, "I have too freely expressed my political opinions, and by opening my letters (a custom permitted by French authorities) the governor became acquainted that I was not the slave of Napoleon, but belonged to one of those secret societies existing with a view of restoring the legitimate dynasty of France." The Governor of Pondicherry denies that he is a Frenchman. India has of late seen too many swindlers of this class.

MR. MALTYBY.—The Cochin Courier reviews the services of Mr. F. Maltby as Resident of Travancore and Cochin, in which office he has now been succeeded by Mr. Fisher. To him is due the Victoria Canal, now nearly completed, for extending the backwater communication to the extreme limits of Travancore from Cochin, and so affording an outlet for the produce of South Travancore at the ports of Alleppey and Cochin. The Victoria Canal once completed, there will remain but a short distance to be compassed between it, and the terminus of the existing canal at Trivandrum, which presents unusual difficulties from the nature of the ground; and another small distance across the Laterite Hills intervening between Quilon and Anjengo. The former it is proposed to connect, in the first instance, by a tramway; and the latter by a tunnel some three miles in extent. The bridge at Shooranoor, now being constructed by the Cochin Government, on a magnificent scale to admit of the passage of the railway over it, is due entirely to Mr. Maltby. In the last two years the progress in these two native states has been proportionally as great as in British India. Mr. Maltby has well atoned for the errors of his predecessor.

PERMANENT SETTLEMENT OF MADRAS.—The question of a permanent settlement for Madras has been raised sooner than we expected, and arguments for the step have been adduced from a source where we had not looked for them. The Hon. S. Charloo and a deputation from the Madras Native Association lately waited on Sir W. Denison, on the subject of Mirasi right. This is the state of the case, as the Mirasidars put it in their own interest. The Mirasidars assert a right to the entire lands of the village subject to the payment of the Government demand on that portion of it which they cultivate. Government allow that the Mirasidar has a preferential right of cultivation, but claim as paramount landlord the right to alienate the waste lands which he refuses either to cultivate or pay the Government demand upon. Here is a description of the evils of the ryotwari settlement by those who suffer from it, a settlement defended in a publication so recent as Mr. Wheeler's Cotton Handbook. "We are willing to have the 'Kyamputtah' settlement; according to which, entire villages or shares thereof shall be assessed at the average revenue collected during the last ten years. This system will obviate the necessity of constant interference on the part of Government officers with the ryots, an interference which is a fruitful source of oppression and extortions. It will relieve Government from the necessity of keeping up the small tanks in repair, so that what may be said to be lost in the abandonment of the revenue that may possibly be realised from the waste, which in fact is no sacrifice at all, will be gained by the employment of reduced revenue and maramut establishments at a great cost to the State." Sir W. Denison replied that he knew nothing about the question, but would give it a patient and impartial consideration. The Madras Examiner recommends Sir W. Denison to appoint a committee to report on the vexed question of the land tenures of the Mirasidars who have lately appealed to Government. As an illustration of the difficulty of the subject, the writer says, "It is not long since two native landholders brought a dispute before a Court, which was found so difficult to decide that the judge adopted the novel expedient of dividing the estate between them. With such a decision, of course, neither was satisfied, and the matter was ultimately referred to the Privy Council, where, if a juster judgment were not given, it was at least more sensible." The writer reiterates what we have so often said. "Landholders who have a hereditary love for a particular piece of waste, but who have not the means of cultivating it, may choose rather to let it lie waste than to sell it to another. This is done to a very large extent, and Government must, soon or late, put a stop to it. If men, calling themselves owners, choose to let land lie idle while others are anxious to work it, they must expect to meet with resistance. Every additional acre brought under the plough, or improved for pasturage, is an increment to the material wealth of the country, which it is the business of Government to extend as much as possible."

PETROLEUM WELLS IN BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times thus described the Petroleum Wells which abound in Burmah:—"Some of these wells are of great depth. One which we personally measured, was 196 feet deep. The oil reposing at the bottom was of a green olive colour. At the bottom, was a layer of water and the oil floating like a mirror on the top. The well was worked by two men. One man attended to fastening the earthen pots to the rope, which was changed as each chattie came up filled. The other man hauled the rope over a wheel down an inclined plain. These pots of oil were then conveyed to the river some four miles distant, on common carts spread at the bottom with buffalo skins. Our petroleum trade is likely to revive again very shortly. We shall be exporting it before long to Calcutta and Madras, for the manufacture of gas for those cities. To make our own paraffine candles in Rangoon would be a very nice branch of business. We could then compete with the Cossipore Candle factory in Calcutta. A great deal of fatty matter is now wasted, which could be turned into soap. From the capital could be procured the soap sand of Burmah, which is rich in alkaline matter, and this would make splendid coarse soap, in combination with various sorts of fatty substances." As a manufacturing country India has a great future.

HYDRABAD, April 10.—I told you in my letter of the 5th April, that the Nizam had ordered the execution of all the murderers lying under sentence of death in his prisons. Five executions have taken place in consequence; three men and two women. There is a suspension of other executions for the present, for no assignable reason; as I believe it is the intention to execute six more. The Nizam's prisons contain a vast number of felons of all descriptions, too many to be executed en masse. I observe in your paper of the 4th inst., that the Indian Government has decided upon peopling the Andamans. The Nizam might contribute to assist this object with some effect, if it were permitted to transport its felons wholly, as it now is partially, to the Andamans; I believe its prisons could immediately supply more than a hundred persons. A gentleman from Bombay, named Mirzah Ali Mahomed Khan, is now here. He was presented with a title of nobility by the Nizam a few days ago, which, I hope, is the precursor to his being established in some suitable office at this court, and becoming a resident of this place, as his ancestors were; his uncle Meer Abdool Luteef Khan, being the ambassador of the Nizam to the Bengal Government in the administration of Lord Wellesley. Mirza Ali Mahomed Khan is a gentlemanly man, and bears a high character amongst the natives here, as, indeed, he does amongst the English at Bombay. He is a man of liberal opinions, and possessed of views and opinions which adapt him to be efficient in the discharge of any official duties which may be entrusted to him. He is consul at Bombay to the Turkish Government, and agent there for the Nizam's affairs, having two ships belonging to his highness for the conveyance of pilgrims to Mecca under his charge. I shall be glad to see him established at Hyderabad. His opinions and sentiments, partaking of the European character, would be instructive to his countrymen; and contribute in some degree, as all examples of this sort must do to improve them. We have, also, another foreigner here, an Egyptian, Abdoolah, who, I hear, has more of the characteristics of the European than the Asiatic. He is but a late arrival, and not so well known, to me at least, by reputation, as the other gentleman I have named. The minister has given him a command of a hundred horse, and I hail the circumstance with delight. The introduction of Mirza Ali Mahomed Khan and Abdoolah bring new elements to the country, which it very much requires. A letter from the Governor-general to the Nizam has arrived here, and will be officially presented by the resident in a few days. It contains assurances from Her Majesty, that the succession to the Musnud will go in his family by Mahomedan law. It is well meant; I have heard no opinions on the subject, but it will be hard if fault be not found with it. I venture to say that the constant mention, direct as in the case of the Star of India, or by allusion as now, to his highness' death, will be considered ominous of evil. It is difficult to tread on a floor strewn with eggs. The Nizam though sometimes gauche has been friendly and accommodating to the English Government. He has always attended to the requisitions of the Resident, and could he be better taught might take his counsel.—Englishman.

ARRACAN POLICE FORCE.—The Chief Commissioner of British Burmah has sent Captain Duncan to Arracan, for the purpose of organising a provincial constabulary force, to replace the Arracan Battalion, ordered by government to be disbanded; for which operation the Commissioner of Arracan is to adopt the necessary measures. The estimated cost of the maintenance of the new police force is a little over two lacs of rupees annually; which expenditure the supreme government has sanctioned, pending the trial as to whether such a force as this sum will pay and support, is adequate to meet the requirements of the province, or not; upon which point no very accurate opinion could be arrived at by Mr. Temple and Colonel Bruce, owing to their limited acquaintance with Arracan. Government has, very considerably, expressed its wish that, as many men of the Arracan Battalion as may be found suitable for employment in the new provincial constabulary force, should get admission into it. The Governor-general has expressed his satisfaction with the intention of the Chief Commissioner, to take measures for the re-arrangement of the establishments which hitherto have conducted the combined police and revenue duties in Arracan, and a hope that the Chief Commissioner's expectation of a financial saving, coupled with increased efficiency and simplicity of administration, would be realised.

NARAKAL ROADS.—On the 16th April, a visit was paid by Mr. Maltby, and Mr. Fisher the new resident, accompanied by the Dewan, to the new port of Narakal, and we hear that Mr. Fisher expressed his surprise at the amazing calmness of the sea. It was first intended to erect a wooden beacon to guide ships to the anchorage; but in consequence of the heavy outlay which the structure would entail, it has been resolved to substitute a flagstaff for the present, and defer the erection of more permanent works until the port begins to attract shipping. Should the trade keep pace with the expectations now entertained, his highness the Rajah's Government contemplate establishing a substantial lighthouse there. The advantages of the Narakal roads can only be fully appreciated when the surrounding sea is acted upon by the violence of the S. W. monsoon; and we would earnestly call upon those who are interested in promoting the prosperity of the port, not to defer any improvements that would tend to facilitate shipping operations. As the place now stands, great inconvenience will be experienced to transport goods from the termination of the present canal to the sea beach; and greater still, in loading the boats, in the absence of a wharf to ship from. To obviate these difficulties, we would strongly recommend that one of the existing canals should be improved so as to admit of the traffic of large cargo boats, and extended to a convenient distance from the sea. A temporary wharf or jetty will also be requisite for receiving and shipping merchandize. When the S. W. monsoon sets in earlier than usual, which is often the case, the shipments of the season are often interrupted at Cochin, by the bar becoming impassable; and merchants have been compelled hitherto to send the ships which have not completed their cargoes to Allepey, which has subjected them to great detention, inconvenience, and expense. Now, we have no doubt Narakal would be readily availed of, if the needful facilities for shipments existed; and we trust our suggestions will therefore meet with prompt consideration. We understand that inquiries have also been made by mercantile offices in Cochin as to the capabilities of Narakal, and the means which exist for loading ships there; which proves that there is every disposition on the part of shippers to avail themselves of this auxiliary to the port of Cochin.—Cochin Courier.

LEPROSY IN COCHIN.—In the Madras Medical Journal Mr. Day writes on the medical topography of Cochin. Leprosy is there so common that in 1728 the Dutch erected a lazaretto. Of late no Europeans have suffered from the disease, but East Indians and natives of all castes, ages, and both sexes are liable to it. The leper, as long as he can procure money, is not expelled from the society of his fellow-creatures, who live in the same house, partake of the same food, and even intermarry with him. But if money fails him, he is driven forth to wander about, subsisting on charity, until death mercifully relieves his sufferings. There appears no age at which leprosy may not commence, from infants in arms to fifty or even sixty years of age. It is distinctly traceable in some families by hereditary transmission: it not uncommonly passes over one generation. Mr. Day, after a summary of all diseases, draws this conclusion. That the moral state of the heathen (at least) is lamentable. The marriage tie amongst the majority is almost absent and reformation loudly called for. Diseased beggars seem so common in Southern India, unlike the North, where they are seldom met with, that the writer recommends the appointment of travelling surgeons in some of our larger districts, having from four to six fixed stations, widely separated, in each of which they were to pass from two to three months every year, their advent would be hailed as a boon by all. A vaccinator might be stationed at each of these places, and perhaps the missionaries might be invited to erect a school and church under a native pastor.

BOMBAY.

THE GOVERNOR'S DURBAR.

His Excellency Sir Henry Bartle Edward Frere, K.C.B., Governor of Bombay, held a Durbar in the Town-hall, at half-past four o'clock, on the 1st of May, which was attended by the wealthy and influential members of all classes and sections of the native community. In the large hall were arranged chairs for the visitors in parallel rows right and left, facing the statue of Monstuart Elphinstone. The visitors commenced to arrive at four o'clock, and were accommodated with seats, to which they were directed by the Oriental translator and the officers of his department, who were in attendance in the Durbar room. The assembly was very large, comprising almost all the native justices of the peace, wukeels of some native chiefs, native gentlemen holding office under her Majesty's Government, all the native officers of garrison regiments, merchants, bankers, lawyers, doctors, &c. There were besides a few European gentlemen present. His excellency arrived shortly after five o'clock, and was received by the members of council and secretaries of Government, and was conducted into the room adjoining the Durbar room, where he stood in the centre facing the door. Immediately afterwards the presentations commenced, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy taking the lead, followed by the Hon. Juggonath Sunkersett, the Hon. Rustumjee Jamsetjee, and Mr. Sorabjee Jamsetjee, who, after the exchange of courtesies, remained standing in the room by the side of his Excellency. The other gentlemen then came up in a line, and each of them was presented individually to the Governor by Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy and the Hon. Juggonath Sunkersett; the native military officers were presented by the commanding officers of their respective regiments. They all passed out by the other door and resumed their seats in the large hall. After the ceremony of presentation was concluded, his Excellency proceeded into the large hall, accompanied by the members of council, the secretaries to Government, and his personal staff, and took his seat at the head of the assembled visitors on a sofa placed on a platform beneath the statue of Monstuart Elphinstone. When all had taken their seats, SIR JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHAY rose and addressing his Excellency, said:—With your Excellency's kind permission I will now read a short address of congratulation on your appointment to the Governorship of this presidency, which has been signed by a large number of the native inhabitants of Bombay. Your Excellency's presence amongst us in the high position which you now hold, is regarded with feelings of the highest gratification by all classes of the community, and by none in a higher degree than the native portion of the society of Bombay, who have been so long acquainted with you that they cannot but look upon you as an old and kind friend coming amongst them again; and this must be their excuse for departing from the usual custom in the presentation of the address which I will now read.

"To the Hon. Sir H. B. E. Frere, K.C.B., &c.

"Hon. Sir,—We, the undersigned, native inhabitants of Bombay, beg to offer you our hearty congratulations on your appointment to the Governorship of this presidency, and we cordially and sincerely welcome you to the scene of your future labours.

"Your long and intimate acquaintance with the people over whom you are now called upon to rule, and the characteristics of your past public career, justify us in entertaining the most hopeful expectations from your government of the capital of Western India, and this rapidly increasing presidency.

We need not detain you by entering on a review of the various grades of the public service through which you have passed with such distinction. Suffice it to say that, in all the important situations which you have held, you have uniformly directed your best efforts to the amelioration of the condition of the various races with whom you have come in contact, and that your eminent public services have been appreciated and recognised by our sovereign.

Individually, therefore, and as a community, we hail your appointment to the highest office in this Presidency.

We feel sure that in you we shall have a just and wise ruler; that, under your administration, our interest will be promoted, and that, from an impartial and generous policy which, we doubt not, will be firmly maintained in your future public career, the most beneficial results will follow.

Fervently hoping that you may have much health to conduct the labours of your administration of this presidency, we respectfully subscribe ourselves,—Hon. Sir, Your most faithful servants.

In reply, his Excellency thanked Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy and the other native gentlemen very sincerely for the terms of cordiality with which they had welcomed him. His Excellency said that he felt the greatest interest and anxiety for the welfare of this country. He was desirous of doing good to all classes of the community. He ardently hoped to carry out in good faith the trust confided in him by her Majesty the Queen and to be useful to all of us. He trusted that he expressed the feelings of his colleagues when he said that he would endeavour to carry on the administration of the affairs of this presidency with impartiality and in a manner conducive to the good of her Majesty's subjects. His Excellency expressed his heartfelt wishes for the welfare of this country, and begged to be allowed once more to thank the gentlemen for the cordiality with which they had welcomed him.

Nose-gays and otto of roses were then distributed, and the assembly dispersed.

The governor's band, which was stationed in the verandah adjoining the large hall, played lively tunes during the ceremony of the presentations.

ADDRESS TO SIR G. CLERK.

The following address was presented to Sir George Clerk on his departure from Bombay by the Chamber of Commerce:—

To his Excellency Sir George Russel Clerk, K.C.B., K.S.I., &c., &c.

SIR,—The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce has desired me, on the occasion of your retirement from the Governorship of this presidency, to express to your Excellency how deeply sensible the chamber is of your high personal worth and distinguished public service.

While regarding as an irreparable loss to India your resignation of an office you have filled with such honour to yourself and such advantage to the people you have governed, the chamber is glad to be able to congratulate your Excellency on the satisfactory completion of that great work of financial retrenchment, which, on assuming office, you rightly considered to be the first necessity of the State, and to the accomplishment of which your energetic and unsparing labours have largely contributed.

The chamber cordially thanks your Excellency for the personal frankness and urbanity of your bearing towards its members, for the marked consideration always shown to its representatives by the Government over which you have presided, and more recently for the appointment of one of its influential members to a seat in the Local Legislative Assembly. But the warmest acknowledgments of the chamber are due to you you have given to encouragement and support for the strong private enterprise, resulting in the favourable development, within the last two years, of several large undertakings of vast public utility.

It is mainly to your Excellency's exertions that the transfer of North Canara to this presidency has been effected, which by opening the port of Sedasheghur will, it is confidently anticipated, prove fruitful of the best advantages to the cotton trade of India.

It was with sincere regret, therefore, that the chamber learnt that your Excellency's health had been effected by the cares and responsibilities of your exalted position; but they hope your return to your native land will completely restore you, and that you may yet be able for many years to give the Government of India the benefit of your large experience and prudent counsels.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

(Signed) J. N. FLEMING,

Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce.
Bombay, 22nd April, 1862.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S REPLY.

PARELL, April 23.

SIR,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of Wednesday's date, conveying the expression of the sentiments of the Chamber of Commerce on my departure.

It must be gratifying to any public man to find that his conduct has been approved by the most influential members of the large community of Bombay. It is particularly so to me, because to my regret I have been here during so short a period as to be only sensible how much I leave unfinished. But the times have been difficult for us, or the Government would have done more. There certainly has been every other incentive to exertion, since, on your part, whatever the times may be, there never is any relaxation in that energy and enterprise, the success of which has steadily raised Bombay to rank among the most important commercial capitals in the world.

It requires only the application of some of the energy which is so conspicuous, and of the capital which is so abundant, here, to attain the advantages anticipated by the Chamber of Commerce from the transfer of North Canara to this presidency.

I am deeply sensible of the feeling which has prompted your good wishes for my health. Of this kindness, as well as of all other circumstances of our connection, I shall ever retain a most pleasing and grateful recollection.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, (Signed) GEORGE CLERK.

To J. N. Fleming, Esq.,

Chairman, Chamber of Commerce, Bombay.

FIRST CONVOCATION OF THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.

The first convocation of the University of Bombay was held in the Town-hall on the 28th April, at five o'clock. The room was arranged in the following manner:—Beneath the statue of Mount-stuart Elphinstone at the south end was placed the Chancellor's chair, which served as the keystone to a double semi-circular room of seats, the inner of which were reserved for the Fellows of the University, and the outer appropriated to the University Examiners who were not members of the Senate, and to the Professors of the Recognised Colleges. At the end of the outer row, remote from the Chancellor's chair and on his right hand, were vacant seats to be occupied by the Graduates of Arts after their admission to their degrees. And on the Chancellor's left similar seats were reserved for the Graduates in Medicine. In front of the Chancellor's chair was placed a small table covered with scarlet cloth on which were set the Certificates of the Degrees to be conferred, the Registrar's seat being conveniently near this table, opposite to and on the right of the Chancellor. Visitors were accommodated with sofas and chairs covering two large oblongs which stretched from the University semi-circle to the north end, and which were divided by a path for the University procession. The room was carpeted from end to end. After his Excellency Sir H. B. E. Frere, K.C.B., Chancellor of the University, and Senate were seated, Dr. Harkness, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts, rising supplicated the first Grace of the Senate, as follows:

"Mr. Chancellor.—On behalf of Mahadev Govind Ranuday, of Elphinstone College, I submit the certificate required by this University, and move that the Senate do pass a Grace for his admission to the Degree of Bachelor of Arts."

Whereupon the Chancellor put the question:—"Does it please you that this Grace be passed?" and the Senate assenting, the Chancellor said: "This Grace is past."

The same words, mutatis mutandis, were used successively on behalf of the other candidates for the Degree of Bachelor of Arts and of the candidates for the Degree of Licentiate of Medicine, the Dean in Medicine, Dr. Peat, performing the office for the candidates of his faculty.

When all the graces were passed, the candidates were successively admitted thus:—The Dean of Faculty, taking the first candidate in Arts by the right hand, addressed the Chancellor in the following words:—

"Mr. Chancellor,—I present to you Mahadev Govind Ranuday, of Elphinstone College, who has been examined and found qualified for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, to which I pray he may be admitted." And the Chancellor answered:—

"By the authority given me as Chancellor of this University, I admit you, Mahadev Govind Ranuday, of Elphinstone College, to the degree of Bachelor of Arts; and I charge you that ever in your life and conversation you show yourself worthy of the same." The Chancellor at the same time presented the graduate with the certificate of the degree conferred on him. When all the degrees were conferred, the University Registrar, rising, said: "I declare the following degrees this day conferred:—

Mahadev Govind Ranuday, Bachelor of Arts.
Ramerishna Gopal Bhandarkar, Bachelor of Arts.

Bala Mungesh Waglay, Bachelor of Arts.
Warman Abajee Modak, Bachelor of Arts.
Burjorjee Beramjee, Licentiate of Medicine.
Kaikhosru Rustomjee Vicajee, Licentiate of Medicine.

Shantaram Vithul, Licentiate of Medicine.
Nusserwanjee Jehangir Lamna, Licentiate of Medicine.

The Chancellor then delivered a very able and eloquent address, which was received with great applause. When this had subsided, he again rose and said "I dissolve this Convocation."

RETIREMENT OF DR. HARKNESS.

Elphinstone Institution, Bombay,
22nd April, 1862.

To John Harkness, Esq., Principal of the Elphinstone College, Bombay.

SIR,—In accordance with "Resolution 2" on the other leaf of this, I have the honour to forward to you the annexed copy of the proceedings of a meeting of the trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, held on the 21st instant.—I have the honour, &c.,

HENRY J. CARTER, Secretary.

Copy of the Proceedings of a Meeting of the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, held on Monday, the 21st April, 1862.

The trustees of the Elphinstone Funds having met to record their appreciation of Dr. Harkness's services during the time he has been connected with the Educational Department in Bombay, passed the following resolutions:—

Resolution I. That the trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, feeling under great obligation to Dr. Harkness for the services he has rendered to education for upwards of the last twenty-five years, in which he has been Professor and Principal of the Elphinstone Institution and College, and latterly, of the college alone, do hereby record their entire satisfaction with the course he has pursued; their admiration of the effect his exertions in behalf of education have produced; their consciousness of his deep and valuable learning, especially in the vernacular languages of this presidency; his honour and his integrity, and finally, their great regret that the state of his health should compel him to leave that sphere of usefulness in which he has obtained for himself the lasting gratitude of the natives of Western India.

Resolution II. That a copy of these proceedings be communicated to Dr. Harkness.

JUGONNATH SUNKERSETT, BOMANJEE HOHMUSJEE, BHAUOO DAJEE,

} Trustees.

HENRY J. CARTER, Secretary.

Elphinstone College, Bombay, April 24, 1862.

To H. J. Carter, Esq., Secretary to the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds.

SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 18, dated the 22nd inst., forwarding a copy of the resolution passed at a meeting of the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, held on Monday the 21st inst.

2. The partiality of friendship has caused my merits to be greatly overrated, I fear. At least I know that the results have fallen short of my expectation; still it must be owned that it is very gratifying to know that these gentlemen entertain such a favourable opinion of the service I have rendered to education in this presidency—an opinion all the more valuable, because from the position which some of them have occupied as members of the Elphinstone College Council, members of the Board of Education, and Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, they have been officially cognisant of my conduct during the whole of the time I have been in Bombay. It is, therefore, a source of no small satisfaction to be assured, on the eve of my departure, that it has been deemed not unworthy of their commendation; the commendation of those best acquainted with the circumstances—gentlemen, who have taken the lead in every scheme calculated to promote the cause of native education, and who have not only devoted their energies, but have, also, freely contributed their money to further its advancement.

3. I beg you will be kind enough to convey to these gentlemen my best thanks for the testimony of their approval of my conduct in connection with the institution, of the funds of which they are the trustees, for their generous support and encouragement during the whole period of my service, and for their kind expression of regret at my departure.—I have, &c.,

JOHN HARKNESS, Principal.

The following is the reply from Government to the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds:—

From M. J. SHAW STEWART, Esq., Acting Secretary to Government, Bombay. To HENRY J. CARTER, Esq., Secretary to the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, Educational Department.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 22, dated the 25th ultimo, submitting a copy of the proceedings of a meeting of the Trustees of the Elphinstone Funds, held for the purpose of recording their appreciation of Dr. Harkness's services, and in reply to inform you that his Excellency the Governor in Council has received with great pleasure this testimony of the high service of Dr. Harkness, who is now about to retire from the appointment of Principal of the Elphinstone College, after a period of twenty-five years, spent in the service of this Government. I have &c.,

M. J. SHAW STEWART,

Acting Secretary to Government.

Bombay Castle, 1st May, 1862.

The pupils of Dr. John Harkness met together on Saturday, the 10th May, in the hall of the Elphinstone Institution, for the purpose of presenting an address and testimonial to the worthy Principal on his retirement from office after a long service of twenty seven years. Besides the students and ex-students of the institution, there were a few friends of Dr. Harkness, among whom was observed Drs. M. Stowell, R. T. Reid, R. Haines, and G. Birdwood; J. F. Hore, Sorabjee Jamsetjee, Dhunjeebhoy Framjee, W. H. Smith, A. B. Boswell, Esq., &c., &c.

Dr. Bhawoo Dajee, one of the leading ex-students, read the address, and presented Dr. Harkness with a purse containing upwards of 10,000 rupees, at the same time requesting him to sit for a bust to be placed in the Framjee Cowasjee Institution, and for a photographic negative. Dr. Harkness returned thanks in appropriate language, and acceded to the wishes of the meeting.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADMIRALTY COURT AT ADEN.—Since Aden has become a port of somewhat general resort by ships of various nations, the absence of an Admiralty Court has been very much felt. With the view of providing for this deficiency the Home Government has appointed the resident at Aden President of a Vice Admiralty Court at that place. The resident and his assistants have likewise been constituted Justices of the Peace, by commission from the Supreme Court of Bombay.

THE GOVERNOR'S LEVEE.—His Excellency Sir Henry Bartle Edward Frere, K.C.B., the Governor of Bombay, held his first Levee on the 28th of April, at half-past ten o'clock, A.M., at the Town-hall. His Excellency arrived shortly before the time fixed for the Levee, and was received by the members of the council and principal secretaries of Government, and was conducted into the Durbar room. There was a very large attendance at the Levee of gentlemen, consisting of members of council, judges, clergy, secretaries of Government, military and naval officers, and representatives of the various public departments, as well as a large number of merchants and other gentlemen. The visitors collected in the large hall until the time had arrived for them to be introduced to his Excellency. At half-past ten o'clock precisely the presentation commenced, when each gentleman was presented individually to the Governor, when they passed out. The whole of the ceremony occupied about an hour. His Excellency's band was in attendance in the verandah, and played several pieces of music during the time occupied in the presentation. Shortly after the termination of the Levee his Excellency left for Parell.

SUBMARINE CABLE.—Among the recent operations of the Telegraph to India Company for the purpose of recovering the old cable from the Red Sea, was the raising about five miles of it from the reefs round the island of Jubal. After having been submitted to the action of the waves over the coral rocks for three years, it was found to be but little altered in outward appearance. In some places the wire was slightly corroded, but still the black coating of mud and oxide with which it was covered so closely resembled tar that it seemed at the first glance impossible to believe it had been down more than a few months. A mass of beautiful zoophytes of every tint and colour, had cased round the whole cable to the thickness of several inches.

VENBAJEE BHOSLAY, the adopted son of the last Rajah of Suttia, was convicted of conspiring in 1857 to overthrow British authority in India, and was lodged as a state prisoner on Butcher's Island, where he has been detained for the last four years. But the climate of the island, according to the Englishman, does not agree with him, and the Bombay Government have sanctioned his removal to Ahmednugger, where he is to reside with his family.

ETQUETTE.—Bombay has been for some time agitated by the great "shoe question." Alone of all her Majesty's Indian subjects the Parsees say they are prohibited by their religion from uncovering either head or feet. On several occasions they have not been allowed to enter the public offices with their shoes on. As they must show some sign of respect they are recommended to put off the glazed cover of chintz, which heavily oppresses them, and retain on their heads only the skull cap which they wear under it.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE BELOOCHEES.—All the Kurnachee world turned out on the evening of the 22nd April to witness the presentation of colours to this gallant regiment. On the troops being drawn up in quarter distance columns, the new colours were presented by Major-general Cunyngame, with a most spirit-stirring address. The general recounted in glowing terms the various services which the Beloochee regiment have rendered to her Majesty, and concluded by expressing his conviction that a corps which had served with such distinction under such men as Lord Clyde and Sir Archibald Wilson needed no encomium from him. He then made a short address in Hindustani, and after thanks had been returned by Captain Beville, the troops on the ground marched past in quick time. This terminated the proceedings. The whole passed off without a single accident, and to the satisfaction of every one present.

SATTARA.—Instructions have been recently received by the Bombay Government from her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India to bring Sattara, which has hitherto been a "non-regulation" province, under the regulations, and that a Bill for this purpose will be brought before the local Legislative Council at its next session. Sattara will then have the full benefit of the enactments in operation in the other parts of this presidency, the whole of which will thus be under the direct protection and influence of fixed laws.

THE BASSEIN SUGAR WORKS have been sold at auction by Messrs. Crawford and Co., according to announcement, and realized the sum of Rs. 1,55,000. The purchaser, we understand, is Mr. Cursetjee Merwanjee Patell.

INCREASE OF INTEMPERANCE AT POONA.—The Bombay Guardian draws attention to a fact illustrating the Friend of India's article on the Abkaree department. At the auction of the monopoly of selling liquor in the cantonment of Poona, the contractor offered 11,000 rupees instead of 8,500 rupees as last year, a rise of 30 per cent. How much demoralisation is this the index of? The writer remarks, "Is this a paternal Government? If so, its ideas of paternity seem to be taken from the example of Saturn, who devoured his children."

IRON ORE IN NIMAR.—Major Keatinge, of the Bombay Artillery, when political agent at Nimar, conceived the idea of utilising the numerous iron deposits situated there, and obtained a steam engine and rolling mill to roll into bars the lumps made by the native method. With the permission of the Secretary of State, he recently erected a small iron work at Burwai in Nimar, adding to the steam engine and rolling mill a blast furnace and forges, the blowing cylinders to be driven by a 15-horse power engine. Mr. Nils Mitander, a Swede, was selected as manager of the proposed works at Burwai. This first report shows that 410½ tons of ore have been raised at a total cost of Rs. 4.7-10 per ton, and a contractor has lately undertaken to raise it at Rs. 2-6-0 per ton. Isolated pieces of splendid ore have been found, and at a place, named by Major Keatinge, Mitanderpoor, at a depth of ten feet, a solid bed of ore was found. As yet, however, the experiment cannot be pronounced commercially profitable.

Pay Certificates.

Fort William, April 21.—The Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India having represented that much inconvenience is caused by officers proceeding on furlough to Europe unprovided with last pay certificates, H.E. the Gov. gen. of India in Council is pleased to lay down the following rules for the guidance of the officers of the Pay Department, and of officers proceeding home on furlough:—

1st. It is the duty of an officer before leaving India to obtain his last pay certificate; he should, therefore, at the time of applying for leave, address the Deputy Paymaster, in whose circle of payment he may be, with a request that his accounts may be adjusted, and at the port of embarkation he should apply at the Pay-office for a last pay certificate. In the event of his not being able from any cause to obtain this certificate, he should address the Military Accountant on the subject, and that officer will investigate the circumstances of the case, and submit a report thereon to the Military Finance Department for transmission to Government.

2nd. In cases in which officers return home "for residue of furl." the period remaining unexpired should be stated in their papers by the pay department.

3rd. The Right hon. the Sec. of State for India having observed, in his letter No. 497, dated the 31st December, 1861, paragraph 10, that "the final settlement of all pay and allowances issued to an officer prior to his quitting India, whether in advance or otherwise, is invariably left to the authorities in India," it will not be necessary for the officers of the Pay Department in future to call upon officers on furlough in England, who, on promotion, may apply to India for an adjustment of pay (for the period issued to them prior to their leaving this country), to furnish a certificate under the signature of the authorities at the India-office to the effect that no such adjustment has been made by them.

4th. This order is applicable to the three presidencies, and will have effect from this date.

Leave of Absence.

Head Quarters, Simla, April 14.—Memorandum.

The recent reduction of the establishment of field officers having necessitated a relaxation of the present rules for granting leave, the C. in C. is pleased to decide that when there are only two field officers with a regiment, one of them may apply for leave in India on private affairs, provided there will remain an old or competent captain to assist in conducting the duties of the command, and that there is no strong detachment from the corps requiring the command of a field officer.

2. When one of the three field officers of a battalion is on permanent staff employment, H.E. will take into his consideration any application for leave to England by one of the two remaining field officers, whenever there is a competent second in command present.

3. When such applications for leave are submitted under these circumstances, they should be accompanied by a surgeon's certificate that the remaining field officer and the senior captain are not likely to require leave on account of health, and a statement of the period of service with the regiment of the applicant and senior captain.

Intemperance.

Financial Dept., Fort William, April 21.—No. 62.

—Under orders contained in a despatch from the late Court of Directors, No. 31 of 1849, dated Dec. 18, it is prescribed that the medical certificates of unfitness, which is submitted by an applicant for superan. pension, should state that his incapacity for further serv. is not the result of his own imprudence or intemperance; but pensions have hitherto been granted in very many cases on medical certificates containing no such declaration.

A pension, however, having been recently refused on the ground that disqualification for service was the result of intemperance, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the re-publication, for general information, of the following extract from the despatch referred to:—

Para. 16.—"To enable us to decide upon the propriety of allowing the retirement upon pension of the unconvicted servants of Govt., it is desirable that we should be placed in possession of detailed information, regarding their several cases; the nature of the complaint, and whether or not it has been induced by irregular or intemperate habits are points on which it is especially necessary to afford us information."

17. "We beg this may be attended to in future." For the future pensions will in no case be granted to applicants whose incapacity for further service is the result of their own intemperance.

THE NEW INDIAN CONSTABULARY.

Resolution.—In the resolution, dated August 17, 1860, by which the Police Commission were appointed, the objects of their appointment were stated to be

(I.) To ascertain the numbers and cost of all police of every description then serving in each province throughout the British territories in India, paid from the general revenues.

(II.) To suggest any measures whereby expenditure might be economised, or efficiency increased in the existing police forces.

2. In partial fulfilment of the first object the reports noted in the margin* have been submitted to Government, giving returns of the numbers and cost of the police under the Governments of Bengal, Bombay, Madras, the Punjab, and the North-Western Provinces on May 1, 1861.

3. In fulfilment of the second object of their appointment the Police Commission submitted, in September, 1860, a report accompanied by a series of propositions which they recommended for adoption as the basis of a police system and of an organised constabulary. They explained in their report that this was the only manner in which it appeared to them that they could give effect to the second object of their appointment, as any alterations which they could propose would be based on the principles set forth in their propositions, and they added that the alteration which they would really propose was in fact this—"that the present police, civil and military, be abolished, and an organised constabulary substituted in all the provinces of India where such a system does not already exist." They expressed a confident opinion that this arrangement would increase efficiency and diminish expense; but they added, that should there be any delay in working out the improved system which they recommended, they had no doubt that some reduction might be at once effected in the expensive establishments of military police then existing, and they suggested an immediate financial examination of those establishments for that purpose.

4. The Governor-general in Council thinks it proper here briefly to advert to the orders which had been issued, before the Police Commission was appointed, with a view to the reduction of these establishments.

5. In July, 1859, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal was instructed not to complete the military police up to the full strength of 900 men for each battalion, which had been authorised in 1858, but to limit the numbers of each battalion to 600 or 700 men.

6. In Oude, during the same year, reductions in the cost of the police were effected to the extent of nearly 11 lakhs of rupees.

7. So early as November, 1858, at a time when the necessity for a strong repressive force in the North-Western Provinces had not yet passed away, committees were appointed by the Governor-general at Agra and Allahabad to report on the organisation of the police in those provinces. At that time the cost of the police, military and civil, including, of course, large bodies of men specially raised during the disturbances, amounted to at least the sum named in the report of the Police Commission—namely, 62½ lakhs. The Lieutenant-Governor submitted a scheme of police towards the close of 1859 on the "mixed system"—that is to say, a police partly military and partly civil, the estimated cost of which was about 47 lakhs. This scheme was carefully reviewed by the Governor-general, and in April, 1860, definitive instructions were conveyed to the Lieutenant-governor for the reduction of the military branch of the force to the extent of 14 lakhs, thus reducing the whole sanctioned cost from about 47 lakhs to about 33 lakhs. At the same time it was suggested to the Lieutenant-governor whether it might not be preferable to abandon the "mixed system" of police, and to adopt the organisation on which the Oude police had been formed.

8. Reductions in the police were also pressed upon the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab in a letter written from Simla by order of the Governor-general in May, 1860.

9. Large reductions were indeed obviously and imperatively called for in the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, and Oude, because during the period of the disturbances large semi-military bodies of men had been raised under the name of police by the civil authorities, which became unnecessary when order and quiet were re-established.

10. This should be borne in mind, in order to understand the true financial effect of the re-organisation of the police throughout India which is being carried out. Both the army and the police in Northern India were largely and exceptionally increased during the disturbances of 1857 and 1858. The increase in the police was for the most part made in the immediate connection with what were really military operations; and at the time the levies and other bodies that were raised constituted in effect an extra military force acting under the civil authorities.

11. When peace and order were thoroughly restored these bodies should in due course have been discharged, and the country left as before to the civil police and to the army, the latter being fixed at such strength as seemed expedient with reference to past events.

12. The existence of these extraordinary levies, and the large reductions and changes in the constitution of the Bengal army which have necessarily ensued from the events of 1857-58, will make it very difficult, if not impossible, to fix with accuracy the real financial effect of the organisation of the new police; in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab in Bengal and Madras, however, it should not be difficult to do this, and it will be useful to examine somewhat closely how far the results in these two provinces can be already estimated.

13. In the 7th paragraph of their final report, the Police Commission refer to the previous reports which they submitted with returns showing "the numbers and cost of the police of every denomination serving under the Governments of Bengal, Bombay, Madras, Punjab, and the North-Western Provinces, on the 1st of May, 1860," and in the 10th paragraph they set out these returns. The sums shown in this paragraph against Madras and Bengal, as representing the cost of police of every denomination on 1st of May, 1860, are respectively Rs. 47,28,010 and Rs. 45,31,342. But these sums are admitted by the Commission to include much that is not really police. This is conspicuously the case as regards Madras, the sum of Rs. 47,28,010, including upwards of twenty lakhs for revenue police (so termed in the report), and nearly ten lakhs for village police and for orderlies. In a subsequent paragraph, therefore, the Commission reduce the amount to Rs. 16,93,992 for Madras, and to Rs. 40,89,870 for Bengal.

14. There is still some uncertainty as to the actual cost of the Madras new police. It is stated in one report of the Police Commission at 43½ lakhs, exclusive of the Madras city police, and in the final report, again, it is mentioned that the Madras Government has undertaken to keep the cost down to 38½ lakhs, but it is not specified whether this is exclusive or inclusive of the Madras city police. On the whole, however, it is certain that the new police will cost from fifteen to twenty-five lakhs more than the old police did, and whether there will be a real saving of expenditure will depend, of course, upon the extent to which reductions in the army are carried out in consequence—1st, of the actual relief given to the troops by the employment of the police on duties heretofore performed by the army; and, 2ndly, of the greater efficiency of the police. The first result should be immediate and obvious. The second can only be gradual, and may be somewhat difficult to trace with accuracy. Colonel Bruce, in his report dated 10th September, 1861, says that he gathers from a letter from the Military Finance Department that the new police has relieved nearly 9,500 native troops of the regular army, and he observes that "if a corresponding reduction has taken place in the Madras army, it may be estimated that a saving of more than eighteen lakhs has been effected."

15. In the case of Bengal, the Commission, as already stated, take the cost of the existing police, which may be either abolished or absorbed into the new force, at Rs. 40,89,870, and they put the cost of the new police at 40 lakhs, thus estimating that the new system may be introduced into Bengal not only without extra expense, but with a small saving. It is, however, very uncertain whether the establishments marginally noted,* which are included in the sum of Rs. 40,89,870, can be provided for by the new constabulary within the limit of 40 lakhs. But the doubt as to the soundness of the estimate for Bengal chiefly arises from the circumstance that the amount of Rs. 40,89,870, taken as available for the new constabulary, includes a sum of nearly 19 lakhs said to be expended for military police and other levies. The argument of the Police Commission is, that these men are all employed on duties which properly belong to a police, and which a constabulary of the strength estimated by the Commission will find no difficulty in discharging. But on the other hand it has been represented by the Lieut.-governor of Bengal that these men, though no doubt to some extent employed on duties which are police duties, are not wholly so employed. It is strongly urged that they do in fact occupy the place of regular troops in Bengal, and that they have been actually to a large extent employed as soldiers during the last two or three years, and that if they are abolished it will necessarily follow that the number of troops in Bengal must be greatly increased. His Honour has indeed distinctly and emphatically stated his opinion, that the lower provinces will not be safe if the military police are abolished without being replaced by regular troops.

16. Giving every weight to his Honour's opinion on this point, it must be borne in mind that, as in the North-Western Provinces, a considerable reduction in the military or quasi-military force raised during the mutiny is possible; and on the decision which the Government may arrive at upon this point will depend the extent to which the present cost of the military police in Bengal can be taken as a set off against the cost of the new constabulary. It remains, therefore, to be seen how far a constabulary, on the system of the Madras constabulary, can be introduced into Bengal without a real increase of expenditure, debitable to Bengal, either in the military department, or in the civil department.

17. It is certain, then, that in Madras the organization of the new constabulary, will cause a large increase of expenditure in the civil department, but it is probable that this may be counterbalanced by reductions in the military expenditure.

18. In Bengal it seems possible that the introduction of the new constabulary may cause an actual increase of expenditure either in the civil or the military department.

19. In the North-Western Provinces it may be confidently assumed that a large saving will be effected in the civil department without any increase of military expenditure. It will be a question for future inquiry how this reduced police expenditure in the North-Western Provinces will contrast with the expenditure on the old civil police previous to 1857.

20. In paragraphs 39 and 40 of their final report, the Police Commission propose that 180 lakhs should be fixed as the general limit for the police expenditure of India, giving the sums noted in the margin† for each Government and administration. The Governor-general in Council thinks that the information at present before Government will not warrant the unconditional adoption of this estimate. Forty lakhs is a minimum estimate for Bengal. The Bombay police has been lately very carefully revised, and nearly every item of it elaborately reviewed by the Governor in a Minute of last Oct., in which his Excellency fixes the cost at Rs. 26,81,672, and though some hopes of further reduction is held out, nothing very definite is stated of the amount. There does not seem to the Governor-general in Council to be sufficient ground for expecting that the police of Madras will be brought down at any early date to Rs. 30,54,000, or that of the Punjab to 24 lakhs. The lowest estimate of the Punjab Government is 26 lakhs, exclusive of the Derajat contingent. Thirty lakhs is a lower limit than the Government of the North-Western Provinces have yet admitted to be practicable, and the latest detailed estimate from the central provinces amounts to nearly 12 lakhs, which the chief commissioner has been told must be brought down to 11 lakhs. The organization of the police in Burmah is not yet complete. It does not appear that the local authorities in Oude have been communicated with by the Police Commission in regard to the further large reduction which the Commission suggests as practicable in that province.

21. But the stimulus which has been given to reductions, and the special attention which has lately been directed towards police, might possibly, in course of time, get the police cost down to something not very far off the sum the Police Commission deem sufficient, provided the pressure on the Local Governments and Administrations be not relaxed, and with this object in view the Commission recommend that the present central scrutiny be maintained temporarily. Their remark on this point is in the following terms—[Paragraph 46]—"We continue more strongly than ever to perceive that, until the new constabulary is fully organized, it will be necessary to continue a central examination. Without this we apprehend that the police expenditure of India will not be actually reduced to the minimum of necessary requirements so soon as might be expected, for it is only by practically comparing the establishments of one government or province with another, which it is impossible for the local authorities to do, that a correct appreciation of actual wants can be arrived at. Nothing is more natural than that officers who have grown up in one province, and have never been employed in any other, should consider their system the best if not the only feasible one. The organisation of a vast police of tolerable uniformity for the different local Governments of all India, upon a concerted system, must necessarily, for the present, progress more or less tentatively; and as it would not be possible to give our inspectors-general the benefit of moving about from administration to administration, comparing their own organisation with that of other governments, it seems highly desirable that some central scrutiny, which does not cramp the authority of the local governments, should, for the present, be temporarily maintained, for probably every presidency or administration exhibits some points of economy which the others might, with advantage, adopt."

22. The Governor-general in Council concurs in these observations. The exertions of the police commission have already been instrumental in reducing the police expenditure in some provinces, and if their recommendations be followed out, there are grounds for hope that this expenditure may be still further reduced. But if some efficient control and scrutiny be not established to continue the efforts of the Police Commission, the police estimates, so far from falling, are sure not only to rise but to get complicated, so that, in a few years, there will be as great confusion and uncertainty as before in regard to the real amount expended on police.

23. The only question, indeed, to be considered is, not whether a central control is desirable or otherwise, but whether a central control can be usefully exercised without cramping the authority of the local Governments.

24. It is right that the Supreme Government should decide upon all questions of general principle, that they should have the power of preserving some uniformity of practice and of securing the reduction of the general expenditure to the lowest point consistent with efficiency; but, on the other hand, the authority and the responsibility of the local Governments should not be trenching upon, nor their legitimate functions in any manner superseded.

25. These objects, the Governor-general in Council thinks, may all be attained by the appointment of an officer as Inspector-general of police. Such an appointment, he thinks, it is very expedient to establish, at any rate until the new system has been everywhere introduced, and the constabulary force thoroughly organized, and its strength adapted to local circumstances as tested by actual experience.

26. This will take some years to accomplish, and during that time the employment of a general inspector will be most useful both in hastening the attainment of the object in view, and in ensuring uniformity of principle in the formation and employment of the new force, with reference to its own proper duties and to its relations towards other departments of the services, and uniformity of practice as far as local considerations will allow.

27. Much, however, will depend upon the exact position and duties assigned to the Inspector-general.

28. His Excellency in Council considers it most important that the Inspector-general's duties should be strictly confined to those of inspection and report, and that he should have no authority whatever over the head of any local Government or Administration, or over any of the officers or men of the constabulary force employed under any local Government or Administration. But all sources of official information should be freely open to him.

29. As an inspecting officer it will be his duty to go from province to province and submit a report to the head of the local Administration, pointing out defects, calling attention to instances of departure from the general principles prescribed by the Supreme Government, suggesting measures of economy and improvement, and offering generally any remarks he may consider necessary. A copy of every report of this kind should be sent for information to the Home Department of the Government of India. The head of the local Administration should be left to take such action on the report as he may think proper.

30. Another most important function that will devolve upon the Inspector-general is that of consultative officer to the Government of India in matters of police.

81. No recommendation involving any departure from the recognised principles of the system, or any increase or decrease in the number of men or officers employed in the constabulary force, or any increase or diminution of expense will, as a general rule, be acted on by the Government of India, until it has been referred to the Inspector-general for scrutiny and report. The annual budgets of police expenditure will be revised by him, and he will submit his remarks on them to the Government of India before they are finally confirmed. The Inspector-general will be required to make an annual report of his proceedings to the Government of India in the Home Department, from which department exclusively he will receive his instructions.

82. The local Governments and Administrations may consult the Inspector-general on any subject connected with the constabulary, and take his opinion upon any question which they may wish to refer to the Government of India for decision.

83. The salary of the Inspector-general the Governor-general in Council is pleased to fix at Rs. 2,700 a month, with a separate allowance of Rs. 300 a month to cover all travelling and other expenses of every kind, including house and office rent. As his office will not be one of audit or account, nor entail the necessity of voluminous records, a very moderate establishment of clerks will suffice; and they had better continue to be paid, as at present, by contingent bill till the number of clerks likely to be required can be better ascertained.

84. With regard to the specific recommendations of the Police Commission, the Governor-general in Council does not consider that it is possible, at all events in the first instance, to fix the general financial limit for police in India at less than 200 lakhs. This was the minimum at first supposed by the Police Commission to be necessary, and their reasons for reducing it are not conclusive. To ensure the success of the system some liberality is required at first. When the force is thoroughly instructed in its duties some reduction may be practicable, and, with the constant aid of an inspecting officer, will not be difficult to enforce.

85. The proposal that the salaries of all military officers should be charged in full to the Police Department must be qualified by the recent resolution laying down a contrary rule, except as regards officers of the staff corps.

86. The remaining recommendations of the Commission as summarised in the 54th paragraph of their present report, are approved.

87. The labours of the Police Commission having closed with this report, the Governor-general in Council hereby dissolves it, and desires that the cordial acknowledgments of the Government of India be conveyed to the several members of it for intelligence and industry with which they have given effect to the objects of Government in their appointment.

W. GREY,

Secretary to the Government of India.

CONSTABULARY FORCE FOR INDIA.

THE Police Commission, appointed on the 17th of August, 1860, have not only sent in their report, but the Resolution of the late Governor-general in Council founded thereon has also been published. The two do not entirely agree. The Commissioners were evidently over sanguine in their estimates, and all too eager to carry out their instructions to the very letter. On the other hand, Lord Canning, while sincerely desirous to retrench all superfluous expenditure, wisely determined not to impair the efficiency of the force by a false economy, and, therefore, declined to accept the too-narrow calculations of the Commission. Only two years ago the cost of the police for British India amounted to Rs. 2,44,55,347, or nearly two and a-half millions sterling, distributed in the following proportions:—

|  |                 |
|--|-----------------|
| Bengal (exclusive of Arracan)                                    | Rs. 40,89,870   |
| Bombay (including Scinde)...                                     | 39,69,688       |
| Madras (before the introduction of new Constabulary)...          | 16,93,992       |
| Punjab ... ..  | 43,33,465       |
| North-Western Provinces ...                                      | 62,52,712       |
| Nagpore ... ..   | 9,24,370        |
| British Burmah (including Arracan, Tenasserim, and Martaban) ... | 15,40,863       |
| Oude ... ..  | 16,50,387       |
| Total ... ..   | Rs. 2,44,55,347 |

Since then, however, certain deductions have been made by introducing the new system into the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, British Burmah, and Nagpore, so that the present charges do not exceed Rs. 2,14,11,659, as under:—

|                                      |                 |
|--------------------------------------|-----------------|
| Bengal, exclusive of Arracan         | Rs. 40,86,870   |
| Bombay, including Scinde ...         | 27,87,877       |
| Madras ... ..                        | 38,24,620       |
| Punjab ... ..                        | 33,15,155       |
| North-Western Provinces ...          | 32,16,412       |
| Central Provinces ... ..             | 16,36,930       |
| British Burmah, including Arracan... | 11,60,519       |
| Oude ... ..                          | 13,80,276       |
| Total ... ..                         | Rs. 2,14,11,659 |

This expenditure still appears to the Commissioners as greater than is required by the exigencies of the case, though they admit the difficulty of obtaining very precise information as to the genuine police charges of any particular district. There have been so many denominations of police that it is almost impossible to come to a right understanding of the peculiar duties of each separate body. Some are military police, others are village constables, others again are temporary levies, suddenly raised and hastily drilled, while yet others are little more than magistrates' servants. For the future it is earnestly recommended that every armed man should be either a soldier or a policeman, but not a mixture of both. The area of the British Territories is estimated at 835,837 square miles, and the population at 132,758,168 souls. Assuming, therefore, that there should be a policeman for every five square miles and every thousand inhabitants, the total force required would be something over 130,000 men, the whole of whom it is proposed to train to the use of arms, though not more than one-fourth of the entire number would bear arms at any one time, and even then only in scattered detachments over a vast space. The future cost is put down at Rs. 1,80,80,492; that is—

|                          |                 |
|--------------------------|-----------------|
| Bengal ... ..            | Rs. 40,00,000   |
| Bombay ... ..            | 25,50,000       |
| Madras ... ..            | 30,55,000       |
| Punjab ... ..            | 24,00,000       |
| North-West Provinces ... | 30,00,000       |
| Central Provinces ... .. | 10,50,000       |
| Burmah... ..             | 10,26,492       |
| Oude ... ..              | 10,00,000       |
| Total ... ..             | Rs. 1,80,80,492 |

But the grounds upon which these calculations are based are so evidently shifting and untenable that Lord Canning prudently adds twenty lakhs to the Commissioners' estimate, and proposes to devote two millions sterling to the police establishments of British India. Hitherto a very unnecessary delay in introducing the new system into Bengal has been occasioned, it is affirmed, by the obstinate opposition of Sir John Peter Grant; but coincident with the departure of that high functionary steps have been taken to extend the blessings of good government to the Bengal Provinces also. The effete, corrupt, and useless police that have hitherto disgraced the Presidency are to be swept clean away, and in their place a regular constabulary organised, something on the plan of the force in Ireland, as adapted for Scinde by Sir Charles Napier. The resolution of his Excellency the late Viceroy will be found elsewhere, and is by no means unworthy to be classed with the many admirable State papers that have so favourably distinguished Lord Canning's administration. If a really trustworthy police force for all India—exclusive of the Independent States—can be had for two millions per annum, it is certainly not an excessive price to pay for that inestimable advantage. For a time the new machinery may possibly jar and grate more than is quite agreeable, but the exercise of patience and forbearance will soon cause it to work smoothly and efficiently, and to the entire satisfaction of all save evil doers and their abettors.

THE HAKKAS.

A NEW and probably the true light is thrown upon the origin of the Taeping movement in the course of a lively and amusing article in the June number of Blackwood. The writer, in company with a friend connected with the scheme of Chinese emigration to the British West Indies, passed six weeks in a tower in the Kwei-shin district, a wild tract of country a hundred miles to the eastward of Canton, and about the same distance to the north of Hong Kong. The inhabitants are a peculiar people called the Hakkas, and are described as a turbulent, predatory race, usually at variance with their numbers, and not on the most peaceful terms with one another. Their name itself, which signifies "strangers," indicates their violent intrusion among the Punti, or original dwellers in the land. They appear to have come from the northern provinces of Kiang-si and Fu-kien, and to have settled on the waste lands in Kwang-tung. As their numbers and wealth increased they obtained possession of the cultivated estates of the earlier inhabitants, partly by purchase and partly by force. The Coolie corps who displayed such unflinching courage, and rendered such good service in the allied expedition against Pekin, consisted almost entirely of Hakkas, as does likewise the great body of the Taepings. The Celestial younger brother himself, Hung Sew Tsuen, is supposed to be a Hakka, and actuated much more by an hereditary love of fighting and plunder than by any desire to reform the religion of his fellow countrymen. Their language differs considerably from both the Canton and the Pekin dialects, and is scarcely understood by the Punti, even in their own neighbourhood. The gentry seem to be indolent and sensual, fond of letting off gingalls and revolvers, but not partial to hunting or other manly pastimes. Almost their sole employment is in a careless superintendence of their own lands and buildings, and their chief amusement is derived from dinner parties of an unconscionable length. Less educated and refined than the other Chinese, they are also less susceptible of imaginary affronts, and consequently get on much better with foreigners. Their domestic arrangements are on an easy and convenient footing. Their houses, or rather fortresses, are so large and spacious, that they can accommodate three generations at the same time, though subordinate wives tend to swell the numbers of the inmates. In addition to the tsai, or first wife, it is permitted to any man who can afford the questionable luxury to take four tsaieh, or second wives. These help-mates cannot be divorced at the husband's pleasure, but their children are regarded as belonging to the first wife, and they themselves have to perform the duties of the household, assisted, however, by hired servants or poor relatives in menial and rougher occupations. The house in which the writer and his friend resided was "a fortified building of 350 paces in length and 180 in breadth. The outer walls, which were about 30 feet high, and which formed the sides of the first range of rooms, had no windows, but were everywhere pierced with loopholes for purposes of defence; and there were three strong gateways in front. The roofs of the first range of rooms curved down on the outer walls, meeting them about five feet from the top, so as to leave a pathway, defended by a parapet, all round the roof of the building, except where that pathway was interrupted by the four large square towers, which formed respectively the four corners, and which were also plentifully supplied with loopholes. Inside there were about forty rooms of various dimensions, some large and open, others small and close: these were separated from each other by intervening courts, usually connected by covered corridors." Throughout the southern and eastern districts of the province of Kwang-tung these castellated residences are very common, and sometimes cover several acres of ground, and are surrounded by massive walls and a broad deep moat. This circumstance alone sufficiently indicates the character of the people, incessantly engaged in private feuds among themselves, and in a chronic state of warfare with the Puntis. Nothing more would be needed than the weakness of the Imperial Government to rouse such a turbulent race to a predatory rebellion, to which a semi-religious aspect has been given by the astute misrepresentations of their leaders, and the ignorant credulity of European missionaries. Few, however, now believe that the Taepings are anything better than lawless freebooters.

INDIA AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

THE Royal Commissioners would have rendered a notable service to the monied and manufacturing interests of Great Britain had they applied to the India Office for an official catalogue of the Indian contributions, abridged from Mr. Dowle's most useful and elaborate description of the various productions forwarded from Bengal, the Punjab, N.W. Provinces, Oude, Rajpootana, Central India, the Martaban and Tenasserim Provinces, and British Burmah. The Madras and Bombay authorities being, as usual, behind-hand, it was not possible to include the articles collected for exhibition by the Governments of those Presidencies, but those returns must surely have been received by this time, so that no great difficulty would be experienced in preparing a comprehensive and descriptive catalogue, founded on the admirable plan adopted by Mr. Dowle. If that gentleman would even now undertake the task, he would increase the value of the Indian Court a hundredfold, by enabling visitors to carry away with them a certain amount of positive information, instead of a confused recollection of stiff brocades, rude implements, bottles of oil and seed, and lumps of coal and iron ore. The collection of raw materials is, however, exceedingly valuable, though much of its utility is lost by the want of a compendious description of the uses to which they may be applied, their cost of production, the supply available for commerce, and such other particulars as naturally suggest themselves as the chief subjects of inquiry to a practical man of business. A glance at Mr. Dowle's catalogue will suffice to convince every impartial mind of the vast resources of our Indian Empire, and of the very small extent to which they have yet been turned to account. We propose, therefore, briefly to enumerate the different kinds of raw materials noticed in that compilation, though necessarily precluded by our limited space from making any use of his very lucid and interesting explanatory remarks.

Iron ore, then, is exhibited from the State of Ulwar, Cuttack, Pegu, Upper Assam, Monghyr, Shahabad, Jhansi, Gwalior, Kumaon, Nursingpore, Jubbulpore, and Chota Nagpore. Iron earth and iron clay from Assam; copper ore from Ulwar and Assam; and gold sand from Chota Nagpore, Cuttack, and Rangoon, are also to be seen. Coal is even more widely distributed than iron. Here are specimens from Cuttack, Chittagong, Assam, Burdwan, Nursingpore, Chota Nagpore, Hazareebaugh, Kasta, Chokidanga, Toposi, Banda, Mangulpore, Babusol, Haris-pore, Roganathchuck, Raneegeunge, Bhanga-band, Banali, Futtehpore, Hattinal, Cheena-coore, Dumarkunda, and the Rajmahal Hills; the three great coal-fields of Kurhurbalee, Burdwan, and the Rajmahal Hills, being thus all duly represented. There is white earth from Cuttack and Assam used for painting and white-washing; chalk from the valley of the Soane, and geroo, a pure chalk densely coloured by protoxide of iron; flexible sandstone from Jubbulpore, and a white flexible stone from Ulwar; micaceous sandstone from Assam, moss sandstone from Jubbulpore, and the hard, many-coloured sandstone and the "potstone" of Shahabad. Assam sends limestone, shell limestone, and limestone boulder. Akyab, Chittagong, Chota Nagpore, Jubbulpore, and Shahabad, also furnish specimens of limestone and marble. Granite is shown from the Mikir Hills in Assam, and the Bumnonee Rock in Shahabad; emery from Monghyr; slates from Cuttack, Ulwar, and Eastern Bengal; chloride slate or moongnee stone from Nilgiri in Orissa; talc slate (imperfect) from Dhenkual in Cuttack; and jasper from Chiran and Banda. Burmah supplies steatite; Banda, Jubbulpore, and Goozerat different varieties of agate; and also petrified shells and wood: Assam kunkur, and Rangoon jade. Copper is exhibited from Singhboom, in the south-western frontier of Bengal, lead from Rangoon, plumbago from Sikkim and Goorgaon, antimony from Candahar, and petroleum from Burmah, Assam, and Akyab. The second class comprises chemical substances and products, and pharmaceutical processes. Under this head we find the various kinds of salt, nitre saltpetre, nitrate of potash, saltpetre, vitriol, soap, tinder from the sago palm, bat's dung, sajee, red and yellow sulphuret of arsenic, and proto-sulphate of iron. Oil seeds comprise ricinus communis, linum usitatis-simum, several species of sinapis and of sesamum, carthamus tinctoria, bassia latifolia, papavar somniferum, anacardium occidentale, hibiscus cannabinus, gossypium herbaceum, &c., &c. It is, however, to be regretted that no drawings of these plants are exhibited, as is the case with many of the vegetable productions of our colonial possessions. Dried specimens, too, like those from British Columbia, would have proved of much interest. Then, for the cinchona plant one must visit the remote eastern annexe, as likewise for the comparative cases of cotton showing the length of staple of each variety. Our fair countrywomen, moreover, might profitably dispose of the leisure time that now hangs so heavily on their hands in modelling fruits in papier maché, or in imitating flowers and leafy twigs in a similar manner. The long series of oils, resins, and gums is well worthy the attention of the medical profession, and the same may be said of the essential oils and nutritive starches. Intoxicating drugs and medicinal substances speak for themselves, and will scarcely be passed unheeded when their presence is more generally known, and their number and variety brought under the notice of those engaged in chemical pursuits. The same varied abundance characterises the food department, especially under the head of cereals—such as rice, wheat, maize, and others of more local growth. The pulses, spices, sugar, distilled spirits, tea, pickles, and preserves, all combine to attest the bounty of nature and the enterprise of man. Much yet remains to be pointed out, but for the present enough has been said to indicate the rich profusion of natural products to be obtained from our Indian empire, and we reserve for a future occasion the further enumeration of the classes of useful or curious articles exhibited in the Indian court.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 29.

PERSIA AND AFGHANISTAN.

In answer to a question by Mr. GRIFFITH, Lord PALMERSTON said, the relations between the British Government and that of the Shah of Persia, with regard to Afghanistan, are regulated by the treaty concluded between Great Britain and Persia in 1857, on the conclusion of the war. By that treaty the Shah of Persia engaged to abstain from making any claim to sovereignty over Herat, and not to require any of those things to be done which in the East are considered as tokens of submission to a higher power. The Shah also undertook by the same treaty not to interfere in any way with the affairs of the States of Afghanistan, and if any differences arose between him and those States to seek the good offices of the British Government. On the other hand, the British Government undertook to use those good offices with the States of Afghanistan, to prevent them from in any way giving offence to the Shah of Persia, and if any differences should arise, Great Britain would interpose in a manner just and equitable both to the Government of the Shah of Persia and the Afghan States. As to any acts that may have been done by the ruler of Herat, implying allegiance to the Shah, before the treaty of 1857, that treaty has annulled and swept them away. With regard to the present state of affairs, I believe the ruler of Herat has marched on and taken possession of the town of Furrab, as to which there has been a dispute for some time between him and the Afghans. In doing so I believe his forces did advance towards Candahar, and that some engagement did ensue. But all these transactions have taken place between different States of Afghanistan itself, and we have no reason to believe that any Persian troops were engaged in them.

Mr. GRIFFITH asked if her Majesty's Government intended to take part for or against any of these Powers; or extend any operations for the security of India beyond the mountain passes of the present frontier?

Lord PALMERSTON: These disputes are between different States of Afghanistan; and I do not apprehend there is any reason for her Majesty's Government interfering in them. If the security of India is threatened with any invasion from Afghanistan, then the Government of India will take such measures as the circumstances render necessary.

TELEGRAPHS TO INDIA AND CHINA.

In reply to Mr. J. EWART and Colonel STUART, Sir C. WOOD said a proposal had been made to the India Council to aid the establishment of a line of telegraph between Singapore and Rangoon; but, if considered at all, it must be as part of some further line, and not as an independent line, simply for Indian purposes. With regard to telegraphic communication from Scutari to Kurrachee, an arrangement was made in 1858 by which a line was to be carried from Scutari to Bagdad, and, upon its completion to Bagdad, thence to Kurrachee. A little more than a year ago it was thought that it might be advantageous to substitute for the submarine portion of the line a land line through Persia. Negotiations were accordingly set on foot with the Persian Government, and it was only within the last two or three weeks that he had heard that those negotiations were not likely to have any result. He was, therefore, not in a condition now to say what the Government would ultimately determine to do, but in some shape or other they would be bound to complete a line through the Turkish dominions to Kurrachee.

RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY BILL.

The Duke of ARGYLL moved the second reading of this Bill, the object of which was, he said, to make the best of a bad bargain. In 1858 the late Government entered into an arrangement with a company for establishing an electric telegraphic communication between England and India; and the terms granted to the company consisted of an absolute guarantee of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on whatever sum might be expended up to a limit of £800,000. The company laid down the communication, and for some months each separate part of it was in successful operation. Messages were, indeed, for some days transmitted between England and Kurrachee; but, after a short time, some important links of the telegraphic communication failed, and the company, having an absolute guarantee, declined to lay out any more money on the undertaking. The whole matter was then thrown upon the Government, who declined to attempt to restore the telegraphic communication themselves, but entered into an agreement with a new company, by which that company were to be remunerated from the proceeds of the undertaking, so that their profits would depend on the successful operation of the telegraphic communication.

After a brief discussion, in which the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, Lord LYVEDEN, Lord REDESDALE, Earl GREY, and Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY took part, the Bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 5.

INDIAN COTTON.

Mr. BRIGHT said that, under the present circumstances of a portion of the country, it was very important that the Secretary for India should bring forward his Indian Budget at some reasonable period of the Session, when the attention of members could be properly directed to it. His hon. friend the member for Stockport had given notice that he would call attention to the operations which were going on in India, with a view to promote the cultivation and greater export of cotton. It had, he understood, been agreed that that subject should not come on that evening, but it would be a great convenience if the right hon. baronet would bring forward the whole question in such a shape that the House could discuss it in the manner which so important a subject deserved. As far as he could gather, it did not appear that anything was really done in India to promote either sensibly or speedily the cultivation of cotton in that country. He knew that all those persons in Lancashire who had turned their attention to the subject were grievously disappointed at the small progress that was being made in the matter. The right hon. baronet appeared to have fallen into the error of some of his predecessors in thinking that the finance of India was a subject of no consequence, which could be disposed of in the last week of the Session. At this moment it was a matter of the utmost importance, and he appealed to the right hon. baronet to press upon his colleagues that this great question was at least of as much consequence as the Highways Bill, to which the House had given up too many nights this Session. If nothing were done in India we should find that for two or three years to come the condition of Lancashire would be such as to cause the greatest concern to the House, to create great embarrassment to our finances, and to produce, perhaps, other difficulties greater than hon. members anticipated.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY, who had given notice of a resolution that it is the opinion of this House that the guarantee given to the Indian navy by the Act 21st and 22nd Victoria, cap. 106, sec. 56, shall be maintained in its integrity, said, what that meritorious body desired was to know what was their position; whether the Indian navy was to be abolished or not. He urged the policy of maintaining a local naval force in India.

After a few remarks by Sir M. FARQUHAR,

Sir C. WOOD said the position of the officers of the Indian navy was unchanged; that no steps had yet been taken in relation to that service; that nothing, in fact, had been done. He hoped, too, that all arrangements which it might be necessary to make would be effected without in any degree infringing on the guarantee given to the public servants in India when the transfer of Government was about to take place. He must, however, be permitted to put a different interpretation on the guarantee from that which the hon. member for Hertford (Sir M. Farquhar) had given it. When an army or a regiment was reduced the effect was to diminish to a certain extent the prospects of the junior officers. But if the guarantee referred to were taken to extend to all advantages which every officer might obtain by promotion, the Indian army and navy must be kept up for the next twenty years. It would be necessary to preserve them for that length of time if all the advantages which their existence might confer on officers who had entered them perhaps only six months ago were to be preserved to those officers in all their integrity. He entirely admitted that full and fair consideration should be given to the case of those officers whose prospects would be injured. It was his anxious desire, and that of every member of the Indian Council, that the claims of officers in the Indian service should be considered in that way; but when a regiment was reduced in England, the officers whose services were no longer required were put on half-pay, and he could never admit that the House had bound itself to keep up the army and navy of India, so that no injury should be done to the prospects of the youngest officer throughout his life.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The report of the directors states that since the half-yearly meeting of the company, held in November last, the general operations in India have been prosecuted with great energy by the chief engineer and his executive officers. The Anicut across the Toobuddra at Soonkasala, and the main canal thence to the Hindry at Kurnool, a distance of seventeen and a half miles, with its head sluices of masonry, are so nearly completed as to justify a belief that irrigation will be supplied to some portions of the adjacent land in the course of the coming month of July. The sufficiency of the original rough estimate of £1,000,000, made by the chief engineer, as the cost of that section of the company's project which commences at Soonkasala and terminates at or near to Kistnapatam, on the east coast, has been practically confirmed by the actual cost of the work hitherto executed, and by the fact that contractors readily come forward to undertake, at the rates upon which that estimate was founded, the whole of the further portions of the works, and this even in anticipation of the sanction of Government being given to the plans and estimates. The supply of labour has been, and promises to be, ample for all purposes. The local population have shown themselves keenly alive to the advantages they may derive from the works, the landholders in the vicinity of Kurnool having made already preparations to receive the water expected soon to be available for the irrigation of their lands. The price or rate to be paid by the cultivators is now under the consideration of the Madras Government, and the directors have ground for a reasonable hope that a satisfactory arrangement will be speedily arrived at upon this most important question. The usual audited accounts of receipts and expenditure up to the 31st of December last show that £591,927 had been then received, and £105,780 expended, leaving a balance of £486,541 in hand.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The directors state in their report that the negotiation with Government, which commenced so far back as June, 1858, for the settlement of terms to enable the company to commence its first operations, has been finally and satisfactorily concluded by the approval of a deed of contract by the Supreme Government of India, and the execution of such deed by the company. They have been enabled to appoint as their chief engineer in India Lieut.-colonel F. H. Rundall, lately superintending engineer of the Godavery Irrigation and Navigation Works, an officer of large experience in the construction of hydraulic works in India. The deed of contract provides that the whole of the works shall be constructed in accordance with plans approved by the Local Government; that all land to be occupied by such works, including banks on either side of the canals, to whatever breadth may be considered necessary, including sites for the storage of water, shall be provided for the Government free of charge; that all water to be supplied for irrigation shall be sold by the company to the Government, to the extent of the public demand, at prices to be fixed by arbitration; that the whole of the prices so fixed, less the extra cost of collection, shall belong to the company, up to 25 per cent. upon the capital expended upon the works, after which the surplus shall be divided equally between the Government and the company; that the whole of the profits to be derived from the navigation of the water ways opened up shall belong to the company solely; that the Government shall have the right to purchase the works constructed at the expiration of the first twenty, or the first thirty, or the first forty, or the first fifty years after payment for irrigation, at the market value of all the shares, taken at the average price of the three preceding years. It also provides for the settlement by arbitration of all differences which may arise between the Government and the company. Interest at 5 per cent. per annum will be paid on the deposit and calls during construction. The capital received to the 31st of December last amounted to £47,308, and the expenses to £6,126, leaving a balance of £41,182.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that Mr. Purdon, the engineer, expects that all the chief works of the line will be finished by the 30th of June, but that on a consultation with the agent of the contractor, and also the agent of the company, it was deemed advisable not to open the line for traffic before October next, with a view to consolidate the recently formed embankments by having a season's rain on them prior to the opening. Since the commencement of the present year the directors have received £340,800 from the issue of debentures, making up with their previous receipts on that account the whole amount of £400,000 authorised to be raised on debentures, and completing the necessary capital required to finish the construction of the line. Mr. Purdon, the chief engineer, reports that about eighty miles of the permanent way have been laid, the sidings, crossings, switches, and turntables are being laid in at the Calcutta station, and like progress will shortly be made at the other stations, so that an engine may be able to run over the whole line by the latter end of May, as anticipated in his last report. He concludes by bearing testimony to the success with which the contractors' operations have been attended. The capital account to the 31st of December last shows that £994,268 had been received and £925,194 expended, leaving a balance of £69,074.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAILEYBURY COLLEGE.—This institution, which formerly belonged to the East India Company, and in which so many of the civil servants of India were trained, is to be opened in the autumn as a public school for the Eastern Counties, under the direction of a council, consisting of the Right Hon. W. Cowper, M.P., Sir M. Farquhar, M.P., Mr. R. Hanbury, M.P., Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., the Dean of Manchester, Archdeacon Grant, the Hon. and Rev. G. Hastings, the Hon. and Rev. L. Barrington, Canon Blomfield, and other gentlemen, who have appointed the Rev. Arthur Gray Butler, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford, and assistant master at Rugby, to the head mastership.

THE INDIAN TARIFF.—On Wednesday, April 28, a large meeting of operatives was held in the Spinners and Minders' Institute, Preston, for the purpose of considering the propriety of adopting a memorial to the Government praying for the repeal of the Indian tariff. Mr. J. Meagher, Secretary to the Weavers' Association, occupied the chair, and in opening the meeting said that already the operatives of Accrington, Blackburn, and Over Darwen, as well as other places in Lancashire, had adopted memorials to the Government, and appointed deputations to meet Sir Charles Wood, with the view of getting the Indian tariff repealed. Preston, considering its position as a manufacturing town in Lancashire, ought to join the present agitation for the abolition of the Indian tariff. There were 27,148 looms in Preston, out of which about 20,000 had been employed for the purpose of weaving cloth for the Indian market. Each of those looms, according to a calculation which had been made, paid to the Indian Exchequer £7. 10s. per annum. The total amount now realised by the tax on goods for the Indian market was upwards of £500,000, towards which Preston contributed £162,000 per annum. The tariff was a grievance—a burden, not only upon the manufacturers, but the operatives, and he trusted that every effort would be made to bring about its abolition. Mr. T. Banks, secretary to the Spinners and Minders' Association, moved,—"That this meeting of operatives of Preston is of opinion that the import duties upon cotton pieces and yarns sent to British India are opposed to the principles of free trade, injurious to the native Hindoos, and cruel to the English operatives; and we pledge ourselves never to cease agitating till these obnoxious duties are entirely repealed." In the course of an able speech, Mr. Banks alluded to the present distress in Lancashire, to the stoppage of the American cotton supply, and to the injurious effects of the Indian tariff. He said that Sir Charles Wood, in reply to the deputation which met him some time ago, relative to the Indian tariff, said that the exports to India had not fallen off. Admitting that such was the case, it did not prove that the Indian trade was healthy, inasmuch as manufacturers sent goods to India simply to raise money. If a manufacturer, for instance, wanted £3,000 or £4,000, he could ship off goods really worth about £5,000, and realise from them about £4,000. The fact was, India at present was simply a kind of commercial pawnshop for British manufactures. Mr. Banks concluded by severely denouncing the Indian tariff, and expressing a hope that it would be speedily abolished. Mr. H. Fellowes seconded the motion, which was ably supported by Mr. J. Baxter Langley, and carried unanimously. A memorial to Government, embodying the sentiments of the resolution, was then adopted. Subsequently it was resolved that the memorial be presented to Sir Charles Wood by Mr. Meagher and Mr. T. Banks, and that Mr. Baxter Langley accompany the deputation to represent the operatives of Preston.

TAEPINGDOM.—In some further papers presented to Parliament relating to the rebellion in China, Consul Harvey, of Ningpo, gives his account of the Taepings. He describes them as relying much on the impression produced by the tawdry harlequin garb, wild looks, and shouts and yells, which strike terror into the hearts of the timid Chinese. But before they make an attack upon a place they send forward skirmishers to burn villages and cause general alarm, while spies and emissaries also make their way secretly into the town to spread exaggerated and false reports, and when a panic has been created, set fire to as many buildings as possible, that in the confusion the place may fall an easy prey. The troops do not, as a rule, receive pay, but live, like pirates, on whatever booty they can obtain. But they have a regular embodied force, a draught from which forms the nucleus of the body of men engaged upon any expedition, the remainder consisting of young recruits or peasants pressed into the service. Able-bodied men are compelled to serve in their ranks, and their forces are swelled by all the bad characters of the districts they pass through, but no respectable Chinaman goes over to the Taepings; the respectable Chinese are an orderly race of men. So much so that above 70,000 have taken refuge within the limits of Ningpo, and live and hold together without any legitimate rulers, the Consul exercising his influence for the preservation of order. Marriage is forbidden to the Taepings until the empire is conquered, but when a town is captured three days are given to the soldiers to do what they please, and their conduct then is horrible beyond description. The inhabitants of conquered districts are always draughted to other provinces in large numbers, and their place supplied by others. "The Taeping movement," says the Consul, "is merely land piracy on an extensive scale, it makes no attempt at orderly government, it has had ten years' trial, and is found to destroy everything and produce nothing."

ADAM'S BRIDGE.—On Monday, the 26th May, was issued the following report of the select committee appointed to inquire into the practicability of shortening the voyage to India:—"It appears in evidence that a passage between the Island of Ramiseram and Point Tonitory, on the coast of Madura, in the Presidency of Madras, has long existed. Since the year 1837, when operations were commenced by the Madras Government, under the superintendence of Colonel (now Lieutenant-general) William Monteith, the channel has been deepened from 3½ to its present depth of 11 to 12 ft. low water, spring tides, at a cost a little exceeding £40,000. It is stated in evidence that the depth can be increased to 12 ft. without an excessive outlay. The channel is largely used at all seasons by the coasting trade of India and the trade between India and Ceylon. From the 1st of May, 1860, to the 30th of April, 1861, 2,447 vessels passed through, having an aggregate tonnage of 205,529 tons, as against 140,565 tons in 1859-60, in which latter year twenty-one English vessels and one French vessel made use of the channel, one of the former, the Blue Rock, a ship of 606 tons, drawing 18 ft. water in ballast. The report says:—"The evidence does not enable your committee to offer an opinion of the cost of deepening the channel to the extent required to accommodate the general trade for large vessels; but it is clear that great beneficial commercial results have been ready obtained at a very moderate cost. They are, therefore, of opinion that the question of deepening the channel and improving the approaches is deserving the early attention of her Majesty's Government; and they suggest that further inquiries should be prosecuted on the spot as soon as possible, to ascertain with certainty whether the passage between Ceylon and the mainland of India can be made safe and practicable for the general trade at a moderate expense."

FINANCE ACCOUNTS OF INDIA.—The annual accounts for India have been laid before Parliament. The revenue for 1860-61, and that for 1861-62 (at present "estimated") differ but little, £12,003,234 and £12,011,000; but the expenditure differs greatly, £16,924,619 in the former year, and £13,033,279 in the latter. The chief item of reduction, of course, is in the military expenditure; the charge for the army is reduced from £15,838,980 in the former year, to £12,800,000 in the latter, and that for the navy from £1,048,224 to £622,888. The gross receipt from Income-tax and trade taxes (Oude and Punjab) in 1860-61 amounted to £1,002,973, but the charges of collection exceeded £75,000; the gross receipt for 1861-62 is estimated at £1,942,990. But the detailed accounts for this latter year have not yet been received. The cash balances estimated to be in the Indian treasuries on the 30th of April last, the close of the financial year, is stated at £17,227,182.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The monthly bidding for bills on India took place at the Bank on the 4th, and the amount offered was £309,000. The minimum rates were the same as heretofore—1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 2s. on Bombay and Madras, and the tenders at and above those terms were all accepted in full, their total being only £190,000.

THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA.—We picketed our animals to trees and scrambled up the wall, which near the pass is in a very dilapidated condition. The sight was at once picturesque and amazing, for as far as the range of vision extended this wonderful structure was seen stretching along the mountain sides and tops, with little towers, at intervals varying between 200 and 300 yards, breaking the otherwise monotony of the view. For a short distance either side of the pass the wall is constructed of brick with rubble in the centre, but further away it is composed almost wholly of stone; in fact, whatever materials were closest at hand would appear to have been made use of; thus, as at the spots we visited granite abounded in greatest profusion, so in the construction of the wall was it made the principal ingredient, and for miles the wall consists of large, shapeless masses of granite smoothed only on the outside. We observed but one tower built entirely of stone, they being, with this exception, composed of brick, with foundations of hewn stone. The height of the wall from the top of the parapet is about 17 feet 10 inches at most parts, though occasionally, where the parapet is highest, it measures 178 feet 6 inches; its breadth is 18 feet, and the height of the parapet 5 feet 4 inches. The towers are 31 feet 3 inches high, and 28 feet 1 inch broad. The parapet is both crenelated and loopholed, and the towers are pierced for the discharge of some projectile. From any elevated site the scenery well repays one for the trouble of ascent; clear streams are seen meandering down the passes, while on every side, and looming far in the distance, are a succession of brown hill-tops, with small patches only under cultivation. Drove of pack-asses are seen going and returning, the former unladen and the latter bringing a small kind of brushwood, which the borderers burn instead of the millet-stalk in use on the plains, while in wild abundance are scattered innumerable ash, poplar, and fir trees. The proceedings of our artist were productive of infinite astonishment and delight in the Chinese mind, and it was with extreme difficulty that, hemmed in on all sides, we succeeded in transferring to paper views of surrounding objects.—Once a Week.

DEATH OF GENERAL SIR T. WILLSHIRE, G.C.B.—The colonelcy of the 51st (King's Own) Light Infantry Regiment of Foot has become vacant by the death of General Sir Thomas Willshire, which took place on Saturday last at Hill house, Windsor Forest, from effusion on the brain, in his 72nd year. The gallant deceased had been suffering for upwards of five weeks. He was born in 1789, at Halifax, in North America, entered the army in 1795, and served with the 38th regiment in the West Indies for three years, the campaign of 1808-9, including the battles of Roleia and Vimiera, the retreat and battle of Corunna, and the expedition to Walcheren. From 1812 to 1814 he served in the Peninsula, and commanded the light company at the battle of Salamanca, where he was twice wounded in the action at Villa Muriel, the actions of Osma, the battle of Vittoria, the first assault of San Sabastian, as well as the second assault and capture of that place, when he received the brevet rank of major. He also commanded a brigade of light companies at the passage of the Bidassoa, and the battles of Nivelle and Nive, for which he was appointed a brevet lieutenant-colonel. In 1819, while at the Cape of Good Hope, he repulsed with 300 men the attack of 10,000 Caffres upon Graham's Town, and he likewise commanded in the subsequent operations against them. From 1822 to 1840 he served in the East Indies, during which time he commanded a wing of the 46th regiment at the battle of Kittoor, in the Doab. He also served throughout the whole of the campaign in Afghanistan, under Lord Keane, and was present in 1839 at the capture of the fortress of Ghuznee, on which occasion he was appointed a K.C.B., and in the November following a baronet, for capturing the fortress of Khelat, while in command of the Bombay column of the Indus. His military decorations were the silver war medal, with seven clasps, and the Order of the first class Dooranee Empire, conferred upon him by the King of Afghanistan.

LABUAN COAL COMPANY.—At the meeting of the Labuan Coal Company on the 29th May, Sir J. D. Elphinstone, M.P., in the chair, the report stated that advices had been received from Mr. Sinclair, the manager, to the 17th of April, from which it appears that the sinking of one pit is making favourable progress, that another is about to be commenced, and that both will probably be completed by the end of October next, when the veins won will be sufficient to yield 100,000 tons of coal per annum for ten years; also that in the interval while the pits are in process of being sunk a fair supply of coal will be raised for sale, that the cost, including expenses of every kind, is not expected to exceed 6s. per ton, and that a supply of 85 tons has already been furnished to her Majesty's steamship Scout.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF LONDON TO LORD CANNING.—At a meeting of the Common Council held at Guildhall on Thursday, June 5, Alderman Salomons moved, in a highly eulogistic address:—"That the freedom of this city, in a gold box of the value of 100 guineas, be presented to Earl Canning, in grateful recollection of his eminent services while administering the Government of India at a period of great peril, and in appreciation of the conciliatory and enlightened policy of his subsequent measures for the good government and permanent improvement of that important dependency of the British Crown,"—(loud cheers). The motion was seconded by Mr. Rowe, and carried unanimously.

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND AND EARL CANNING.—In receiving the report on chaplaincies in India in connection with the Church of Scotland, the number of which has been considerably increased during the administration of Earl Canning, and made more proportionate to the number and wants of Scotch residents in India, the Assembly of the Church of Scotland on Monday adopted the following resolution:—"The Assembly, with this report before them, and called on to look back on the services rendered to the Church of Scotland by Earl Canning during his administration, perhaps the most arduous and responsible to be found in the annals of India, desire to record the grateful sense of those services entertained by the Church of Scotland, and to offer up their fervent prayers to God that this distinguished nobleman, now retired from the scene of his unparalleled labours in India, may long be spared to his native country. The Assembly authorise the Moderator to convey the thanks of the House to his lordship."

P. AND O. COMPANY.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company on the 3rd inst., the report, recommending the usual dividend of 3½ per cent. for the past six months, was adopted.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The steamer Ripon took out £102,785, of which £154,673 is silver and £8,112 gold. Of this amount £5,000 is gold for Alexandria, £3,112 gold for India, and £154,673 silver for China and the Straits.

APPOINTMENT.—MAURITIUS.—(Downing-street, May 31.) The Queen has been pleased to appoint L. F. E. Dupont, Esq., to be Master of the Supreme Court of the Island of Mauritius.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE DELHI RAILWAY.

Incorporated by the Scinde Railway Act, 1857.
Guaranteed 5 per Cent. per Annum, by the Secretary of State for India in Council, on the same terms and conditions as those granted for the Scinde and Punjab Railways.
Capital at present sanctioned, £2,500,000, in 125,000 Shares of £20 each.
Deposit 10s. per Share, and a call of 30s. per Share payable on the 26th June. No further call will be made during the current year.

CHAIRMAN—W. P. ANDREW, Esq.
DEPUTY-CHAIRMAN—SIR T. HERBERT MADDOCK.
GOVERNMENT DIRECTOR—JULIAN DANVERS, Esq.
J. Edmund Anderson, Esq. Harry Borradaile, Esq.
Colonel Sir F. L. Arthur, Bart. Thomas Williams, Esq.
CONSULTING ENGINEER—G. P. BIDDER, Esq.
ACTING SECRETARY—WILLIAM PETERS, Esq.

The Delhi Railway, about 280 miles in length, will form the connecting link between Umritsur, the upper terminus of the Punjab Railway, and Delhi, the northern terminus of the East Indian Railway, and complete that great chain of steam communication which will connect the opposite sides of the Peninsula, having Calcutta for its eastern and Kurrachee for its western or European port.

The route of the proposed railway has been surveyed; plans and sections prepared, and the other preliminary arrangements made; with the exception of the bridges, there will be no works of any magnitude; the cost, including rolling stock, is estimated under £11,000 per mile.

The railway will traverse a fertile, level, and populous country, with a large existing traffic.

Umritsur, the northern terminus, is the chief emporium for the commerce of the Punjab, Cashmere, and Central Asia; it contains a population of 120,000 souls, and is the religious capital of the lately dominant race. For these reasons the influx of travellers, traders, and visitors is great and continuous.

Delhi, the southern terminus must, with Railway communication, become the principal central entrepot in Hindoostan, similar to Umritsur in the Punjab, though on a vastly extended scale.

Through the good offices of Mr. McLeod, the financial Commissioner of the Punjab, statistics of the existing traffic between Umritsur and Delhi have been collected and placed at the disposal of the Board. From these returns it is estimated that 621,582 passengers annually pass along the route of the proposed railway, irrespective of troops and travellers journeying short distances.

The tonnage and merchandise conveyed is not given, but the amount paid for the carriage of goods between Umritsur and Delhi exceeds £300,000 per annum.

There is, within the borders of the Punjab and Delhi territory, an area of nearly 200,000 square miles, with a population of 22,000,000, subject to our rule or influence, giving in the Umritsur Division, 446 per square mile; in the Trans-Sutlej, 334; in the Cis-Sutlej, 341; and in the Delhi Territory, 327 per square mile.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained at the Office, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA &amp; CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA; showing the British

Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffuseness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP OF INDIA; compiled

chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with

Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP OF INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH,

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

The BEARD, WHISKERS, and MUSTACHIOS are real ised by the use of

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL

possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects: mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 2ls. per bottle.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE only news brought by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th of May is the prospect of a speedy termination of the little war in the Jyntea Hills, in Eastern Bengal. General Showers, armed with full civil and military powers, is still in the Hills, engaged in repressing the Cossyah revolt. On the 14th April he issued the following proclamation from Jowaire to the rebellious tribes:—

"Brigadier-general Showers calls upon all those who are friends of order and the loyal subjects of the British Government to assist him in restoring the peace of the district; at the same time he warns the inhabitants of the district that all who are found harbouring the rebels, or supplying them with provisions, or in any way assisting them, will render themselves liable to the penalties of the Act.

"The British Government has no wish to inflict the miseries of a severe law upon the people. It would be better pleased to act for the peace and the happiness and the welfare of its subject; and Brigadier-general Showers, guided by the spirit of his Government, urges the people to apply for pardon and to return to their allegiance.

"If the people have any grievances to be redressed they should make them known as the law directs, and they will be listened to, but no complaints will be received so long as they are in a state of insurrection.

"Brigadier-general Showers has been informed that the mass of the people are loyally inclined, but that they are prevented from coming in by threats of certain evil disposed men. Is any threat such men can hold out more dreadful than to behold wives and children perishing from want and the inclemency of the weather? Brigadier-general Showers exhorts the people to give up such men or proclaim them to the Government, that they may be treated as the disturbers of the public peace and in conformity with the penalties of the Act."

The Friend of India observes:—"The latest intelligence from the scene of disturbance is that this proclamation has resulted in the submission of the rebels and the surrender of their leaders. One man of note has voluntarily come in and given himself up. Others had sent in their submission; and meetings of the rebels had been held with a view to imitate their example. They have been worn out and defeated by the unremitting activity and vigour of the general and his troops."

The Imperial Legislative Council was adjourned sine die on Wednesday, the 30th of April, Lord Elgin intimating that he was empowered by Act of Parliament to summon them together again when he pleased, but he was not desirous of doing so before the middle of November, unless circumstances urgently required it.

The Bengal Legislative Council was also adjourned on the 3rd May, by the new Lieut.-Governor, Mr. Cecil Beadon, for the same period. The appointment of Mr. Beadon is popular. The Commander-in-Chief is still at Simla, where he and his staff are hard at work on the arrears of office business which were caused by Sir Hugh's flying visit to the frontier.—From Madras we have not a line of news.

BENGAL.

ANOTHER EXPEDITION AGAINST THE BHEELS.

We understand that the Bheels have become so habitually troublesome on the Candeish frontier, that the Government has found it necessary to adopt measures for reading them such a lesson as shall, at any rate for some time to come, teach them that discretion is as necessary to them in the guidance of their actions as it is in the case of civilised nations. An outbreak of Bheels on the Candeish frontier, and in the Nerbudda valley, is rather the rule than the exception in the routine of events in those parts of India; it is, therefore, not so much a matter of surprise to hear that they are in arms, committing depredations, and stopping traffic on the public highways, looting and maltreating all who fall in their way, as that they have continued quiet and kept within their mountain retreats in the Sathpoora for more than a month or so at a time. It is not yet two years since these Bheels received such chastisement at the hands of Lieutenants Probyn and Atkins as would have been thought sufficient to have deterred them from pursuing their calling of professional marauders for many a year to come. Not so, however, for within six months, nay, within three, the same uneasy reckless spirit manifested itself among these people, which is well-nigh their most marked characteristic. The occurrence to which we allude took place in this wise. In July, 1860, the native merchants of Bombay, who deal and speculate largely in opium, transmitted thence towards Indore twelve camel-loads of treasure, amounting in all to 2 lakhs and 70,000 rupees. On the arrival of the camels and their escort at Sangvee, the latter were told by Khajee Sing, Naik Rukhwaldar of the Scindwah Ghat, in the Sathpooras, that Bheemah Naik, the Chief of Scindwah, was in rebellion, and that it would not be safe to pass through his country unless reinforced. On the following day, however, the escort was allowed to proceed with its charge; but in the mean time Khajee Sing had collected his followers, and shortly overtaking the camels, obliged their escort to leave the road and take them into the dry bed of a nullah at the foot of the hills. Prior to this occurrence, Khajee Sing, who was in the pay of Government as Naik Rukhwaldar, had written to the political agent, stating that he could not perform the duties imposed upon him for the pay he received, and that, unless his allowance was considerably augmented, he must help himself. With the usual impudence of his people, Khajee Sing had, therefore, prepared the officers of Government for the step he was about to take, though not until he was well aware that any interference on their part in his contemplated appropriation of the treasure he knew to be in his immediate neighbourhood would be impossible. In the first instance, after obtaining possession of the treasure, this Bheel chief and successful marauder effected his escape into the difficult passes of the Sathpoora, where he knew it would be impossible to follow him. At length, confident in his security, he moved into the Burwanee territory. No sooner had he done so than Lieuts. Probyn and Atkins, with a party of the Poona horse and mounted police, were upon him. Coming up with Khajee Sing and his followers in the Sathpoora hills, to the south-west of Newalla, he was at once attacked, and though he and his followers fought gallantly they were completely routed, and fled in all directions. Khajee Sing, with his mounted followers, effected his escape, closely pursued, however, by Lieutenants Probyn and Atkins, for eight miles; the evening was stormy, the rain heavy, and night fast coming on; every effort was made to come up with the fugitives, but the wearied horses of the pursuers were barely a match for the fresher steeds of their foes. At length, however, success appeared achieved; they were on the foe; but before a blow could be struck, Khajee

Sing and his followers leapt from their horses, which they abandoned, and fled down the precipitous side of a dark and frowning ravine. Carabines were at once unslung, and ere the darkness of coming night had quite obscured the forms of the foe, two fell beneath the shots which were poured in upon them, and three more fell wounded, but were carried off by a party of Bheels who lay concealed in the ravine. All that Khajee Sing and his followers had possession of fell into the hands of their pursuers, and a portion of the stolen treasure was recovered. Night having fallen and heavy rain set in, and men and horses being alike exhausted with their long march and subsequent rapid pursuit of the foe, any attempt at further action was abandoned. In the first attack upon the Bheel position the troops under Probyn and Atkins had caused many to bite the dust; and so great was their loss that Khajee Sing was unable to re-assemble his fallen and scattered followers. Of the small party which accompanied him in his flight five were placed hors-de-combat, two being killed; and yet this lesson, severe as it was, has proved insufficient to keep quiet and peaceable a people, the very breath of whose nostrils is the state of perpetual warfare in which they exist. No lesson, however severe, no proof of the British power to chastise offenders against the laws, will ever carry conviction to the mind of the Bheel. The Ethiopian can no more change his skin, nor the leopard his spots, than the Bheel his nature, which makes the world his foe.—Englishman.

THE REPORT OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has published in good time the report of its Committee for the half year ending the 30th April last. It opens with the address of welcome to Lord Elgin; touches on the retirement of Lord Canning; reverts to the Chamber's address to Mr. Laing, of which the less said the better; and then falls into a consideration of the Budget, and its effect on trade in the reductions proposed on import duties. It was suggested that great advantage would result to the entire mercantile community, if the stocks of cotton goods, yarn, and metals in importers' hands on the 31st December could be ascertained. An application to all the members of the Chamber was made, and responded to by all, with two exceptions. Of the value such knowledge would prove to importers generally there can be little doubt, nor can we understand the selfish policy which could dictate non-compliance with a request made for the general weal. Some steps have been taken towards bringing to the notice of the authorities the insufficiency of the mooring accommodation in the Hoogly, and the serious detentions of ships, involving much unnecessary expense, from the want of a sufficiency of pilots. As both these are subjects of importance to the port, we are glad to find that the Chamber's representations have met with attention. The abuses arising out of the practice of feeing assistant harbour masters was also made subject of reference to the Bengal Government, with very beneficial effect. Reference is made to the action of the Chamber in respect of the proposed "Consolidated Customs' Bill," and the amendment of the Stamp Act, as passed by the Legislative Council of India. After passing over one or two unimportant subjects, the report arrives at public holidays, and the Chamber congratulates itself on the number being fixed at twenty-seven during the year, all of which are "close," and for purposes of business "non-working" days. Having got so far, the Chamber ceases in its labours to do a little bit of "gastronomy," and having carried unanimously the proposal that "this chamber do dine together on some convenient day in November," reverted to its work, and made a firm and highly judicious attack on the office of the "Collector of Customs;" and having enlisted the services of the Bengal Government, was enabled through its good offices to obtain the concurrence of the Supreme Government to the adoption of their highly important suggestion that the office of Collector of Customs shall for the future be a permanent appointment on an increased salary—a measure of so much importance to mercantile interests that we heartily congratulate it on its success. Having settled the Custom-house, the Chamber reverts to that very unpleasant and unsavoury subject, "the purchase by Government of bills on London," in which the Financial Secretary scarcely realised the expectations of his admirers. The Chamber had cause to complain, and did so; but whether the redress given was such as proved satisfactory is another question. As the subject must, however, be fresh in the memories of our readers, we need not now enlarge upon it. Mention is made of the stir made in the matter of the discontinuance of our direct mails via Galle, but as we are much opposed to any change in the present arrangements until railway communication is complete between Calcutta and Bombay, we disapprove entirely of the proposal of the Chamber to continue arrangements now in force only until the railway is open to Benares. We have then a short notice of each of the railway companies, highly flattering to each, and wind up with an appropriate allusion to the untimely death of Colonel Baird Smith, of whose services to the Chamber of Commerce, as well as to the entire community of British India, European and native, there cannot be two opinions.—Englishman.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

A question of some importance to the members of the uncovenanted service has recently been decided by Government. It has for many years been a matter for reference and for argument whether, under the rules and regulations compiled for the guidance of the members of the uncovenanted service, an officer overstaying his leave of absence on sick certificate is or is not entitled to special leave, on his return to India, to enable him to rejoin his appointment, supposing it not to have been forfeited by his protracted absence therefrom; what pay he is entitled to during such special leave; and whether the period so passed, if granted, can or cannot be counted in service for pension?

Two cases occurred in the Punjab about a year ago which have formed the subject of repeated communication between the Government of the Punjab, where the uncovenanted servants were located, and the Government of India. The first case is that of Mr. Purdon, who, having overstayed the two years' leave on sick certificate, granted him under the uncovenanted service rules, obtained from the Secretary of State for India an extension of ten months to enable him to rejoin his appointment. On arrival in India, Mr. Purdon obtained a further extension of leave for two months more, during which period of extension he was permitted to draw half the amount of salary attached to the appointment he held. The second case is that of Mr. A. G. Crommelin, an uncovenanted officer of the Public Works Department in the Punjab, and holding the appointment of Executive Engineer on the Baree Doab Canal. In the latter end of 1858 he obtained leave to England on medical certificate for twelve months. He reported his departure from India on the 7th March, 1859. While in England he applied for and obtained an extension of leave from time to time, until the accumulated extended leave amounted to one year. Prior to the expiration of the last instalment of leave granted to him, Mr. Crommelin obtained the permission of the Secretary of State to rejoin his appointment, with which object he left England on the 12th February, 1861, and arrived in Bombay on the 15th March following, eight days after the expiration of his extended leave. In the meantime, and in anticipation of his return, Mr. Crommelin had been appointed by the Government of the Punjab, and confirmed by the Government of India, Controller and Examiner of Public Works Accounts in the Punjab. This appointment he proceeded at once to take up, reaching Lahore on the 27th April following his arrival in Bombay. To enable him, as he thought, to draw a moiety of the salary attached to his office while in transit from Bombay, and to enable him to correct the time for service for pension, Mr. Crommelin applied for special leave for that period. In reply he was informed that, as he had extended the leave granted to him under Section V. of the Absentee Rules of the Uncovenanted Service, he was not entitled to any special leave that would carry allowances with it. As no reply was given to that portion of his letter relating to the period he was in transit from Bombay to Lahore counting as service for pension, Mr. Crommelin again made a reference on this point, and quoted in support of his claim for both pay and pension the case of Mr. Purdon. The Public Works Department being unable to decide the point mooted, referred the matter to Government, and raised the following queries:—

1st. To what allowances is an absentee uncovenanted officer entitled during the third year of leave on medical certificate?

2nd. What is the correct construction to be placed on the passage in the resolution of Government on the Public Works Department, dated 4th October, 1857, which declares that an officer of the uncovenanted service on special leave is entitled to receive pay at the rates granted under clause 3 of section V. of the Absentee Rules?

3rd. Is the permission of the Secretary of State to an uncovenanted officer to return to his duty a mere formality, or does it empower retention of appointment in the case of leave being extended, and can the officer exceeding the term of his leave of absence under such circumstances correct this period as service towards pension?

These questions, as well as the cases of both Messrs. Crommelin and Purdon, were referred to the civil paymaster, Fort William, who has decided, with reference to the first question, that—

1. An absentee of the uncovenanted service during a third years' leave on sick certificate is entitled to one-third of the salary of the office he holds.

2. If the period of leave on sick certificate originally granted has not exceeded twelve months, one-half of the amount of salary attached to the absentee's office may be drawn during the term for which special leave is granted. If the leave granted has extended beyond twelve months, then one-third of the salary of the absentee's appointment may be received during the time for which special leave may be obtained.

3. The third question, being one not within the province of the Civil Paymaster to decide, has been laid before the Governor-general in Council, who, concurring in the decision of the Civil Paymaster on the two first questions mooted, has laid down that, if an absentee simply applies to the Secretary of State for India for permission to return to his duty, without explaining that his leave of absence will expire before he can reach India, such permission to return to duty cannot be held to imply an intention of securing the retention of his appointment to the applicant, which is forfeited by such overstay of leave by the rules of the service. But, when permission is applied for to return to duty, the applicant fully explaining that his leave will expire before he can rejoin his appointment, the sanction then awarded by the Secretary of State must be viewed as barring any forfeiture of such appointment, and, in consequence, carrying with it a claim to special leave, to moiety of salary of appointment, and to such leave counting towards service for pension. But the Governor-general in Council considers each case must be considered separately, as each may offer some peculiar features which no regulation can properly provide for.

With regard to Mr. Purdon he has been directed to refund the difference between half and one-third of his office salary during the period of his special leave; and Mr. Crommelin has been informed that, by outstaying his leave, he virtually forfeited his appointment, and that, although he was not actually removed from it, his retention of the same by sufferance gives him no claim to special leave or moiety of salary; there can, therefore, be no question as to service for pension when no service was performed.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BENARES, April 6.—Perhaps you are aware that the Rajah of Benares lately petitioned Government to exempt him from the provisions of Act XXVIII. of 1857, and to allow his followers to retain their arms. The commissioner of the division supported his application in so far as regarded his cannon. But the Lieutenant-governor of the North-west Provinces was opposed to the concession; not that he had the slightest fear that the Rajah would ever make use of the arms, unless in our support, but on the ground that, if any exemption were once allowed, it would be impossible to draw a line; and again, that if we allow him to retain guns we cannot refuse to allow him to instruct artillerymen, which would be very bad policy, however small the number. The Governor-general, however, differed from Mr. Edmonstone. Lord Canning, when here in November last, satisfied himself that a larger number of the Rajah's people than had at first been contemplated might safely be allowed to carry arms, and even thought that, considering his Highness' loyalty, they would be rather a gain than otherwise. The number which he wished to retain—2,000—was of course preposterous, but he is to be allowed to retain 400 men, including his personal guard, in addition to the 300 whom he retains in the Mirzapore District. The Rajah is also to be allowed to retain eight cannon; but they are very small, and only fit for saluting or for use in religious ceremonies.

JYNTEAH, April 17.—The measures of the authorities since the disturbed districts were declared in a state of rebellion, and under the powers of a Commission, composed of Colonel Richardson, Major Rowlett, and the deputy-commissioner of Nowgong, have been very successful. But there is yet a good deal of mischief afloat. Only a few days ago a gang of Cossyabs plundered the village of Hoomongchoo, and just before that we heard of a body of about four hundred of the same rascals in the neighbourhood of North Cachar; and a detachment of police have been sent to watch the country between the Barrail range and the Oorung Nuddee. I find that we have been misled here about the recent order from Government, and the appointment of the assistant to the deputy-commissioner, of which I reported to you in my last. Instead of orders to enforce the Income-tax, the order is to report upon its operation and the mode of carrying it out; and Mr. Edwards, instead of imposing the last, as he was represented to have come to do, has only to inquire into the causes of all the outbreak. He need not inquire far; the same people who reported falsely of his errand can tell him that the introduction of the Income-tax was so managed as to be the cause of the rebellion. While he is about it, he may as well inquire what we want an increased police force for, now that we have all the soldiers to catch and destroy the rebels. I hear, among other things, that Jowai has been chosen for a military and civil post, and that several new roads are about to be laid out, and a bridge thrown over the Mungol river.

DELHI, April 28.—In one of my recent communications I mentioned that the local authorities had prohibited the Baptist missionaries from preaching in front of the city kotwallie. The matter was, very properly, represented by the Reverend Thomas Evans to the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, and, in reply, his honour has directed that there shall be no interference with the missionaries. This reply, just and proper as it is, is very encouraging to the missionaries. The heat within the last few days has greatly increased, and with it sickness; the latter is, doubtless, due mainly to the great difference in the temperature of day and night, but there are other ailments—some reported cases of cholera—which I cannot help attributing to the enormous quantity of vegetables and fruit devoured by the natives. It is not at all rare to see a child of five or six years old gnawing away at a huge pumpkin, melon, or cucumber, and taking two or three others after the first is finished; he will then take a deep draught of water, lie down in the hot wind and sleep. If he awakes pretty comfortable, he repeats the feat, only varying it by sleeping out exposed to the cool air. No wonder, then, that the interior gets out of order, and a case of cholera is reported, which sends consternation into the minds of others, and produces other cases, until at last the dreadful scourge is raging to a frightful extent. There can be no doubt about it that these bowel complaints invariably appear with the fruit and native vegetable season, and with it disappear.

STORM AND EARTHQUAKE AT PORT BLAIR.—For some time past we have had a continuance of heavy gales veering from south-east to north-east, and accompanied by an unusually heavy fall of rain. What with excessive moisture acting upon the debris of houses and huts blown down, and the generally dilapidated state of nature from the effects of the wind, Port Blair presents anything but a lively or inviting appearance; nor has the gale passed away without leaving traces of more melancholy association in loss of life. Among other buildings destroyed was a portion of the convicts' barracks; fortunately, it was vacant at the time, or the loss of life must have been considerable; as it was, one man was very seriously injured on whom the debris fell. Almost at the same time, and without giving any previous indications of instability, another building succumbed to the force of the gale. Unfortunately two convicts, at the time seeking shelter under its lee, were buried in its ruins; and so crushed and mangled were their forms when withdrawn from the mass of ruin which had buried them that they were hardly recognizable; their deaths must have been instantaneous. Not long since some rather severe shocks of earthquake were felt here. The first few shocks, though very perceptible, causing the bamboo huts, and even wooden houses, to vibrate considerably, were but the precursors of a far more serious upheaving of the earth. The ground cracked in several places which opened and closed with the motion of the earth, leaving eventually several slight fissures as reminiscences of the shocks. In the first instance, and before the cause of the motion was ascertained, some men of the naval brigade on guard at the gaol, and who were seated in the verandah of a hut, feeling it sway to and fro, were seized with the idea that the convicts were endeavouring to capsize the hut; under this impression the men seized their arms and leaped to the ground. The convicts who were seated on the ground had not felt the shock, but on seeing the guard jumping among them, musket in hand, they were seized with a panic, imagining that they were about to be fired on. In fear and trembling they beat a quick retreat, and endeavoured to conceal themselves under the various sheds and huts about the place. A more severe shock than the first enlightened the guard as to the cause of the disturbance, and ending their alarm as to a rising upon them among the prisoners, caused a cessation of the panic which at first bid fair to terminate in bloodshed. Since the heavy rain, and still heavier gale, which so lately visited our shores, Port Blair has been more healthy; sickness, which was fast spreading among the convicts, has ceased, and the colony may be said to be exceedingly healthy, unusually so indeed, for this time of the year. It is said that Port Blair is to be constituted a penal settlement for all India, including British Burmah, and the Straits Settlements. If this be so there will be such a heterogeneous crew in the place, as perhaps no convict establishment ever previously presented; Chinese and Madrasses; Bengalees and Burmans; Malays and Punjabees; Mussulmans and Hindus; Christians, Jews, and Buddhists;—verily a Babel.—Englishman, May 3.

DARJEELING, April 29.—For the last ten days we have had most fearful weather, the heaviest rain that has been seen at this time of the year for years, while snow even fell on the opposite hills yesterday. Everything here is a century behind the smallest station in Bengal; both Monghyr and Bhaugulpore are far in advance in every respect. There is neither ball, nor reading-room, nor hotel in the station; a shut-up theatre near the bazaar, or rather in it, and a miserable little church that only contains half the people, are all our public buildings, but then we have heaps of shops. Messrs. Cecil Beadon and Laing are expected here shortly. To find the post-office is a matter of no little difficulty, and to get a regular mail is more so. It is said no respectable person will take the Postmastership at this place, and all is managed, or rather mismanaged, by a native on a miserable pittance, while no Inspector has been here for many months. I saw the sun for ten minutes to-day, a Darjeeling wonder. I am informed that since Saturday eleven inches of rain has fallen. A bank is very much wanted here, as every one saves all he can, not for rainy days, as we have nothing but rainy days here, but to invest ultimately in some tea speculation.

SEEBAGUR, April 24.—The party of Nagas who lately murdered a man, and very severely wounded two sepoy of the 42nd Regiment N.I., at Burpethan, and then fled, leaving no trace of the route they had taken, have since, by quarrelling among themselves, given indication of their whereabouts. It appears that the disputes among them became so warm that a fight ensued near Dhodur Allie, in which one of their number was slain. When this became known to the authorities steps were immediately taken to follow up the Nagas, and a reward was offered by the Deputy Commissioner for their apprehension, but up to the time of writing no news has been received of the success or otherwise of the tracking party, or whether the reward offered had induced the villagers to turn out and apprehend the offenders. With the exception of the occasional descent of a marauding party, such as those from the hills, we may be said to be tolerably quiet in these parts, and should General Showers succeed in catching the fomentors and leaders in the disturbances in the Jynteah and Cossyah hills the effect will be felt very advantageously here, and will in all probability serve as a check upon the disaffected among the Abors and Nagas for some time, or, at any rate, until forgetfulness of the lesson taught their neighbours, or the temptation offered to looting parties by the absence of troops and police, is more than they can withstand. We are expecting some change in the executive up here, consequent on the alterations which are being made—or perhaps I should say, are rumoured as being, or to be made—in the political and revenue staff of these provinces. We hear rumours up here of Assam, Sylhet, Cachar, Goalpara, and, in fact, all the petty States hereabout, being placed under one Chief Commissioner of the North-Eastern Provinces. It would doubtless be a good move; and though it might not, perhaps, pay at the outset, a strong government would create confidence, and do more to ensure quiet than anything else. Moreover, the European population is daily increasing, as is that of the natives of Bengal, and it is through their means that these provinces will become, in the course of time, a far from unimportant portion of the Indian empire.

BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—At a general meeting of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, held May 6th, the Hon. W. S. Fitzwilliam, President, in the chair, the election by the committee of Messrs. Pereira and Co., Messrs. Wiseman, Snend and Co., and Messrs. Howard Brothers of Mirzapore (as Mofussil members), was confirmed, and Mr. H. E. Braddon, proposed by Mr. Bullen, seconded by Mr. Mackay, was admitted a member. The President then addressed the meeting in an eloquent speech, tendering his resignation. The Chairman having requested the meeting to proceed to the election of a committee for the current year in the place of himself and colleagues, whose term of service had expired, the votes were taken as recorded by the Secretary, and the choice of the following gentlemen was declared, viz., Mr. J. N. Bullen, President; Mr. E. D. Kilburn, Vice-president; Mr. W. Maitland, Mr. A. Walker, Mr. D. C. Mackey, Mr. Seth A. Apcar, Mr. J. G. Whitney. Mr. Bullen thanked the meeting for the honour of electing him a second time as their president, and accepted the office with the assurance that his best exertions would be devoted to the duties of his appointment, trusting that he and his colleagues would receive the cordial support of the members in their endeavours to advance the interests of the chamber and to maintain the position it now deservedly holds in public estimation. The question having been raised as to who should fill the office of Vice-president should Mr. Kilburn decline to accept it, and whether the practice of electing the member who stood next in order of votes should be adhered to, the meeting was of opinion that the practice was objectionable and should be discontinued, and the following proposition of Mr. Bullen's was unanimously adopted, that in the event of members who may be elected as president and vice-president of the chamber declining to accept those offices there shall be fresh elections for those appointments.

THE COMMISSARIAT.—We (Englishman) understand that H. E. the Commander-in-Chief is desirous of having the Commissariat Department brought under the direct control of the head of the army; and also of having as much of the public works as are of a military character made over to, and henceforth kept under, the direction of the same authority. These changes, if conceded, would involve an immense and really formidable increase of work, both personal and departmental, under the direction of the Commander-in-Chief; and, whatever may be the expansive power of the present incumbent's zeal and administrative capacity, we cannot help remembering, within our experience, the demonstrations that have been given of how little a Commander-in-Chief in India can do if he likes, and yet keep the system going, as it were, in some kind of way. Sir Hugh Rose may be able, in addition to the vast quantity of work which the primary duties of his high office now impose upon him, to take under his control, and direct efficiently, the Commissariat Department and a large portion of the public works; but we much doubt whether his successor, whoever he may be, will be either willing or able to undertake the work the present chief proposes to leave under his control; nor do we believe that a succession of Commanders-in-Chief will be found capable of sustaining it.

MILITARY BUDGET.—The Hurkaru says that Colonel Balfour, before he left Calcutta, submitted to Government an elaborate review of the military budget estimates of the three Presidencies for the ensuing official year, to which are annexed in detail the estimates as revised in the Military Finance Department. The estimates on the part of the authorities amounted to £12,680,000, without making provision for the payment of stores, ordnance, &c., to be obtained from England, to the amount of 28 lakhs. Colonel Balfour reduced the whole sum to £12,220,000, thus showing a saving of £460,000.

THE STATISTICAL REPORTS on the past and present state of the colonies and India, issued by authority, show British India in 1859 to have had an area of 851,038 square miles, other states 625,278, total, 1,476,316. With our numerous surveys these figures are probably not far wrong, but the population is under-estimated, British India, 135,442,911 souls, native states, 50,465,366; total, 185,908,277. The number of colleges and schools in British India is set down at 11,495, with 166,742 pupils in daily attendance, and a total cost of £243,572. These figures only mislead. They include neither indigenous nor non-aided schools, and the sum is not all contributed by the State, but partly by the people themselves, from the one per cent. cess on the land-tax. When will an attempt be made to collect reliable statistics in India?

THE OFFICIAL DEFINITION OF "PIECE GOODS," in reference to Mr. Laing's recent budget, is that the expression includes all articles of that denomination, whether cotton, silk, or mixed.

RAO SAHIB.—The Delhi Gazette learns from Lahore that some strong evidence has been elicited from the Akbary Sherishtadar at Gwalior against Rao Sahib. While the Rao held Bithoor he directed an English lady and gentleman to be executed. In reference to the latter the brutal deed was carried out in his presence—but the unfortunate lady was spared for some time. While the Futteghar fugitives were making for Cawnpore the Rao despatched a gun to sink the boat in which they sailed.

THE ARTILLERY.—In a military letter from the Secretary of State, published for general information, the following occurs:—"I am informed that the Supernumerary Lieut-colonels in the Royal Artillery are to be absorbed into the regiment as vacancies occur. This is to be done in accordance with the principle laid down for the reduction of the Supernumerary General Officers in the Royal Warrant of the 6th October, 1854, clause 4, viz., by making only one promotion for every three vacancies. A similar rule must be established with regard to the Indian artillery. Promotions may be made in succession to Lieut-colonel Sir R. Shakespear. The two next vacancies among the Lieut-colonels will lapse, should there be that number of seconded officers of the same grade at the time of their occurrence."

THE STEAMER "CORINGA."—We are glad to observe from the Madras Times the success of the first steamer, the Coringa, sent by the Calcutta and Burmah Company to Bombay along the Malabar Coast, in accordance with the arrangements we recently mentioned. She touched at Cochin, Beypore, Calicut, Tellicherry, Cannanore, and Mangalore. Now that the railway is open through from Madras to Beypore, passengers to England from Calcutta, who have time to spare should follow Sir B. Frere's example and go home via the Neilgherries, Beypore, and Bombay.—Friend of India.

THE JOHN LAWRENCE HALL.—The Lahore Chronicle gives an account of the laying of the foundation stone of the "John Lawrence Hall" in the Gardens of the Horticultural Society, Lahore, on the 28th ultimo. Mr. D. F. Macleod, the Financial Commissioner, who presided, said:—"There is probably no part of India so intimately associated with one distinguished name as is the Punjab with the name of Lawrence, in the persons of the eminent brothers, who though selected wholly independently of each other, the one for the Punjab proper, the other for the Trans-Sutlej States, were ultimately associated in organising the entire administration of the united province, over which the fortune of war had made us rulers. While the lofty and generous spirit and keen perception of the lamented Sir Henry brought out our Napiers, our Edwardes, our Nicholsons, our Chamberlains, our Lakes, and others who have distinguished themselves, especially in times of trouble and difficulty, the ripe knowledge and sagacity of Sir John have impressed themselves indelibly on every detail of the administration." The building has been designed by Mr. George Stone who built the Masonic Hall at Anarkullee. Mr. Macleod most properly suggested that Lahore ought not to be without a memorial of Sir Henry Lawrence also, and that another hall for this purpose should be erected, forming with Sir John's the Lawrence Institute.

THE HOUSE OF MAJOR TERNAN, Deputy Commissioner of Jhansie, was broken into during his temporary absence in the district, by a large gang of dacoits armed to the teeth, and such of the property as they could not carry away was destroyed. An unsuccessful attempt was also made to fire the bungalow. The police guard on the premises are implicated. Major Ternan is the most uncompromising foe that the rebels have in Bundelcund.

CHANGES.—Mr. William Grey is formally appointed a temporary ordinary member of the Supreme Council, and Mr. E. C. Bayley secretary in the Home Department. Mr. Grey's appointment is in reality permanent, his former office thus being permanently filled up. Mr. Harington acts as quasi-legal member, so that Sir Bartle Frere's successor has yet to be appointed from Madras or Bombay.

ENGLISH MISSIONARIES IN MONGOLIA.—We see from the Amoor Gazette that French and English missionaries have made their appearance at Urga, in Mongolia, with the intention, doubtless, of instructing the natives in the tenets of the Christian religion. The priests of the Dalai Lama offer a strenuous opposition to the new-comers, notwithstanding that the latter are, to a certain extent, sanctioned by the provisions of the latest treaties with China.—Friend of India.

OPIMUM CULTIVATION IN SHAHABAD.—A special correspondent of the Bengal Hurkaru has recently exposed the most abominable system and practice, in connection with opium cultivation in Shahabad, ever held up to public indignation. The facts of the case are as follows:—The opium ryots never receive but little more than half of their advances. There are three principal and several minor occasions during the season on which they have to see their native superiors out of the little they do receive—for the petals of the poppy they are supposed to be paid at the rate of Rs. 10 per maund, for leaves of the first quality; Rs. 7-8 per maund for those of the second quality; and Rs. 5 per maund for those of the third quality; while the fact is, they are paid the price of the second quality for first quality leaves, the price of the third quality for second quality leaves, and the difference is pocketed by the Gomashtah. If they raise their voices in complaint they are harassed on every occasion; their opium is not correctly weighed, consequently they lose every year a large portion of many months' labour, and the value of what they lose is shared between the Amilabs: they do not get even half of that to which they are entitled when the period of payment arrives. The amount they thus receive from Government for their opium, minus all these deductions, is but sorry compensation for the trouble and expense which the rearing of the poppy costs. Of the one-half which they receive from Government of what is due to them, a little more than one-fourth remains to them after the various extortions have been practised, and out of this one-fourth of the one half. They have to pay their rent to the zemindar, and feed themselves and their families. They keep themselves alive by sowing what they like between the removal of the poppy crops and the sowing again of the poppy seed. If permission to do this were withheld, there would be nothing but utter destruction before them. It is to push starvation from them that their children are stealthily sold. "Of course, sir," they said, "it is very painful; it is as if we tore our own hearts out with our own hands, and dreadful sorrow and misery are caused thereby; but what are we to do? Their mothers mourn for them, especially for their daughters, as for the dead; but God is merciful, and time brings consolation." Here, indeed, is a chapter of wrongs and oppressions! How emphatically do the poor ryots say:—"We do not, therefore, feel interested in the cultivation of the poppy!" Conversing on one occasion with a powerful Rajpoot ryot, who had lashed himself into a fury by the recital of his numerous wrongs, the correspondent heard him propound the following startling and significant query:—"Khodavund, is oppression to pass as an inheritance from father to son and be transmitted as a legacy from generation to generation (nuslan-bad-nuslan) for ever? A day of reckoning will surely come."

COINS OF CASHMERE.—According to the Bombay Review the account given in the London Spectator about some coins of the Maharajah of Cashmere, which have been presented to the British Museum, and which bear the inscription of I. H. S., with the sign of the Christian cross, in acknowledgment of the suzerainty of a Christian Government, is incorrect. A rupee bearing the inscription I. H. S., and the cross, of a date prior to the Punjab war, has been brought to light. It was cast by Hurree Singh, Rajah and ruler of the district of Hazara, who insisted that the English conquered all nations by the symbols of the cross and the letters I. H. S., and therefore ordered his money to be thus stamped, and surmounted by the lotus leaf.—Friend of India.

THE TRANSFER OF SUMBULPORE FROM BENGAL to the Central Provinces, which we some time ago announced, is notified in the Gazette of May 3rd. "The district of Sumbulpore, with its dependencies, is from this date taken under the immediate authority and management of the Governor-general in Council."

CAPTAIN R. BEADON is appointed aide-de-camp on the personal staff of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal.

SIMLA.—There will be some squalls from the hills about Simla, if we are rightly informed. It appears, as stated to us, that amongst a number of soldiers who have arrived at the Presidency to go home to England on board the Aliquis—the last troop-ship of the season—several have arrived without the necessary papers to enable the authorities here to settle their accounts, or in any way to arrange the customary preliminaries for their embarkation for Europe. As the case of these soldiers now stands, and according to every rule and precedent in these matters, the men cannot proceed to England by the Aliquis; and she being, as we have said above, the last troop-ship to leave the port, they must, unless the Government will pass an exceptional order in the case, remain in Calcutta till next cold weather. The commanding officers of the regiments to which these soldiers belong are, we hear, to be all handed up by the Government here to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who doubtless will take the necessary measures for discovering at whose door the neglect in the present instance justly lies; and for preventing, as far as is in his power, a recurrence of similar inconvenience, and, in all probability, unnecessary expense to the State. We are, however, led to suppose that the Supreme Government here will pass an order for the embarkation of these soldiers, leaving the adjustment of their accounts, and the preparation of the necessary papers for transmission to England, to be arranged hereafter, as can best be done. The preparation of soldiers' papers in a correct manner, and according to established form, is a matter of such little difficulty that we cannot understand how, without great negligence, the present untoward difficulty and inconvenience to the Government could have occurred.—Englishman.

DR. FORSYTH'S DEPARTURE causes the following temporary promotions till the Amalgamation scheme is published. Inspector-general of Hospitals, John McClelland to be Principal Inspector-general; Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals, John Birnie Dickson, to be Inspector-general Surgeon; Major James Alexander Guise to be Deputy Inspector-general.

FOUR ANNAS FROM UMRITSUR TO LAHORE.—The Punjab authorities have shown their usual wisdom in fixing the third-class fares on the Lahore and Umritsur Railway so low that native modes of conveyance are superseded. The East Indian Railway must come to this yet. So popular is the railway with the Punjabees that the crowds who flock to it cannot be accommodated. Even respectable women travel in open day. A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says:—"I asked one man why he did not go to Lahore by ekka? That his father and grandfather had used an ekka before him, and that surely he ought not to depart from the manners and custom of his ancestors. It is more easy to conceive than express the look of supercilious contempt with which he answered:—'Ekkas, indeed! who would think of being shaken to pieces on an ekka for seven or eight hours, when he can go to Lahore in less than two hours, in the greatest comfort, and for four annas?' That is the talisman which has charmed the Punjabee. Four annas from Umritsur to Lahore in a hundred minutes!"

EXTENSIVE FIRE AT PROME.—We have been favoured with a telegraphic communication from Prome, but a considerable delay has taken place in its transmission, consequent upon an interruption in the line. On the 19th April a conflagration broke out in the southern quarter of the town. A strong southerly wind was blowing at the time, which greatly assisted in spreading the flames. A considerable portion of the town, including the Court-house and several of the public buildings, have been partially destroyed, and the fire was still raging when this message was despatched.

THE SUPPOSED NANA.—The Sindian is glad to learn that the unfortunate man who has been so long imprisoned on suspicion of being the Nana has been sent to Bombay, and trusts this step is preliminary to his final release, with proper compensation for his detention.

LADY FRANKLIN, the widow of the great Arctic navigator, has arrived in Calcutta.

AN ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER.—We regret to announce an accident, attended with loss of life, which occurred on the river, on Saturday, the 3rd inst. Two soldiers stationed at Barrackpore had arrived by train from Serampore at Howrah. Unwilling to await the departure of the steam-ferry they got on board a pansway, and directed the rowers to shove off into the stream. The ebb-tide was then just making down, and as a gale of wind was blowing from the south, the water was exceedingly rough; far too much for the safety of the ordinary river craft. On arriving about midway between the Howrah and Calcutta shores a sudden gust of wind, of more than ordinary violence capsized the boat, both men being precipitated into the water. The manjee, who was evidently prepared for what occurred, never let go his hold of the steering oar, which was made fast to the stern of the boat, by which means he not only kept himself well above water, but was enabled to render assistance to one of his passengers, whose life he saved. The other, a lance corporal and assistant schoolmaster, would appear to have been swept under the boat at once, by the strong ebb tide, for he was not seen to rise to the surface after the capsizing of the boat. On the circumstances being made known to the police instructions were promptly issued for every exertion being made to recover the body of the drowned man.—Englishman.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—Rumours of a somewhat alarming nature regarding the Assam Tea Company have been afloat during the week, but the shareholders may rest assured that the unsatisfactory management spoken of in the Hurkaru of the 6th instant has solely to do with past profits, and not with present or future liabilities. So far from lowering the value of the shares, the facts elicited tend to show that the operations of the company have been far more successful than the proprietors are aware of. The concern has not merely done well, but better; not only paid handsome dividends, but helped to swell private fortunes. Nothing that has been divided ought to have been kept back, but a good deal has been withheld which ought to have been shared by the whole body of stockholders. In other words, the complaint is, that seed, and labour, and other necessities needful to commence and carry on tea cultivation, have been furnished by the Assam Company to one or two adjoining concerns, out of pure neighbourly kindness. There are men with no bowels for irregular charity, and one of them has called upon the directors for explanations, which are not likely to be voluntarily forthcoming. When we mention that Mr. Peterson, the barrister, is a holder of something like a couple of hundred shares in the Assam Company, we hint a fact that Calcutta proprietors are likely to take advantage of. Let them call upon him to take the necessary steps for summoning a general meeting, and if they invite the press to attend, the public are likely to know all about it. In the mean time we repeat that the shares are really more valuable than the owners of them calculate upon.—Overland Hurkaru.

THE REVENUE BOARD.—The rumour regarding the abolition of the Board of Revenue has again revived. It is said that a despatch has lately been received by the Government of India from the home authorities to that effect. On the abolition of the above-mentioned institution, the revenue branch of that office will be made over to the financial department, and the opium, salt, and customs branch to the direct control of the commissioner of customs—an office to be shortly created under the new Consolidated Customs Act, which is still on the legislative anvil, and will soon be formed into shape. It is also rumoured that Mr. Grote, now a member of the board, will be appointed commissioner of customs under the provisions of the aforesaid Act.—Hurkaru.

MR. C. BEADON.—It is rumoured that Mr. Cecil Beadon, C.B., will shortly leave the Presidency to reside temporarily at Bhaugulpore, but nothing definite has yet been arranged. On the 8th May his Honour gave the first of a series of public breakfasts which brought together many of our leading men.

MESSRS. JACKSON AND CAMPBELL.—We (Englishman) learn, with reference to the appointment, by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, of Messrs. Jackson and Campbell to be Special Commissioners, with powers of Collector and Judge in addition to those of Commissioner, for the disposal of all cases under Act X. of 1859, in Jessore and Nuddea, that the Government of India has directed that, inasmuch as the appointments made are of a temporary character, these officers are to retain their substantive appointments while employed on this special duty. The Bengal Government proposed that Messrs. Jackson and Campbell should vacate the appointments they previously held, and that, while employed in this new capacity, they should each receive an allowance of Rs. 3,000 a month. To this the Government of India has objected, on the score of its entailing unnecessary expense, and has ordered the retention by these gentlemen of the respective offices held by them; at the same time sanctioning the disbursement to them of Rs. 500 a month each, as a deputation allowance, which it is intended shall cover all charges that they would otherwise be entitled to, as "travelling allowance." By this means a great saving of public money will be effected, as the officers appointed to officiate for Messrs. Jackson and Campbell, in their substantive appointments, will only draw half the emoluments of their respective offices.

BONUS SCHEME.—If another bonus and retirement scheme is to be sent out from England by the home authorities, for the officers of the late company's armies, we can throw up plenty of straws to encourage the former, and to show them what a tendency there is on the part of the latter to accept and retire for a very moderate consideration. Here is one, for instance, to show how the wind of despondency and anxiety to quit the new kind of service blows. A gallant and distinguished officer of the Bombay army, a "Victoria Cross" man, disgusted with the new state of things, and seeing his professional career so damaged as not to be worth continuing, has thrown up the service without bonus or pension, and retired into private business—we believe in connection with a horse-breeding company on a large scale in the Bombay presidency. We make the home authorities a present of this fact, to encourage them in the preparation of their new bonus scheme, which cannot but prove a "decided success."—Englishman.

MAJOR RABAN.—We understand that Major Raban, who went to Patna in the Mirzapore, to join his new appointment, has been recalled by a telegram, and is ordered to Assam. Major Pughe is transferred to Patna.

THE KING OF THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.—Lieut.-colonel R. C. Tytler, of the late 38th N.I., has been appointed to succeed Captain Haughton as King of the Andaman Islands, with a civil list of Rs. 1,250 a month, on which to maintain the pomp and splendour of royalty. His Majesty, the new monarch, was offered his island kingdom by a telegraphic message, at Simla, accepted at once, and reached Calcutta in eight days, en route to his dominions, which we are certain he will govern with vigour and efficiency.

QUARTZ ROCK.—A specimen of quartz rock has been submitted by Mr. Le Souef for analysis. The following is the result of the examination:—"A bottle of crushed quartz said to contain gold was sent to me some time ago by Dr. Birdwood. The quartz weighed, when submitted to final examination, 1lb. 12½ oz. avoird. It was washed very carefully four times over, the last time producing nothing. From the residue, consisting chiefly of magnetic iron sand and gold dust, the former was removed with the magnet, and the gold extracted from the sand by amalgamation. The gold left on distilling off the quicksilver was fused into a globule, which weighed 738 of a grain, or nearly ¾ grain. This gives a yield of gold at the rate of 920 grains, or 1-11-12 oz. to a ton." Of course, this result would only prove remunerative in the hands of a company employing the most modern gold extracting machinery, but in Australia this yield would be considered sufficient to pay a very handsome dividend to the shareholders.

THE LARGE AMERICAN SHIP Shakspeare, which left this on the 29th April, was compelled, from her great draft of water, to anchor on this side of the James and Mary, to wait for water on the coming spring tides. Owing to the very severe weather she has lost two anchors, and has now been obliged to return to Calcutta.

SIR BARTLE FRERE'S LIBRARY.—We much regret to hear that all Sir Bartle Frere's valuable library, the papers connected with his administration in Scinde, and a great many other valuables, were lost in the Turon. This vessel is now reported to be quite under water, so that there is not the slightest chance left of anything being saved.—Hurkaru.

CAPT. DONALDSON.—We know of no appointment more to the credit of Sir Hugh Rose than that of Capt. Donaldson, barrack master, Ferozepore, to the Station Staff of Kussowlie. Captain Donaldson, a really good and deserving officer, had not an iota of interest, was unpassed in the languages, and certainly with small hope of employment, when, one bright morning, Sir Hugh rode into the cantonment of Ferozepore, and expressed himself much pleased with the barrack department. Three days later Captain Donaldson received a letter from his Excellency's Military Secretary, asking for testimonials, &c., &c. These sent, the first available appointment was given to him.

THE CALCUTTA AND MUTLAH RAILWAY.—On the 15 miles of the Calcutta and Mutlah Railway now open, in the week ending 5th April, the number of passengers carried was 2,755, of whom 48 were first and second class. In the week ending 19th April the number rose to 38 single and 110 return first and second class, and 3,828 third class.

JULPIGOREE.—We announced some short time since that two companies of the 18th Regiment Native Infantry, stationed at Julpigoree, had been detached into Kooch Behar on the requisition of the rajah of that State. Letters lately received from Julpigoree state, however, that no troops have as yet been sent, as was at one time intended, from that station into Kooch Behar, and that the two companies which were warned for that duty some time ago still remained with regimental head-quarters, no further orders having been received on the subject of their moving.

A CURIOUS SORT OF SUPERSTITION has prevailed amongst the natives in reference to the Income-tax. They believe that a blight has fallen upon the Council which imposed it, and will remain until the tax is repealed. They point to the deaths of Messrs. Wilson and Ritchie and the illness of Messrs. Beadon and Laing. Now that the tax upon incomes under Rs. 500 is repealed, the native mind will probably be reassured both as to the personal fate of members of Council and as to the genuineness of the prosperity which Mr. Laing depicts.

THE NEW COURTS.—It is generally supposed that the new Courts will come into operation by July next, and the Chief Justice is actively engaged in arranging the necessary details.

CASUALTIES AMONG THE SHIPPING.—There are two ships ashore in the Hooghly; one of them, the Glenroy, has been in that condition since Saturday, and the other, the Turon, went on the Fulia Sand on Sunday last.

THE MURDERERS OF MR. HORSELY.—We learn on good authority that the murderers of Mr. Horsely, who met his end so mysteriously last year in Bellary, have been discovered and apprehended by the Thuggee Department. It will be remembered that suspicion fell upon some parties to a suit, the papers concerning which were in Mr. Horsely's outcherry box when this was stolen; but on further inquiry the whole matter appeared inexplicable, no sufficient motive being apparent for the dreadful deed.

JYNTEA.—The Englishman has news from Jyntea to the 25th April, when General Showers' proclamation, followed up by his active military operations, had induced one ringleader to surrender and others to ask for forgiveness. The troops were in good health, Colonel Durnsford alone suffering from fever.

MEERUT has been visited with an epidemic of influenza, which prevails among all classes.

NEW PUBLIC OFFICES AT CALCUTTA.—The Governor-general has appointed a committee to draw up designs for public offices at Calcutta, having the Secretary to the Government of India, in the Public Works Department, as its president.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

POST-OFFICE FRAUD.—The Madras Times says that an extensive post-office fraud, which must have been in course of perpetration for several weeks, has been recently detected at Bangalore by the inspecting postmaster. A bundle of letters with the stamps erased was found at the bottom of a tank. Inquiries were instituted, and the result was that the writer in charge of the office was apprehended on suspicion of embezzlement. No less than five thousand rupees have lately from time to time been lost at this post-office.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF REMARKABLE NATIVE TRIBES.—The Madras Times says that according to instructions received from her Majesty's Government, photographic likenesses of a few characteristic specimens of the more remarkable of the native tribes within the Madras territories have been forwarded to the Great Exhibition in London. One specimen is from Kurnool, ten from Coimbatore, and thirteen from Travancore.

THE HON. H. FORBES, additional member of the Imperial Legislaturo, has resigned his appointment from the 10th inst., and will shortly resign the Madras Civil Service. No successor will be appointed in the Council, as the office was temporary.

MR. F. N. MALTBY will resign his appointment as British Resident of Travancore and Cochin on the 1st June.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GENERAL LE GRAND JACOB.—We regret to see that General le Grand Jacob, K.C.B., of Bombay, has finally resigned the service, and has proceeded home. From his first campaign in the Nerbudda jungles in 1823 down to the close of the rebellion, he did good service, especially in the Southern Mahratta country.

SIND HORSE.—The Bombay Review states that one or two regiments of Sind Horse are to go immediately to Khelat, probably not to help the Ameer but to observe what turn events are taking. The Hurkara asserts that H. M.'s 92nd, 43rd, and Thelwall's Corps, in Calcutta and Barrackpore, are under order for Persia. The former statement is probably correct, but the latter is, we fear, premature. It is the wish of the Calcutta authorities to adopt a policy of non intervention so far as Cabul is concerned, but they may be overruled from home.—Friend of India.

MONUMENTAL FAME.—The Bombay Municipal Commissioners draw a touching picture of the condition of the statues of Cornwallis and Wellesley. The Commissioners have been asked to remove them to new sites in front of the Town-hall, but decline to be held responsible for damage done in the removal to works of art. In the Cornwallis monument, the principal figure has a serious flaw or crack below the left knee; the end of the sword scabbard is broken off; and there is a crack in the lower part of the base of the small column by the side of the statue. Of the two seated female figures at the base of the monument, both noses are gone; the left arm of one is a bad restoration, and of this restoration, the hand is broken off; the figures of the right hand of one figure, and the figures of both hands of the other are more or less broken and mutilated; the drapery of both has sustained injuries. In the Wellesley monument the injuries by accident are still more serious. The right hand of the principal figure, with wreath, is a plaster restoration. The female figure has lost the forefinger of the left hand; the right arm is a bad restoration; and the whole appears to have been broken across the body. The male figure has lost the little finger of left hand, and the great toe of left foot. The tails of the lion and tiger have both been fractured in two or three places. In Calcutta only bronze statues, with one exception, are exposed to the injurious effects of the weather.

CHINA.

CENSUS OF HONG KONG.—The census returns of Hong Kong for 1861 show that the population has increased from 86,000 in 1858 to 119,000 in 1861. There are 1,557 Europeans and Americans, or 35 less than before, owing to the opening of the new ports. The number of merchants' houses and first-class buildings assessed at £100 per annum and upwards, is 412. The mortality tables show the rate among the Chinese in Victoria to be slightly below 1 per cent., the number of deaths being 616 in a population of 61,958. This computation, however, is exclusive of 15 deaths in gaol, 48 bodies found exposed, and 16 deaths in civil hospitals; these, however, would only bring the percentage of deaths in the colony up to 1.12.

THE CHINESE OF SINGAPORE, after excising cholera, thus shewed their gratitude at its disappearance from the island. For three days all the Chinese houses in the streets were lined with Turkey reds and grey shirtings, and at night were brilliantly illuminated. Long processions paraded the town—one nearly two miles long. The amount expended in these displays is said to be over 30,000 doles.

LOSS OF THE "EMMA."—The American ship Emma, Capt. Sherman, from Macao, bound to Singapore, was totally lost on the Paracels on the 13th February, at 4.30 A.M., two days after leaving Macao. We are sorry to state that this shipwreck has been attended by a great loss of life. The vessel struck aft first at low water, and immediately broke in half. Several attempts were made to get ropes fast to the rocks, the boats were lowered, and quickly capsized and broken up. Captain Sherman and two of his crew were last seen drifting out to sea, and no hope can scarcely now be entertained of their safety. Many of the men refused to leave the wreck, and were killed or drowned when the bowsprit and fore part of the ship fell in. The chief officer, five of the crew, and twenty-two Chinese managed to get to Amphitrite Island, where they have remained for fifty-four days. They have been living on roots and leaves scorched, nothing else, the whole time. Numberless boats were on hand, but none would take the crew away, though two or three Chinese were landed in Hainan. At last the boat in which they have arrived in this harbour happened to call at the island, and consented to bring them up here for the small sum of two thousand dollars. The boat left the Paracels for this on the 8th current.—Daily Press, April 17.

POPULATION OF HONG KONG.—The census returns of Hong Kong for 1861 show that the population has increased from 86,000 in 1858, to 119,000 in 1861. There are 1,557 Europeans and Americans, or 35 less than before, owing to the opening of the new ports. The number of merchants' houses and first-class buildings assessed at £100 per annum and upwards, is 412. The mortality tables show the rate among the Chinese in Victoria to be slightly below 1 per cent., the number of deaths being 616 in a population of 61,958. This computation, however, is exclusive of 15 deaths in gaol, 48 bodies found exposed, and 16 deaths in civil hospitals; these, however, would only bring the percentage of deaths in the colony up to 1.12.

COTTON.—The Ceylon Times calls attention to the cotton grown in Ceylon from New Orleans seed, and declares it equal in value in the Home Market to that which is imported direct from New Orleans. In the Suffragam district as much as 350 and 400 lbs. can be produced from one acre of land.

THE STRAITS.

THE DUTCH have been fighting for nearly three years in Banjermassin, in the south of Borneo, where so many missionaries were massacred in 1859 by fanatic Mussulmans. At last they have captured Hidayat, the Nana Sahib of the place, and brought him in Batavia. All his relations have since surrendered, so that only a few of the ringleaders are still at large.

FAMINE IN JAVA.—We learn from the Java papers that a famine prevails in the Eastern provinces of the island, in the very districts where the culture system, so highly praised, is said to have caused so much wealth. Rice was selling at twice its usual price and so the Resident of Surabaya had persuaded the Chinese rice merchants not to ask more than f. 12 a picul for what they had on hand. Banjermassin, in South Borneo, was quiet, and the directors of a private company had gone there to begin the working of the coal mines, which have been abandoned since the massacre of 1859. Mr. Uhlenback, the new minister for the colonies, has decided against the introduction of railways into Java.

NAVAL DOCKYARD NEAR SINGAPORE.—The Straits Times says H. M.'s Government have resolved to construct a Naval Dockyard at or near Singapore capable of refitting the largest frigates. The question of the English navy force in the East is proceeding more slowly than that of the army, but now that the Indian Navy is doomed, we may expect its final settlement. Bombay and Singapore will thus be the dockyards; ships on the African and Indian stations going to the former and on the China and Pacific to the latter. At present our frigates in the Pacific are refitted at San Francisco.

EUROPEAN POLICE.—According to the Straits Times, the King of Siam wishes to obtain the services of two of the European police inspectors from Singapore, for the purpose of organising a new police force at Bangkok on the same system as our own. The inspectors will have the rank of commissioner and assistant-commissioner. Some fifty Madrassees are also to be retained to serve as peons and to form the basis of a new force.

HINDOSTANI.—To remove a misconception, a general order announces that, although the "Ikwanossafa" is the interpreter's standard test book in Hindostani, the "Bagh-o-Bahar" and "Betul Fucheesi" remain, as usual, the books for the P. H. examination.

SUPERNUMERARY LIEUT. COLONELS, ARTILLERY.

No. 494.—The foll. paras. of a military letter, from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 124 of March 24, are published for general information:—

1. With your letter [No. 4], dated Jan. 8 last, you transmit correspondence relative to promotions to the rank of lieut. col. in the art., so long as there are seconded officers of that rank borne upon the rolls of the corps. In your communication to the C. in C., dated Jan. 4, you express an opinion that it is not intended to retain the five supernumerary lieut. cols. since the seconding of cols. and lieut. cols. has been discontinued.

2. I presume that the number of supernumerary officers alluded to refers to the field officers, that is, both to cols. and lieut. cols.

3. I am informed that the supernumerary lieut. cols. in the royal art. are to be absorbed into the regt. as vacancies occur. This is to be done in accordance with the principle laid down for the reduction of the supernumerary general officers in the Royal Warrant of Oct. 6, 1854, Clause 4, viz., by making only one promotion for every three vacancies.

4. A similar rule must be established with regard to the Indian artillery.

5. Promotions may be made in succession to Lieut. col. Sir R. Shakespear. The two next vacancies among the lieut. cols. will lapse, should there be that number of seconded officers of the same grade at the time of their occurrence.

6. This arrangement should be notified for general information.

May 1.—Capt. R. Beadon to be A.D.C. on the personal staff of the lieut. gov.

FORGERY IN THE MOFUSSIL.

Government and Halalodin Mollah, son of Sultan Mollah, on the part of Moonshee Hubeebul Hossein Zemindar, Pergunnah Khosdah versus Kedernath Roy, son of Ramdhon Roy, Bydo cast, age twenty-four years, occupation, physician.

This was a very clear case, and one in which I am happy to find the verdict of the jury in entire conformity with the impression on my own mind. The finding on the prisoner's premises of a large quantity of papers, in regard to which the conclusion of their being forged is quite inevitable, has been fully established by the evidence of Madub Bhattacharjee, a respectable inhabitant of the village, as well as by that of the deputy magistrate's Sheristadar, who was present at the search, and the Burkundauz Gungaranain, distinctly proving that the prisoner at the same time endeavoured to make away with the key of the box in which these papers were stored, which key he had about his person.

The witness Dinonath Sen and Shamachurn Bhattacharjee, leading persons of the village, confirm the presumption arising out of the fact that the prisoner had these papers in his possession by proving that he was an expert penman, likely to do work of that kind, and that persons from distant villages resorted to his house for purposes not apparent, and that his ability as a forger was matter of notoriety. Among the papers found are a quantity of "dokhilas;" that they are forgeries I think the evidence of Modhoo Soodon Roy, Greesch Chunder Banerjee, and Obhoy Churn Mookerjee, satisfactorily proves, in regard to the papers bearing the signature of Moonshee Mohib. The direct evidence of the witness Faratwallah is not, in my opinion, entitled to any consideration; the old man, honestly enough, I believe, but full of a foregone conclusion, merely asseverates his belief that the pottahs are forgeries. And the same remark must be made on the evidence of Harranund Chatterjee, who speaks of the papers bearing Hubeebul Hossein's signature; his statements on this point were quite inconclusive. But in truth the whole of the papers found, when taken together, afford in themselves incontestible proof of their being forgeries. The appearance of the paper, the various stages of preparation, the want of connection between them, and the prisoner, who could have no possible business with so large a collection of papers belonging to different parties, and his own demeanour and statements, are quite conclusive on this point.

There is one part of the case for the prosecutor upon which I look with extreme suspicion, and which in fact I wholly disbelieve. This is the evidence of Dinonath and Mothooranath Mookerjee, who are called to prove their having seen the prisoner engaged in the work of forgery. I think this evidence fictitious, and imported into the case by other influence. The prisoner's defence is that he was employed by a mooktear named Sib Chunder Chatterjee, who on going home for the holidays sent him the papers in question to keep, his house being very far from the head-quarters of the Bongong Sub-division. In support of this statement were called the prisoner's own brother Sitanath, and one Suddanaund Ghose. Their evidence has broken down, and is moreover contradicted by Siboo Chatterjee himself, who not only denies the allegation, but also denies having ever had the prisoner in his employ. There can be no doubt that on this point the witness has committed perjury.

In convicting and passing sentence on the prisoner, I have been guided by the precedents in Vol. II. of the Nizamut Reports, quoted in the previous case of the Khoda Bux Biswas.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

From E. C. BAYLEY, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, to LIEUT.-COL. C. DOUGLAS, Director-General of Telegraphs in India, dated April 26.

The Governor-general in Council has had under consideration the advisability of discontinuing the present plan of transmitting public news from Galle and Bombay on the arrival of the English mails at these ports.

2. Owing to the extended line of telegraphic communication now available between England and India, the precis of news prepared at Bombay and Galle from the English papers does not contain the latest news, and is of little value consequently to the public, while its transmission needlessly takes up the time of the department.

3. In the orders of the 8th March, precedence was given on certain conditions to messages containing English news intended for the press, which, by facilitating the transmission of public news by private enterprise, renders all the more expedient the discontinuance of the Government bulletins.

4. His Excellency in Council directs, therefore, that the transmission, by Government, of public news from Galle and Bombay on the arrival of the English mails at these ports shall cease, effect being given to this change from the 31st of July next, by which time private persons will have had opportunity for making their own arrangements.

5. The Chamber of Commerce will, however, continue to get their messages sent as at present.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CADETSHIPS FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Secretary of State for India has resolved that twenty cadetships shall be annually presented "to the sons of civil and military officers who have served in India." I would most respectfully urge upon Sir Charles Wood the claims of another class of servants, viz., the Home Establishment of the Council of India. In the olden time the directors of the East India Company always had most kindly feelings towards these gentlemen, and numerous presentations were made to their offspring; the like boon to many an old clerk would be most valuable.—I am, your obedient servant, PATERFAMILIAS.

London, June 9, 1862.

LIEUT.-COL. G. E. VOYLE, the Director of the Artillery Depot of Instruction at Meerut, has been appointed officiating successor of Col. V. Eyre, C.B., agent for the manufacture of gunpowder.

YOUNG OFFICERS OUT OF EMPLOY.—There are now (says the Englishman) in the three presidencies of India not far under a thousand young officers, supernumerary, useless, and positively without any prospect of an active military career before them.

INDIA AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

THERE is one case of raw materials which should possess great interest for a people so justly celebrated for the excellence of their woollen fabrics. The case in question contains specimens of the far-famed pashum, or shawl wool, the material of which Cashmere shawls are made. Strictly speaking, it is "a downy substance, found next the skin and below the thick hair of the Thibetan goat." An inferior kind is used in the Punjab, brought from Thibet, Afghanistan, and the south of Persia. The different coloured woollen threads for needlework, from Umritsur, are also worthy of attention. Very beautiful, too, are the specimens of raw silk, some of which are dyed of the most brilliant colours. The whole process is here illustrated, from the moth to the woven garment, and it is evident that, under European supervision, there is a tempting opportunity for the employment of capital in the cultivation of the mulberry to furnish the bombyx mori with its favourite and appropriate food. The collection of marabout feathers from Pegu, and the many graceful combinations of feathers from various parts of India, will probably possess greater attractions for the "world of fashion;" nor will the beetle wings from Akyab fail to excite a certain degree of curiosity. In skins and furs the Indian Court is by no means rich, and the collection of horns is scarcely so good as it might have been. Of far greater commercial value is the assortment of dyes and pigments. Lac from Assam and Cuttack, indigo from various localities, madder from Nepal and the Highlands of Upper Assam, a vegetable green dye from Malda, and many other kinds and colours, are fairly represented, as also are tanning substances from Chittagong, Cuttack, and Calcutta.

Of fibrous substances there is an abundant variety. The place of honour is, of course, reserved for "King Cotton," though, as we observed on a former occasion, for purposes of comparison the case in the eastern annexe will be found the most useful. The madder plant, and a small coarse carpet made of its strong fibre, are seen by the side of different kinds of hemp, chiefly from Jubbulpore and the Punjab. Flax is also shown of excellent quality, and of still greater promise. Many beautiful specimens of timber and fancy wood have been sent from Assam, Cuttack, Oude, Jubbulpore, Chota Nagpore, Akyab, Moumein, Penang, and, above all, from British Burmah. In materials for cordage, whether rope or twine, India is well known to be particularly rich, and a very fair collection has been forwarded to the International Exhibition. In a general way we have already alluded to the gorgeous brocades, the brilliant silks, the ingenious needlework, and the elaborate carving, which are to be seen in their respective cases. Of the arms and jewellery we have spoken slightly, nor can we express any great admiration of the specimens of the modern fine arts exhibited in this Court. The photographs, also, are for the most part very imperfect, and contrast unfavourably with the clearly defined sun-views from the British Colonies, particularly from South Australia. The climate is, of course, largely answerable for this, but probably want of skill is the chief cause of failure. The art is by no means so easy as many persons imagine, and a natural artistic taste is an elemental necessity on the part of a topographer. However, in spite of its numerous shortcomings the Indian Court will furnish ample occupation for a summer afternoon, and those who linger longest amongst its well-filled and well-arranged cases will be the most competent to appreciate the patience, the faculty of order, and the intelligence displayed by Dr. Forbes Watson and his able coadjutor Mr. Aston.

PRISON DISCIPLINE IN BENGAL.

THE June quarterly number of the Journal of the Statistical Society of London contains a very able and comprehensive paper on "The Prison Statistics of Bengal," from the pen of Dr. Mouat, the highest authority on such matters in the service of the Indian Government. In every civilised country there is no subject more frequently and variously canvassed than the proper treatment of criminals. As many different schemes have been recommended, as many contradictory opinions expressed, as on the cosmogony or the millennium. In India, as in England, the question is still in the experimental stage. Prior to 1838 the Indian system was somewhat in advance of public opinion and practice at home, though very far short of the requirements of the present day. Supervision was slack and intermittent; the gaolers were "an ill-paid class of native functionaries, who lived by speculation and the sale of forbidden indulgences;" and so comfortable were the general arrangements, that among the natives themselves a prison was familiarly called the father-in-law's house. In that year a committee—of which Lord Macaulay was a member, and Sir J. P. Grant the secretary—was appointed to consider the whole subject of gaol management in India. Nothing, however, came of their excellent recommendations, beyond instituting the office of Inspector-general of Prisons. The duty of this officer was to check all unnecessary expenditure, to render the labour of the convict as remunerative as circumstances would permit, and generally to superintend the outlay of all sums of money for the construction or alteration of gaols; but their immediate supervision remained in the hands of the sessions judges and the commissioners of the non-regulation provinces. In November, 1855, the choice of the Government fell upon Dr. Mouat, and two years later the entire control of the department was vested in that officer, who is responsible for "the disposal of prisoners sentenced to banishment and transportation, the release of prisoners labouring under incurable bodily infirmities, the revision of all orders passed by the magistrates regarding the appointment, punishment, and removal of officers on their gaol establishments, the sanctioning of rewards for the capture of escaped prisoners, the full and sole control over all prison expenditure, and the general management of the department." The duties of the sessions judges are now limited to visitation, while the inspector exercises magisterial powers in every prison within his jurisdiction. There are at present fifty-four gaols under his charge, including the penitentiary at Alipore, with its twelve to fifteen hundred inmates. The chief and almost sole merit of this industrial prison is its security, though ample and profitable employment is found for the convicts, who very nearly defray the expense of their custody and maintenance. Its great want is that of a resident governor, as it is impossible for any magistrate, however energetic, to make himself master of every minute detail in its management, in addition to the onerous duties he has to discharge elsewhere. The fifty-four gaols supervised by Dr. Mouat are situated at Patna, Sarum, Behar, Shahabad, Chumparum, Tirhoot, Bhaugulpore, Monghyr, Purneah, Rajshahye, Pubna, Rungpore, Bograh, Dinagore, Maldah, Moorshedabad, Dacca, Furreedpore, Sylhet, Mymensing, Backergunge, Chittagong, Tipperah, Noakhally, Nuddeah, Alipore, Baraset, Jessore, Burdwan, Hooghly, Howrah, Bancoorah, Beerbhoom, Midnapore, Cuttack, Balasore, Pooree, Hazareebaugh, Lohardugga, Maunbhoom, Singhbhoom, Sumbulpore, Akyab, Ramree, Sandoway, Gowalparah, Kamroop, Nowgong, Seesaugor, Durrung, Debrooghur, Kassiah Hills, Cachar, and Darjeeling. A very cursory glance at the map will suffice to show over how wide a range the Inspector-General is expected to exercise a watchful surveillance, and that in a country where it is not at all times possible to move about, and where the native subordinates are thoroughly untrustworthy.

The number of prisoners of all classes in custody was 71,467 in 1859-60, against 75,141 in 1858-59. Of these 19,399, including 617 females, were in gaol at the commencement of the official year, while 52,068, including 1,353 females, were admitted during the twelve months subsequent to the 30th April. In 1858-59 the number of females in custody at the beginning of the year was 588, while those admitted in the next twelvemonth was only 428, but no reason is given for the enormous increase in 1859-60. The total number of admissions in the last-named year was less than in the preceding year by 1,461, though commitments to gaol were 41,616 in 1859-60, against 37,838 in 1858-59. The prisoners were thus disposed of:—

|-------------------------------------|--------|----------|--------|
| Transferred to other districts      | 12,341 | 260      | 12,601 |
| Acquitted and released              | 36,012 | 999      | 37,011 |
| Escaped                             | 255    | 4        | 259    |
| Died                                | 2,444  | 55       | 2,499  |
| Executed                            | 70     | 6        | 76     |
| Remaining in gaol on the 30th April | 18,375 | 646      | 19,021 |
|                                     | 69,497 | 1,970    | 71,467 |

The first line requires some little explanation. Transfers are made for various reasons. Sometimes it is done merely to relieve crowded and sickly prisons, but more frequently it is caused in pursuance of a sentence of banishment from one district to another. The consequence of this is a very considerable expenditure and loss of health to the convicts themselves, who are apt to sicken in a different climate from that to which they have been accustomed. The number of prisoners convicted in 1859-60 was 28,982. Of these 851 were sentenced for life, 4,205 for more than two years, 2,716 for twelve to twenty four months, 18,429 for one year and under, 408 to be confined until security be given, 753 to be discharged after a limited period: 1,403 were civil prisoners, including debtors, revenue defaulters, &c., imprisoned for periods varying from one month to three years, 22 State prisoners, 96 agency prisoners from the S. W. Frontier, and 99 committed by the Commissioner for the suppression of dacoity.

The diet of the prisoners in the Lower Provinces is still undetermined. Various scales of allowances have been tried, but with very indifferent success—partly, it appears to us, from attaching too much importance to the nature of the food used by the convicts previous to their confinement. It surely does not follow because the Bengalees have been accustomed to rice, the Garrows, Sontals, and Mughas to fish in a state of decomposition, and the inhabitants of the Upper Provinces to wheaten flour, that it is expedient to feed those people after their old fashion, which was usually a matter of necessity rather than of chance. Besides, the conditions of freedom and of confinement are so widely distinct that what may be harmless, and even desirable in the one becomes positively hurtful in the other. Dr. Mouat admits that there is too much monotony in the dietary hitherto adopted, and we suspect that the dysentery, diarrhoea, &c., so frequently complained of might often be traced to the rice diet, unassisted by exercise in the open air. Decomposed fish, however stimulant to the palate, can scarcely be quite wholesome, and was probably accepted in the first instance because fresh fish was unobtainable. Might it not, then, be better to vary the bill of fare by substituting flour, pulse, vegetables, and fish, or flesh, for the quantity of rice now apportioned to certain classes? In this country no difference is made between Scots, Irish, and English, and yet they are all used to a peculiar kind of fare, and each county even has its own peculiarities. We submit, therefore, that no little trouble would be saved, a greater variety attained, and the health of the convicts promoted, by forming a scale compounded from the four suggested by Dr. Mouat, diminishing the quantity of rice and sensibly increasing those of wheat, maize, pulse, fish, and condiments. The daily allowance is liberal enough, and superior to what the poor creatures would enjoy in a state of freedom; but there is no question as to the necessity of supplying a more nutritious regimen to a prisoner than to an artisan or agricultural labourer at liberty. As Dr. Mouat fairly puts it, "the point to consider is, not what the honest labourer can obtain by well-directed industry, but what is essential for the convict. To reduce the health and strength of a criminal, and to restore him to society less physically able to earn a livelihood than when he entered the prison, formed no part of his original sentence, and is, therefore, in excess of the requirements of the law." As it is, the rolls of sickness and mortality are much heavier than they ought to be. The average proportion of deaths to strength has never been less than six per cent., and during the last four years it has been as high as 8.33 per cent. For four years the mortality at Sheerghottee ranged at fully 25 per cent., which, of course, led to the abandonment of the gaol. At Akyab, again, 301 out of 384 prisoners died in 1858, from being employed to build a sea wall in a salt marsh. Clearing jungle-land has also proved a most fatal occupation. In 1859 the mortality in the 54 gaols varied from a fraction less than one per cent. (0.99) in Jessore to 33.73 in Purneah, but in the latter it was 25.19 per cent. in excess of the previous decennial rate. It is worthy of remark that by far the largest number of deaths takes place shortly after admission into prison, evidencing the existence of disease previous to conviction. For instance, in 1859, "of 720 prisoners admitted to the Patna gaol, 205 were in bad health, 79 in impaired health, and 88 were feeble and infirm from old age and other causes. At Sarem, one-tenth of the whole number of casualties was in prisoners under trial, all of whom laboured under mortal diseases when arrested. At Behar, 44 prisoners were unhealthy, 161 old and infirm, and 26 actually sick when admitted. Of the 23 deaths among those imprisoned in that year 6 only were from the healthy on admission. At Chumparun, 84 sickly prisoners were admitted; at Behar, 38 were old, infirm, weak, and emaciated; at Monghyr, 126 were sickly and debilitated; at Furreedpore, 12½ per cent. were sickly or nearly worn out by old age and natural decay; at Sylhet, 495 were in bad health, and half of them labouring under scurvy; at Mymensing, 494 were more or less sickly and diseased; at Chittagong, 8 per cent. of the casualties occurred among convicts incarcerated in advanced stages of organic disease; at Nuddeah, 124 were old, or actually suffering from disease; at Alipore, of 303 deaths, 199 were among prisoners recently admitted, and sickly at the time," &c., &c. It is to be regretted that Dr. Mouat omits to "point the moral" of this ghastly statement. Is it to be inferred that sickness and extreme debility are the chief provocatives to crime, or that it is only the infirm who are detected? or, again, that the police single out such as their victims? or, yet again, that the whole population is so weakened and prostrated by scanty fare that ill-health and a short life are the rule?

The following table exhibits the ratio of mortality to sentence of confinement during the years 1858 and 1859:—

|                                    | 1858. | 1859. |
|------------------------------------|-------|-------|
| Under 1 year ...                   | 431   | 157   |
| From 1 to 2 years ...              | 240   | 282   |
| " 2 to 3 " ...                     | 320   | 169   |
| " 3 to 4 " ...                     | 41    | 321   |
| " 4 to 5 " ...                     | 185   | 34    |
| " 5 to 6 " ...                     | 22    | 175   |
| " 6 to 7 " ...                     | 416   | 9     |
| " 7 to 8 " ...                     | 19    | 246   |
| " 8 to 9 " ...                     | 27    | 20    |
| " 9 to 10 " ...                    | 125   | 19    |
| " 10 to 26 " ...                   | 306   | 278   |
| Life convicts ...                  | 338   | 198   |
| Prisoners under trial ...          | 259   | 186   |
| Civil prisoners (debtors, &c.) ... | 19    | 22    |
| Not specified ...                  | 52    | —     |

These returns, however, are so far unsatisfactory that they do not state how long each was in confinement previous to death. The life convicts may have been only one year, or they may have been many years in durance, and so of the others; but on this point, the only material one, there is nothing to guide us. The criminals who died in those two years are classed as follows: In 1858, there were 391 thieves, 641 gang robbers, 199 murderers, 174 burglars, and 43 mutineers; and in 1859 there were 461 thieves, 357 gang robbers, 186 murderers, 117 burglars, and 101 mutineers. Agricultural labourers and domestic servants suffer most, and Hindoos more than Mahomedans, and men more than women,—the latter being accustomed to a secluded life in their own homes.

"A very large proportion of the Bengal prison mortality," Dr. Mouat remarks, "is from zymotic diseases, and is preventible by a better construction of prisons than at present obtains; by a larger amount of space being allowed to each convict to at least double the extent that obtains at present; by improved drainage and ventilation, several of the most unhealthy gaols being from defects of original construction and the injudicious selection of their sites, insusceptible of either the one or the other; by some change in the existing dietary, to be determined by careful experiments for which the requisite scientific data now exist; and by the careful regulation of labour and internal economy by some more immediately responsible and skilled agency than that afforded by the existing system of placing the prisoners in the charge of officers who have neither the time, the experience, nor the particular knowledge necessary to control them properly."

It is only since 1838 that any regular system of in-door labour has been introduced into Indian gaols, and at first recourse was had to the cruel and unprofitable punishments of the crank and treadwheel. These are now wisely given up, and the convicts are employed in various kinds of industry, which not only tend to defray the cost of their maintenance, but furnish them with the means of an honest livelihood on their liberation. Although less than one-half of the entire number of prisoners condemned to labour have been employed in handicrafts, one-seventh of the whole cost of maintenance of tried and untried prisoners has been defrayed. Of the others, 10 per cent. are engaged in menial offices, and nearly 20 per cent. are disabled from work by old age and sickness. The manufactures consist principally of hand-woven cloth, towelling, carpets, rugs, blankets, horse-clothing, saddlery, carpentry, iron-work, tape, paper, coarse gunny cloth for rice and sugar bags, bamboo, rattan, and reed fabrics. The cost of a prisoner in India is, of course, much less than of one in England, as food and clothing are cheaper, and the wages of the gaol functionaries considerably lower than the English standard. The expense, however, has enormously increased during the last forty-five years, in consequence of the great rise in the price of food and clothing, and a prisoner who would have been maintained, clothed, and guarded for £2. 12s. 8d. per annum in 1815, cost the State £4. 3s. 8d. in 1860. Of this last named amount Rs. 23-14-11 were for food, Rs. 3-5-1 for clothing, Rs. 10-7-9 for the establishment, and Rs. 3-3-10 for contingencies. The insecurity of the Bengal prisons, except of the Alipore gaol, is particularly commented upon, and not without reason, seeing that in 1859-60 there were 259 escapes, and only eighty-six recaptures, which cost upwards of £300. Education appears to be at a low ebb among the population of Lower Bengal. Of the 52,068 persons admitted to the prisons in 1859-60 it appears that only 2,644 could read and write, and only 814 were tolerably well educated, the rest being totally ignorant. No attempt at education, commonly so-called, is made in the prisons under Dr. Mouat's supervision. "Useful trades and habits of industry are taught and inculcated as much as can be accomplished by the constant employment of convicts sentenced to labour, in manufactories and industrial pursuits generally, and to this extent is reformation by such means at present limited." In conclusion, we would earnestly commend the careful perusal of this exceedingly valuable and interesting paper to all who take a healthy and intelligent interest in the treatment of criminals and the proper management of prisons.

N O T I C E.

INDIA OFFICE, 5th June, 1862.

Appointments to Direct Cadetships in her Majesty's Indian Service having ceased, it has been determined that a limited number of Commissions in the Army shall be given annually to persons selected by her Majesty's Secretary of State in Council from among the sons of Civil and Military Officers who have served in India.

The Cadets so selected will be required to pass through the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, and they will be subject to the Regulations issued by the General Commanding in Chief relative to the admission, education, and military training of Gentlemen Cadets at that College.

The expense of the education, board, washing, and medical attendance of the Cadets so selected, will be borne by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The number of Cadets selected, allowed to be borne on the Establishment of the College, is Twenty.

Persons entitled to apply for these appointments should address the Under Secretary of State, India Office.

MILITARY SCHOOL, and TUITION.—

A CAMBRIDGE WRANGLER, who has prepared nearly 200 Pupils for the Competitive, Line and East India Civil Service Examinations, RECEIVES PUPILS destined for the above services. He is enabled to receive Junior as well as Senior Pupils, and to take (being married) entire Charge of them.

The Rev. M. A., 61, Finchley-road, St. John's-wood.

MILITARY and NAVAL EDUCATION.—

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, resident at Brighton, RECEIVES a limited number of PUPILS, between the ages of Twelve and Fifteen, who may be destined for the Military and Naval Professions. With a view to this ultimate object, the entire course of Study, from the outset, is regulated expressly in conformity with the requirements of the Examinations at Addiscombe, Sandhurst, Woolwich, and Portsmouth, and every care is taken to direct special attention to those subjects likely to prove professionally useful in the future career of the Naval or Military officer. The Pupils are examined periodically in Mathematics by Professor J. R. Young, formerly of Belfast College, and Author of "A Course of Mathematics, Pure and Mixed, for the Use of Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations," &c.; and also in Classics and Modern Languages by Scholars of repute.

Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, London, S.W.

HINDOOSTANI AND PERSIAN.

LESSONS in the above LANGUAGES are given by an INDIAN GENTLEMAN of Twenty Years Experience as Professor, Interpreter, and Translator; who has obtained Certificates of degrees of honour and high proficiency from the Examiners of the College of Fort William. He possesses the most satisfactory testimonials, and can give unexceptionable references.

Address, "ALLY," care of Messrs. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W.

THE DELHI RAILWAY.

Incorporated by the Scinde Railway Act, 1857.
Guaranteed 5 per Cent. per Annum, by the Secretary of State for India in Council, on the same terms and conditions as those granted for the Scinde and Punjab Railways.
Capital at present sanctioned, £2,500,000, in 125,000 Shares of £20 each.
Deposit 10s. per Share, and a call of 30s. per Share payable on the 26th June. No further call will be made during the current year.

CHAIRMAN—W. P. ANDREW, Esq.
DEPUTY-CHAIRMAN—Sir. T. HERBERT MADDOCK.
GOVERNMENT DIRECTOR.—J. Edmund Anderson, Esq. | Harry Borradaile, Esq.
Colonel Sir F. L. Arthur, Bart. | Thomas Williams, Esq.
CONSULTING ENGINEER.—G. P. Bidder, Esq.
ACTING SECRETARY.—William Peters, Esq.

The Delhi Railway, about 280 miles in length, will form the connecting link between Umritsur, the upper terminus of the Punjab Railway, and Delhi, the northern terminus of the East Indian Railway, and complete that great chain of steam communication which will connect the opposite sides of the Peninsula, having Calcutta for its eastern and Kurrachee for its western or European port.

The route of the proposed railway has been surveyed; plans and sections prepared, and the other preliminary arrangements made; with the exception of the bridges, there will be no works of any magnitude; the cost, including rolling stock, is estimated under £11,000 per mile.

The railway will traverse a fertile, level, and populous country, with a large existing traffic.

Umritsur, the northern terminus, is the chief emporium for the commerce of the Punjab, Cashmere, and Central Asia; it contains a population of 120,000 souls, and is the religious capital of the lately dominant race. For these reasons the influx of travellers, traders, and visitors is great and continuous.

Delhi, the southern terminus, must, with Railway communication, become the principal central entrepot in Hindoostan, similar to Umritsur in the Punjab, though on a vastly extended scale.

Through the good offices of Mr. McLeod, the financial Commissioner of the Punjab, statistics of the existing traffic between Umritsur and Delhi have been collected and placed at the disposal of the Board. From these returns it is estimated that 621,882 passengers annually pass along the route of the proposed railway, irrespective of troops and travellers journeying short distances.

The tonnage and merchandise conveyed is not given, but the amount paid for the carriage of goods between Umritsur and Delhi exceeds £300,000 per annum.

There is, within the borders of the Punjab and Delhi territory, an area of nearly 200,000 square miles, with a population of 23,000,000, subject to our rule or influence, giving in the Umritsur Division, 446 per square mile; in the Trans-Sutlej, 334; in the Cis-Sutlej, 341; and in the Delhi Territory, 327 per square mile.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained at the Office, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street.

TO LADIES.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, an Eastern botanical preparation, for improving and beautifying the complexion and skin.

This royally patronised specific is distinguished for its extremely bland, purifying, and soothing effects on the skin; while, by its action on the pores and minute secretory vessels, it promotes a healthy tone, always every tendency to inflammation, and thus effectually dissipates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, and softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, its capability of soothing irritation, and removing cutaneous defects, render it indispensable to every toilet.

It obviates all the effects of Climate on the Skin, whether with reference to cold and inclemency, or intense solar heat.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Sold at 30, Hatton-garden, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA.

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 9, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, considerably lower than those now charged by this or—they believe—any other Company, but differing from the old system in respect that no reduction takes place on the insured returning to Europe or proceeding to any other part of the world not chargeable with an extra premium.

According to this method, the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

PRITCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-

MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Pritchard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 16th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received by the Bombay Mail of the 24th of May may be summed up in very few words. On the north-eastern frontier Brigadier Showers appears to have been perfectly successful in all his operations, and order is being rapidly restored. From Affghanistan, on the other side of India, exaggerated rumours continue to be circulated, but there is not the slightest reason to suppose that the Persians have directly assisted the ruler of Herat in his little war with the ruler of Candahar. The former has occupied and retains the town of Furrak, to which he really had some claim, and in all probability nothing more will be done by either party.

Mr. Laing was to leave Calcutta on the 23rd May, his health having suffered severely from the great heat. On the 12th of that month he delivered a lecture at the Dalhousie Institute, on the Indo-British races and languages, and seems to have given great satisfaction to a crowded audience, presided over by the Viceroy in person, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal being also present.

Indian Finance is evidently under the ban of some malign influence. Not only was there an error in Mr. Laing's statement which converts a surplus of £200,000 into a deficit of £250,000, but the opium crop has failed to the estimated extent of 1,250 chests, equivalent to a loss of £1,500,000 of revenue.

Society in Calcutta has been stimulated to an unusual degree of excitement by a scandal implicating two gentlemen of high commercial reputation. Mr. Donald Mackey, chairman of the Assam Tea Company, and vice-president of the Landholders' Association, and Mr. Carter, the late secretary, are accused of appropriating a large quantity of seed, of employing the Company's coolies on their own estates, and of "cooking" the accounts sent home to this country. A sub-committee of directors, including Mr. Peterson, the barrister, and Mr. C. B. Stewart, has been appointed to examine into the truth of these serious charges.

The action for libel instituted by Mr. McArthur against Sir John Peter Grant has been decided in favour of the plaintiff, but with only nominal damages.

Sir Hugh Rose has at length come to his senses with respect to Colonel Travers's claim to the Victoria Cross, and with apparent ill-grace has conferred what he had no right to withhold. His Excellency's explanation is quite worthy of the original blunder.

The Governor-General has given his assent to Act No. XIII. of 1862, to provide for a new silver and a new copper coinage for India. The designations, both of the silver and copper new coinage, do not differ from those now in use. The rupee is to be called the Government rupee. All the coins, copper as well as silver, are to bear on the obverse the likeness of her Majesty, with the inscription "Victoria Queen," and on the reverse the designation of the coins, in English, filled by the word "India," with such date and embellishments on each coin as the Governor-General in Council shall from time to time direct.

The ship Beechworth, Frayne, commander, 1,266 tons, bound to Liverpool, with a cargo of cotton and seeds valued at £100,000, was wrecked on the 12th of May in the Bombay harbour, having grounded on the south-west end of Caranja Shoal. A portion of the cargo, it is expected, will be saved. Sir Bartle Frere is stated to have lost the whole of his valuable library, all the papers connected with his administration in Scinde, and much valuable property, in the wreck of the Turon.

Indian Tea Companies are all the rage just now. In our advertisement columns will be seen the prospectus of a new company, having for its object the cultivation of the fine tea lands of Cachar. It is proposed to purchase three estates in fee simple, comprising not less than 10,000 acres, at present the property of Dr. Barry, and already, to a certain extent, under cultivation.

A great calamity has befallen India, and, indeed, the whole British Empire, for the death of a "great, just, and courageous man" is a national loss. Not two months have elapsed since it was our pleasant duty to pass in review the salient points of Lord Canning's viceroyalty, at the same time looking forward to the long, useful, and honourable career that seemed to await the noble earl in the midst of his grateful and admiring fellow-countrymen. There has been a rude awakening from that false prophetic dream. Already the silver cord has been loosed, and the golden bowl broken. Already have the mourners gone about the streets, as the late Viceroy of India was borne to his long home. In the prime of life, in the full maturity of manhood, Lord Canning has been snatched away from among us. Like his illustrious predecessor, Lord Dalhousie, he may be said to have died in harness, if not actually on the battle field. Each was borne off stricken to death, in the persistent discharge of duty, refusing to retire from the post of danger until his work was completed, though well aware of the fatal consequences of delay. Had they elected to return home at the legitimate termination of their tenure of power they might have been spared for many years in the full fruition of life and health and honour. But in the true spirit of Englishmen they refused to listen to any voice but that of duty, and have left behind them a noble example of patriotism and self-denial. Lord Canning is dead, but his fame will grow brighter each succeeding year, as passions subside and small jealousies are forgotten. Cut off all too soon for his country and his friends, he, nevertheless, lived long enough to claim a tomb in Westminster Abbey, though his true and most lasting monument is India preserved, tranquil, and contented.

THE LITTLE WAR IN ASSAM.

General Showers has lost no time in his operations against the rebels of the Jynteah hills. Appointed dictator in the district at the end of March, on the 14th of April he reached his headquarters at Jowai, some miles from the sanitarium of Cherrapoonjee, and issued the proclamation we published at the time. Dividing his force he put part of it under Colonel Richardson, who was joined by Lieut. Udney at the head of a detachment from Sylhet, and was accompanied by Major Rowlett, the civil officer. At the head of the rest of his troops General Showers left Jowai, sending out men to induce the chief men of the most influential villages to surrender, according to the promises of his most merciful proclamation. His course was at first little more than a series of explorations of glens and valleys, alternating with ridges, and all constituting scenery which a correspondent describes as not unlike that of the Scotch Highlands. On arriving at Barrato, where the camp was pitched, Gen. Showers found the tops of the hills watched by a line of armed men. A party was sent to flank them on right and left, but they disappeared, rushing down a descent covered with heavy grass jungle. Before going on to Nong-floot, the troops halted to see the effect of the proclamation. Already one Dolloye, or elder, had sent to ask where his people could expect to find our force, if he should succeed in inducing them to come in. The detachment at Raliong was also directed to suspend operations. From this point the country was searched all round. Meanwhile Colonel Richardson reported from Raliong that he had been attacked by a party of some 200 men, of whom he killed one and caught another, whom he had shot. Colonel Richardson went on, captured and burnt the villages of Sampong and Munsow, protected by stockades and earthworks, and finally remained at Umwai, sending his sick and wounded back to Jowai. On the 26th April General Showers received a report from Shilliong Mungting to the effect that the whole village had surrendered, with their families, and that the men of Barato were about to hold a durbar, with the intention of agreeing to submit. From all sides promises of submission were received, for the people seem to have suffered much misery. One Dolloye, who had expressed his determination to fight to the last, had placed eight women and children, with all his property, valued at Rs. 5,000, in a cavern for safety. A storm came and swept all away, and we sent out a party to search for the bodies. This is but one tale out of many similar. A difficulty is felt in negotiation from the fact that the people have no written language, but the terms offered to those willing to surrender have been communicated to them by friendly Dolloyes. Practically the insurrection is at an end. Throughout the campaign we have lost a few sepoy and have not killed many of our enemies. With their poisoned arrows, musketry and showers of stones and boulders the savages have proved by no means contemptible foes in a country which is covered with such dense jungle. Not even in 1857-58 did General Showers find so much attention was required in planting picquets and looking to their vigilance. It has been difficult to move about from want of carriage; the houses are scattered far apart, and even by reducing the wants of the troops to the utmost the coolies outnumbered the fighting men, so that there was a large encampment to protect, which contained many secret enemies. Gen. Showers expects to return to the Presidency by the end of June. The people have been disturbed in sowing their crops. They were shut off from the markets of the plains, and were as much starved as beaten into submission.

A letter before us grows eloquent over the beauty and resources of the country. "It is a desolate and lovely place, not a soul is to be seen, and what signs of cultivation there are seem to be the result of enchantment." We trust General Showers will not leave it till he has not only investigated and redressed grievances, but has made a recurrence of these oft-repeated revolts impossible. Gradually the tea plantations, and even forests of quinine yielding cinchonas, must advance into Jynteah, driving barbarism before them and drawing those savages within the meshes of civilised life. This little war will prove a blessing if it induce the Government of India to do justice to a country which has hitherto been either neglected or misgoverned.—Friend of India.

MR. LAING'S LECTURE AT THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.

The lecture-room of the Dalhousie Institute was literally crowded on the night of the 12th of May good half-an-hour before the time appointed for the Honourable Mr. Laing's lecture, and when his Honour the Lieutenant-governor arrived, followed shortly after by the honourable lecturer himself, there was not a vacant chair to be had, and many were compelled to remain standing. At about twenty minutes to nine his Excellency the Viceroy arrived, and was most warmly received, after which

The Lieutenant-governor went through the form of introducing Mr. Laing to the audience.

Mr. Laing, who was evidently suffering from indisposition, prefaced his lecture by a remark that he was afraid illness would prevent him from being so audible as he could wish, and then proceeded to deliver a discourse of which our limited time and space compels us to take a far too brief notice. Commencing with the history of language he showed how each successive branch of the human family had first formed its ideas of speech, illustrating his theory by the well-known anecdote of the Chinese host, who, when his English guest signified his desire to know whether a certain dish was composed of duck by saying "Quack, quack?" replied by shaking his head and saying "Bow, bow!" to show that it was made of puppy dog. He then passed on to consider the various races of the human family, and traced through all its intricacies that most important of all—the Arian—from which he argued that Hindoo and Englishman were alike descended. After dwelling on this subject in a manner which showed how much study had been devoted to it, and how thoroughly he understood and appreciated it, the honourable gentleman stated that those who felt an interest in India would always succeed best there; deprecated in the strongest terms the use of the word "nigger" when applied to men who, as he contended, were nothing whatever of the sort but sprung from the same Arian race; and concluded by an eloquent description of the duties which England owed to the great empire that Providence had given her.

His Excellency the Viceroy, who was received with great applause, called for a vote of thanks to the lecturer, passing, as he did so, a high eulogium on that gentleman's services to India. While doing so his Excellency begged to remark, in reference to the anecdote about the Chinese, that when in Paris on his return from Peking he had heard the story in connection with his own name as being the person who had eaten the puppy dog in question. He begged now, as he had done then, to repudiate the fact altogether, and added that if when in China he had ever actually eaten a puppy dog, he had done so in a state of entire, and therefore happy ignorance. His Excellency concluded his speech by a flattering allusion to Mr. Laing's financial statement, and a hope, warmly seconded by the audience, that he would soon return to India and receive the hearty welcome which he was sure awaited him.

The Lieutenant-governor expressed a hope that Mr. Laing would allow his highly instructive lecture to be placed on the records of the Institute, after which his Excellency retired, and the audience dispersed. This concluded an entertainment which has decidedly been one of the most successful that the Institute has ever afforded to the people of Calcutta.—Englishman.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

We have from time to time, in treating on the subject of railways in India, conclusively shown that the kind of rail best adapted to the country is a cheap line and a slow one. Somehow or other this result must be attained, railways must be made cheaper.

Speed of locomotion is an idea so closely connected with railways and steam-engines, that people are apt to take for granted that every railway company is bound to run its trains as fast as it possibly can. We have in previous articles shown that additional speed on railways is attained at such an enormous additional expense that even on flourishing lines in England they are beginning to find the necessity of abandoning the rivalry and confining the "extra speed" and the expense entailed by it within certain limits.

Extra speed in a railway is a kind of luxury, like champagne, that people only can indulge in when they can afford it. It is almost a necessity in England, on many lines, where the competition is so great that all less piquant luxuries pall on the public taste. But even in England there is a vast difference between the requirements of different parts of the country and the consequent modifications introduced to meet these requirements. A coal and manufacturing district can pay a railway that cost £30,000 a mile, but an agricultural country can only keep one at £5,000 to £8,000 per mile. The bucolic mind is not in such a hurry as the coal heaving, and an agricultural country cannot afford to pay for extra speed, and does not get it. If this had not been found out lines would have stopped long ago in England, but it was discovered, and people now make lines to suit the district through which they run, and their lines are all in consequence paying good dividends. (?)

We have often insisted on the point that the Indian railway question must be regarded in a commercial point of view. The great question to be settled is, "will it pay?" and be it recollected, in India people expect a much greater return for their money than they do in England; and if Indian railways cannot be made to pay better than other investments, the public will not support them, that is all.

As far as we can tell now, the only profitable portion of the traffic, that is the native trade, would pay ten per cent. on an outlay of about £8,000 per mile. In Bengal, where they have a good business, and a large coal trade, the returns are not more than five per cent. on the outlay, if so much. If the rail were made on a scale of about £10,000 a mile, it would now be paying seven or eight per cent. dividend, and certainly no smaller dividend will attract capital. This can be done perfectly easy, provided people will not insist on great speed. What we require in India now is, a large number of lines quickly made—and cheaply. Speed is all very well when we can afford it; it is very false policy to turn up our noses at slow railways made at once, in the hope of getting speedy lines years hence.

The question, we again repeat, must be regarded only as a commercial one. We are apt to lose sight of this. Let the railway go, say only twice as fast as a dak gharry—what an enormous deal we gain by it. Even if it goes only at ten miles an hour, if its rates are low, say a penny a ton per mile for goods, there are no roads, canals, or rivers which can compete with it, and it must attract and monopolise all the carrying trade.

Let the public feel this and they will come forward eagerly and we shall see the whole country in a few years, almost as if by magic, intersected by a net-work of railway lines, and India will spring into active and commercial life at once.

But there must be no guarantee. We are better without it. We do not want it. If the speculation pays we shall get the money; if it does not, no guarantee will bring in the quantity we require.

The Government, however, should subsidise the railway, as we pointed out the other day. And as nothing can be done without a beginning, we propose a line from Delhi to Dera, via Meerut and Roorkhee and Hurdwar, taking advantage of the canal bridges. There is one part, and only one, of the road about 200 yards at the back of Hurdwar, that will prove troublesome. Let the experiment of a cheap, slow, subsidised railway be tried here first. According to the plan proposed, let the Government fix the routes of the Dera railway, and then advertise for tenders to make and work the line, fixing also the rates of carriage, and agreeing to pay a certain fixed subsidy per mile of railway in working order. The traffic for goods and third class passengers to the Doon, via Hurdwar, would yield a certain profit.

In illustrating the evil effects of the guarantee system alluded to in our former article we may point to a report published in the Engineers' Journal of last month (April), where it is stated that two hundred and forty-nine miles of line up to Benares are now ready, but there are no trucks, carriages, or locomotives to work it. The Government engineers cannot understand or appreciate the necessity for speedy action. If called on for half-a-dozen locomotives and a couple of hundred trucks they are perfectly dumfounded at the vastness of such a requisition. There ought to be a locomotive to every ten miles to work a line properly. In England they have far more. The excuse put forward for not working this portion of the line is that about ten miles of bank through the Rajmahal jheels may settle during the rains and cause a waste of ballast. But suppose there is a waste of ballast, what is that to keeping two hundred and thirty-nine miles of railway closed, especially during the rains, when the Grand Trunk-road is generally stopped up? Every mile in Bengal is bringing in now about Rs. 150 net profit per week, and the new line up to Benares being kept closed will cost ten lacs, as the public have to pay for it, whether open or not open.

Would a company not hampered by the conditions of a Government guarantee, and who get no money till they open, keep 230 miles of completed railway closed upon what is at least but a poor excuse? Government interference, so far as laying down and sanctioning particular routes for a line of railway, is most advantageous—beyond that it is pernicious. It may be urged it was necessary, for without it people would not give their money. Show that railways will pay, and construct them on such a system that they must pay, and there will be no lack of money.—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MURDER OF A NATIVE OFFICER.—The 38th Regiment N.I. had just commenced its march after the halt, and was going along a part of the road where it crosses two branches of the canal over pukka bridges. The road in this part is flanked by raised banks, beyond which the country is an open plain. It was quite dark, when the report of a musket startled every one. The subadar-major was found lying on the ground, dead—shot through the heart. No one could tell who had done the deed. Though the regiment was in column, marching along a comparatively confined road, though the subadar-major must have been riding close to the column, yet he is shot dead, and as it was dark, the murderer must have been quite close to his victim to take so fatal an aim, yet he is not seen by any one. Nobody can tell how it happened! The roll is called at once, and one man found to be missing, who without doubt was the murderer. He is a Sikh: there are, or were, only three Sikhs in the regiment, and this man was one. On inquiry, his comrades state that before the corps left Agra he had sold off all his things and gave out he was going to turn fakir, or commit suicide. He was observed to be in low spirits and taciturn. He had obtained leave to fall out and not march with the regiment on account of having a sore foot, and therefore was not with his company on the morning in question. His musket and accoutrements he has taken with him. Search has been made by the police, but as yet (the 5th) he has not been apprehended. The wells in the neighbourhood of the spot have been searched, to discover if he had thrown his musket down, or even thrown himself down, as in the mood he is described to have been in it is not unlikely he may commit suicide. The police are making every exertion to discover something, and we shall hear if anything turns up. The murdered officer was a man whose life was especially valuable. He had behaved with eminent loyalty and fidelity during the mutiny, having been havildar-major of the old 67th N.I. He kept a good many of the men of his regiment straight, and out of his own pocket paid and supported a body of about fifty of his old regiment who stuck to him, and did excellent service in escorting magazine stores backwards and forwards from Allahabad to Cawnpore. His services were offered and accepted by Government, and he was subsequently rewarded. He was a man in whom the most thorough confidence could be placed; in short, one of those excellent characters the mutiny brought to light, whose qualities shone the more brightly from the dark ground of villany that surrounded them. There were several of them, and their extraordinary fidelity, uprightness, zeal, and chivalrous honour go far towards relieving the gloomy picture of Pandey faithlessness exhibited during the mutiny. This man's life was attempted a short time ago at Agra, where he was shot at on parade. The would-be assassin was sentenced to twenty-one years' imprisonment for the crime. We have only to draw the attention of his Excellency the Commander in Chief to the fact of the deceased having been twice the object of a murderous assault, and to the fact of the murder occurring so close to the column, and all the men in the immediate proximity being ignorant of how it occurred, and not even seeing any movement, or any one running away, and of the fact of the Sikh's somewhat suspicious conduct before the march not being reported or known till after this occurrence. Are not these things instances of the old spirit of Pandeyism creeping out? Why was this officer's life twice attempted, and the second time successfully? Because he was a great deal too trustworthy. He would do his duty, that all the Pandies knew, and depend on it he knew a good deal too much of the antecedents of many men in the regiment for it to be convenient for them to allow him to live. Or may he not have been cognizant of some plotting already on foot, on which he was only waiting to obtain specific information before denouncing those concerned—and dead men tell no tales—and so the tragedy on the bank of the Ganges Canal? We have further to tell his Excellency that the new native infantry corps (omitting, of course, the Punjabs, who, by an act of inconceivable political idiocy, were incorporated into the regular native army) have all the faults, with none of the good points, if such there were, of the old Bengal assassins.—Dylhi Gazette.

A FLOATING SANITARIUM.—We (Friend of India) lately urged the necessity for a marine sanitarium, and described the advantages presented by Curlew Island, off the coast of Tenasserim, for this purpose. Since then the orders have gone forth to clear a portion of the island, and to prepare it in the course of the next year or two for the reception of invalids. Meanwhile we owe to Captain Reddie, the Controller of Marine Affairs, the prospect of a sanitarium within a day's sail of Calcutta, at sea, and yet not out of the reach of the post office and the telegraph. The steamer Bentlinck, once so well known and lately so much disliked for its lumbering slowness, which was purchased from the P. and O. Company by Government, and is not now required as a transport, is fast being emptied of its machinery, and next cold weather will be moored as a great floating sanitary hotel at the mouth of the Hooghly. The spot likely to be selected is a creek near Hidgellee, exposed to the health-giving breezes of the Bay of Bengal, while partially sheltered from its storms, and surrounded by a fine sandy beach. The lower deck of the quondam steamer is being fitted up for the reception of invalids who are private soldiers, and the upper deck for such officers as have hitherto been accommodated in the Calcutta hospital, and who would be benefited by sea air. The space hitherto occupied by the enormous paddle-wheels will be devoted to bath, where the invalid may daily disport himself in salt water, free from the fear at once of sun and sharks.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—We (Friend of India) abstained last week from even alluding to painful rumours which were rife in Calcutta regarding the conduct of a director and late secretary of the most flourishing of our Joint Stock Tea Companies. As one of the parties alluded to has since come forward in his own person and challenged public inquiry, we abstain at present from doing more than saying that the directors of the Assam Tea Company have found it necessary to inquire into the official conduct of Mr. D. C. Mackey, one of their number, and of Mr. Carter, their late secretary and honorary managing director. Mr. Mackey has resigned, and Mr. Carter, we believe, has left Calcutta. What adds to the painful character of the case is, that Mr. Mackey is vice-president of the Landholders' Association, and only a few weeks ago in this capacity presented an address of congratulation to Lord Elgin. The charges against the two directors are made by Mr. Judge, a solicitor of Calcutta, and their colleague in the direction. We honour him for the boldness with which he has brought his charges in the Calcutta papers, when he saw the desperate efforts which were being made by men who ought to have been above such weakness to hush up the matter. At present we express no opinion on the charges, though these efforts and Mr. Carter's absence from Calcutta are very suspicious. In his public letter Mr. Judge states that before his colleagues in the direction he charged—and proved the charge—Messrs. Mackey and Carter with allotting to themselves two hundred and thirty maunds of seed belonging to the company and transferring it to plantations which were their own property; with using the company's coolies on these plantations, and with tampering with the company's books, falsifying the entries and sending deceptive statements to the London board that these "irregularities" might be concealed. These charges involve criminal consequences if proved. It is no satisfaction to us that the directors have appointed a committee to report on the matter. We have not forgotten the recent case of Sir Albert Larpent's testimonials. We accept the assurances of Mr. Peterson that, as a large shareholder, he will "take care that no pecuniary loss is suffered by the company." But we would remind him and all the directors that the public have an interest in this matter as well as the shareholders. Moral as well as pecuniary interests are involved, and we trust no attempt will be made at any compromise which, while it secures the latter, might sacrifice the former. Apart from higher considerations there are too many Joint-Stock Tea Companies afloat, and too many likely still to be started, to allow the public to look on with indifference at the action which may be taken by the directors of the Assam Tea Company in this matter.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER—THE BUBBLE BURST.—We learn, on trustworthy authority, that the march of the Sinde Horse from Jacobabad to Khelat has been suddenly stopped by order of the Supreme Government. The explanation of this change of policy may probably be found in the fact, which we are assured is now placed beyond doubt, that Dost Mohammed, after threatening unutterable things, has, like a true Afghan, ended by coming quietly to terms with his enemies. If we are rightly informed, a compromise has been effected, according to which Sooltan Ahmed Jan is to retain possession of Furrak, the Persians promising not to interfere so long as the Dost remains passive. It is likely that the old Ameer could not really help himself, but was obliged to make a truce for fear of losing Kandahar. He has a most unmanageable household to deal with, and the loyalty of his subjects is of such a nature that it will only last as long as he can give them to fight for him better pay than they can get from any one else to fight against him. In one of the now famous Cabool news-letters a little episode of the war, told with charming frankness, shows of what stuff Afghan chiefs are made. An urzee, we are told, came one day to the Ameer, informing him that on such a date the governor of a certain fort received a message from Sooltan Ahmed Jan to surrender the fort on conditions stated in a document sent with the messenger. The governor, on looking at these conditions, found that he was offered twenty thousand rupees a year in the service of the chief of Herat, and, as he only got ten thousand rupees a year from the ruler of Cabool, he "of course" gave up the fort. Such being the devotion of the Afghans to their sovereign, such their disinterested love of country, it may be imagined that the Dost finds it a sufficiently difficult task to keep things in order at Cabool without attempting to fulfil his threat of dying under the walls of Herat.—Bombay Saturday Review.

THE OPIUM INQUIRY.—The inquiry going on at Arrah, under the orders of Government, in respect to certain points connected with the opium department in Shahabad, in consequence of the Hurkaru's special correspondent's letter of the 4th of April last, is suspended pending a reference to Government. The special correspondent declines to attempt to prove his charges of gross oppression and extortion against the sub-deputy and the bukshee until these officers are suspended. Being both of twenty-six years' standing, and hitherto approved good service, they naturally object to this. We are far from believing the truth of some of the highly coloured statements of the correspondent. On the contrary, we learn from the opium districts of Behar that the increase in the rate given to the cultivators to five rupees a seer has led to immensely extended cultivation. Opium is now, next to potatoes, the most profitable crop for the ryot. So much is this the case that the zemindars, envying the prosperity of their tenants, have resolved to take advances also. With the usual Asiatic suspicion, however, they can hardly believe that the increased price will be paid, and so they wait for another year. But the confessions made by the opium officials themselves, and printed in the appendix to the Indigo Commission's report, show the need for such a fair inquiry as an official of the high character of Mr. G. F. Cockburn, the commissioner, is likely to institute. And anyone who knows what Asiatics are must be convinced that the truth will not be reached, unless the parties complained of are removed temporarily to another district. Because they are accused it does not follow that they are guilty, nor does their suspension, or rather temporary removal elsewhere, involve the truth of the charges. That will be seen by the result, in arriving at which fully and honestly they should be as much concerned as the public.—Friend of India.

LUCKNOW, May 14th.—Mr. Wyllie, the Assistant-secretary to the Chief Commissioner, has been telegraphed to from Calcutta, to know whether he will accept of the Under-secretaryship to Government in the Foreign Department, and it is understood he has replied in the affirmative. This will increase his emoluments by Rs. 550 per mensem, a consideration not to be despised by so young a civilian. In recommending the Government originally to sanction this appointment, Mr. Wingfield drew attention to the facilities it would afford to all the young officials of the province, in mastering secretariat work, to limit the time to six months. His intention seems to have been lost sight of, for Mr. Wyllie has held the late appointment, to my knowledge, for upwards of a year. Mr. King, a district Assistant-commissioner, officiates for Mr. Wyllie for the present, and the latter will leave for Calcutta by the 15th. One of the late King's Begums recently obtained a search warrant for a quantity of treasure which she affirmed was hid in the premises of one of our distinguished dressmakers. The information turns out to be correct. The Begum, I believe, intends proceeding against the Government for a restitution of the whole amount, and has retained a pleader to witness the value of the reclaimed treasure. Not long since an uncovenanted official here was compelled to disgorge a fancied prize after a long search, to the intense disgust of all who had similar expectations. There is now a perceptible change in the weather, and the hot season may fairly be said to have set in. The Rev. Mr. Moore has succeeded beyond his expectations in his honest endeavours to benefit the soldier, and had already realised half the amount required, viz., Rs. 20,000. In six months the Soldiers' Club will be an acknowledged institution of this city, and it is anticipated one of the most magnificent of the kind in the country. The Union Club, too, is riding its hobby at an almost killing pace, and seems determined to outstride its competitors. It has been resolved at their last committee to institute a series of reunions, and to devote a portion of the building to Thespis. This will, I think, prove an alluring auxiliary to the many amusements which it at present boasts of, and will tend to establish that cordiality and good feeling which is the mainspring of all such institutions. Lord Listowel and suite have just passed through the station on their way to Calcutta, after having bagged a prodigious quantity of game in an incredibly short space of time.—Times of India.

LAHORE, May 7.—The supposed Bala Rao has at length left Sealkote for Cawnpore, where, if fully identified, he will be tried. It is said there is more than one individual now in that station quite capable of recognising the real Bala Rao,—men, too, upon whom reliance can be placed. His march will be a tedious one, as he proceeds by daily stages of bullock train escorted by a strong posse of police. Mr. Rattigan, assistant superintendent of police, who made himself conspicuous in his capture, accompanies the prisoner. The trial cannot take place before the middle of June. Strong rumours prevail here of essential changes being effected in the Public Works Department of the province. The idea has been in contemplation for some time, but nothing was finally settled until the arrival of the Inspector General of Public Works Accounts, Major Chesney. The principal alterations intended will be among the executive engineers and their assistants, who are much too numerous. It is said the superintending engineership of the Lahore and Peshawur Road will be abolished, and the numerous executive divisions considerably reduced. Any one familiar with public works in India must be aware of the immense sums expended on the supervising and office establishments alone. Probably one-half of the annual amount granted goes in payment of salaries and allowances of chief, superintending, and executive engineers with their assistants, supervisors, overseers, moonshes, clerks and accountants of all kinds. This is too much, and could be done much better and for a great deal less. What would be said in England (where labour is exceedingly dear) if ten shillings in every pound voted for public works went into the pockets of the parties selected to overlook the construction of such works? This Lahore and Peshawur Road is one of the most gigantic and expensive attempts at modern folly on record. It has been going on for years, is far from being finished, and has already cost the State upwards of sixty thousand rupees per mile, and before it is completed will exceed a lakh per mile. A line of railway could have been laid for less money. I am persuaded the introduction of the contract system would prove most successful. It would call forth a spirit of competition, and bring enterprising European capitalists into the field which would result in permanent good to the country. One of the most violent shocks of an earthquake experienced in these parts for some time occurred on the evening of the 6th, followed by a tremendous storm, which has done considerable injury to the crops, the chief portion of which was cut and lying in the open fields.—Times of India.

JEYPORE.—Our political agent has succeeded in arresting two of the Bareilly rebels. They are Syuds, and are charged with being active participants in the murder of Europeans, during the recent disturbances. On the other hand, I regret to inform you and your readers of the recent death of that liberal nobleman Thakoor Luchmun Singh, the Prime Minister of Jeypore; he is deeply regretted by thousands; he has been succeeded in the ministership by Pundit Sheodeen. I regret I cannot say much of the Jeypore Judicial Courts. The present new minister appears very much displeased with the magistrate and his deputies for seizing, beating, and imprisoning a Government servant who was deputed from Nusseerabad to Jeypore on Government duty. This poor man, I am sure, would have remained a prisoner for life had it not been for our worthy agent, who has taken serious notice of the case, and procured the man's release, and we trust our new enlightened minister will remove all the officials of the foudjaree, and appoint better and more qualified men who are capable of administering justice. The roads in progress are to be given on contract again. The construction of the Jeypore and Agra-road commenced some time in September, 1855, and up to the present moment I hear that about sixteen or twenty miles have been finished at a most dreadful outlay; some say each mile has cost Rs. 20,000, and others say it has cost about Rs. 10,000 a mile. In some parts the road is constructed some feet above the level of the sand, and is sure to be washed away on the first heavy fall of rain. Roads in sandy parts, I think, should never be built above the level of the sand except when pukka walls are built on both sides, to prevent the water from carrying them away.—Delhi Gazette.

SINUOGGER, CASHMERE, May 6.—Visitors are making their appearance; some twenty five or thirty have entered the valley. The deputy commissioner on special duty arrived on the 2nd inst. The Maharajah will, in a few days, leave Jummo, and, after a short stay at Rajouree, start for this, and may be expected early in June. Two ladies are amongst the early arrivals at this favourite place. The snow this year on the ranges is very extensive, the lofty peaks stand out in grandeur; this may indeed be called a "snow girt valley." The last few days there has been a good deal of rain. The winter has been very severe, and snow fell far lower than it has fallen for many years.

PHYSICIAN'S DIPLOMA.—The Indian Field states that only one candidate came forward to compete for the first M.D. examination; though for the benefit of the graduates of the Medical College the standard had been fixed as low as it could possibly be, it having been made to consist of purely practical branches of medical science, combined with a knowledge of mental and moral philosophy. The first M.D. of the Calcutta University is Baboo Chunder Coomarr Day.

THE JUMMA MUSJID.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette directs attention to the decaying state of the Jumma Musjid, the famous mosque of Delhi. He states that it is merely faced with stone, the intervals being filled in with mud and stones; so that when one of the facing-stones gives way there is every chance of more following. "It is a pity to see a fine building like this going to ruin, but unless something is done towards removing the peepul trees which birds and the high breezes have sown in the crevices of the walls and domes, they will soon make short work of it." The Public Works Department should see to this. Special rules were lately issued regarding the preservation of old ruins and public buildings. To its architectural value the siege has added a new historical interest.

LADY FRANKLIN IN CALCUTTA.—The Hurkaru notices the arrival by the steamer Fiery Cross in Calcutta of Lady Franklin, "the widow of the great Arctic navigator, who so unostentatiously fitted out expedition after expedition at her sole cost, to search for the missing navigators. Their sufferings and fate are now a matter of history. We believe Lady Franklin has been visiting the colonies, and we gladly welcome amongst us this truly noble woman."

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS.—Lieutenant H. M. Evans, of the late 6th European Regiment, and since Adjutant of the European Provisional Battalion at Dum-Dum, where he last year attracted the favourable notice of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, has been appointed to the Station Staff at Darjeeling. Lieutenant W. W. Hume, of the late 11th Regiment N.I., who served at the siege of Delhi, has been appointed by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to the officiating Adjutancy of the 35th N.I., and Lieutenant E. Lightfoot, of the late 59th N.I., who did good service during the troublous times of 1857-58, has also been rewarded with the Adjutancy of the 44th N.I. Brigadier P. Harris, commanding at the Presidency, in the absence of General Showers, has proceeded to Raneegeunge to perform the half-yearly inspection of No. 1 Battery 14th Brigade of Royal Artillery at that station; having recently completed his inspection of the troops at Barrackpore, where he found everything satisfactory. Lieutenant Colonel F. W. Burroughs, formerly of the late 17th N.I., and for a considerable time unemployed, has received an appointment in the Military Finance Department, in connection with Colonel A. Broome's office.

REGIMENTS FOR EUROPE.—A new roster for the relief and return home of British regiments in India, which have served their foreign time, has been received from England, and the order in which the different corps take their departure is fixed as follows:—92nd Highlanders; 74th, 13th, 69th, 68th, and 45th Regiments of Foot. The last mentioned regiment, which has, till receipt of this roster, looked upon its destiny as first for England, will not be pleased to find five corps now before it on the list; and the Highlanders will, on the other hand, be gratified to know that they are ordered to be sent home next cold season, whether relieved by another regiment from Europe or not. In the cavalry branch there is to be no movement beyond the return to England of the Queen's Bays. In the case of the 68th Foot a curious quibble of military regulations took place; which, however, was set aside by common sense and justice, which occasionally find entrance at the Horse Guards. That regiment, it appears, landed in England from the Crimea, and remained there, we believe, not a month; but by all precedent this constituted a tour of home service, and its foreign service commenced from date of re-embarkation for India. The rule has, however, been set aside; and the regiment goes home in its fair turn.

FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.—The following rule is of interest to officers who, formerly under the old furlough regulations, have joined the staff corps, and whose service from date of joining that corp is to be reckoned under the new furlough regulations:—Officers having elected (or who not having before elected, might, on their entering the staff corps, desire to elect) the old furlough regulations, will carry with them into the staff corps so much of their service (authorised leave included) as may have been passed within Indian limits and no more. Before they can retire on the pension of any particular rank they will be required to serve for such further period as will with that service complete the full period prescribed for the pension of any particular rank, with the liberty of availing themselves, after their entry into the staff corps of the privilege periods of absence allowed by paragraph 30 of the new furlough regulations.

THE HON. MR. FORBES, Member of the Imperial Legislative Council, embarked on the 9th May on board the Simla, under a salute of fifteen guns from the ramparts of Fort William. He finally quits India after thirty-one years of service. As member of the Governor-general's Council for making laws, the purely legislative members are, it would seem, entitled to a salute which they did not enjoy when in the former Council.

THE NEW CURRENCY.—The amount of bank notes outstanding in Bombay on the 17th of April was Rs. 25,78,081. In Calcutta the amount was Rs. 69,28,804 on the 30th of April, and in Madras Rs. 6,36,780 on the 12th of April. With the new currency notes the circulation now afloat must be five millions.

HOMEWARD BOUND SOLDIERS.—The ship Alquis, conveying about two hundred and twenty time-expired soldiers and invalids to England, takes her departure from Calcutta on Friday, the 18th May, and the men will be embarked on board a flat on Saturday morning, and join the ship at Diamond harbour. This is a great improvement upon the former arrangement in these matters; according to which, soldiers homeward bound embarked off Calcutta, with orders to wait at least forty-eight hours for the cholera; which, however, did not always give them the trouble of such long attendance, but generally came on board well within the time accorded for its advent.

THE ALLAHABAD RIFLE VOLUNTEERS seem to be reviving. Mr. Thornhill, the commandant, recently convened a meeting, which adopted revised rules, allowing "non-effective" members to be connected with the corps nominally by contributing to its funds. Every volunteer must appear on parade at least once a month, and on the first week day of each quarter, beginning with January, the captain of each company will hold a muster and inspection. A shooting match, at which prizes are to be offered, is to be held on the Queen's birthday. The movement hitherto has flagged under the contempt of the authorities, and the excessive zeal of commanding officers.

OPIMUM SALE.—At the Calcutta opium sale, on the 7th May, the following prices were realised:—

|             | Chests.   | Average.           | Proceeds. |
|-------------|-----------|--------------------|-----------|
| Behar ...   | 1,305 ... | 1,508 6 10 1/2 ... | 19,68,500 |
| Benares ... | 1,135 ... | 1,467 12 9 ...     | 16,65,950 |

SIMLA, May 12.—A lady, who arrived from Delhi the beginning of last week, was taken ill of cholera on Thursday, and died on Saturday morning. It was, indeed, a sad event, and, as you may imagine, it cast a gloom and much anxiety over the community. Generally it is believed that cholera has never made its appearance at Simla, but the belief is an erroneous one. Cholera carried off many natives and several Europeans in 1856-57; and it is reported now, by the natives, to have made its appearance in villages not far distant.

MEERUT.—The Mofussilite hears that Mr. R. Spankie, C.S., Judge of Futtehghurh, will come to Meerut, as Judge, on the early departure of Mr. Turnbull, C.S., for England.

MYSORE.

The report upon the administration for 1860-61 of the Mysore territory by the officiating Commissioner has now been published, and such particulars as are generally interesting may be as well laid before our readers. Before entering upon matters connected with the various branches of the administration, we may mention that this flourishing province, famous for one of the finest, perhaps the very finest, station as regards health to be found in Southern India, we refer, of course, to Bangalore, had the good fortune to be ruled by one Commissioner, the late Sir Mark Cubbon, for no less than twenty six years, a fact which will account in a great measure for that progressive prosperity which has distinguished its administration for upwards of a quarter of a century. His departure from the country a few years since, and the subsequent news of his death, we are told, were both deeply felt by all classes in Mysore, as he was looked up to by the population with the greatest respect and esteem.

Commencing with the Judicial Department, we find that as regards civil justice, the total number of suits filed during the year (1860-61) was 12,945, which was 1,059 in excess of the previous year; of these 18,752 were decided in the Amils' Courts, and the remaining 1,225 in those of the Hoozoor Adawlut, Superintendents and Moonsiffs. The amount litigated was Rs. 18,34,372; the average per suit being Rs. 141. This is high as compared with the Punjab, where the average for 1859-60 was but Rs. 61, but it is less than in the North West Provinces, where it was for the same year Rs. 180. No mention is made of the average duration of suits in the various Civil Courts, which is to be regretted, as a comparison could then have been made with other provinces where such are shown. Under the head of appeals it would seem that 1,276 were filed during the year, which, with the previous year's balance, made a total of 1,416; of these 1,350 were disposed of, leaving but 66 undisposed of on 1st May, 1861. If we turn to criminal justice, we find that the total number of cases under trial during the year was 15,089, involving 30,757 persons; of these latter 19,802, or nearly 64 per cent., were convicted. In the North West Provinces for 1859-60 the percentage was 56½. Computing the population of the Mysore territory at 3,864,678 this would give a proportion of one offence to every 256 persons; in the Punjab it was for 1859-60 one to every 324 persons. The criminal file in Mysore, were it not for a large number of petty cases which comprised no less than 10,616, would contrast very favourably with other provinces, the offences against the person and property aggregating but 3,073. There was a decrease in criminal cases during the year under report to the extent of 81. The proportion of stolen property recovered was 37 per cent., contrasting in this respect favourably with the Punjab for 1859-60, where it was but 29½. The Mysore police are essentially a talook force, and are reported to have given satisfaction.

The cost per prisoner in the Mysore gaols was as high as 49 rupees, in the report it is entered at Rs. 4 2; but this we presume is per mensem, and not per annum. The prison mortality is set down at 5.8 per cent.; the former of these items exceeds that in the Punjab, Madras, Lower Bengal, and the North West Provinces, where it is Rs. 17, 38, 42, and 46 respectively; the mortality rate is greater than in the Punjab, where it was 2.3 per cent., but is less than in the other three provinces, where it was 7.3, 10.82, and 10.73 respectively. In the Finance Department we find that the revenue of 1860-61 was Rs. 95,84,600, out of which the assessment on wet, dry, and garden lands produced Rs. 58,91,808, while the Abkarry brought in nearly 11 lacs, and the Customs nearly 10½ lacs. Stamps produced a revenue of Rs. 9,574. The revenue realised from opium had but slightly increased, the quantity grown, 1,000 maunds, being nearly all consumed in the province; the amount of duty received was Rs. 13,630. The total revenue had somewhat fallen off as compared with that for 1859-60, when it was 101 lacs, but this was held to be owing mainly to indifferent seasons and to the failure at the end of the monsoon of what are termed the latter rains. The non-appearance of famine is attributed to the custom of burying all the surplus "Ragee" grain in pits, whence it is taken up in times of scarcity. This grain will keep sound and good for nearly fifty years; all articles of consumption had risen during the year under report, a circumstance which though doubtless improving materially the condition of the agricultural classes, tells heavily on all with fixed incomes.

The expenditure of the province amounted on the whole to Rs. 86,76,058, leaving a balance in favour of income for the year of Rs. 9,08,541, or with previous balances to Rs. 84,32,942. The disbursements on account of revenue charges amounted to a little over 17 lacs, while the military cost 11½ lacs. A sum of 2¼ lacs was paid as subsidy to the Madras Government, and Rs. 14,41,067 were paid to his highness the Rajah, 3½ lacs being his yearly stipend, and the remainder, the fifth share of the revenue of the country, guaranteed to him by treaty. The Public Works Department cost Rs. 6,53,011. No new roads were constructed during the year; but bridges were erected on the line of road from Bangalore to Mysore, one of them being of large span. Several third-class roads were in progress intended to act as feeders from the large towns in the province to the railway, now in course of construction from Vaniambaddy to Bangalore. A vast number of tanks, large and small, were either repaired, enlarged, or strengthened, while the dam across the Nagoo river and the excavation of a channel near Luckmanpore has also been executed. In education the outlay had been Rs. 41,950; four new English schools were established during 1860-61, and eight other schools, English and Vernacular, are to be opened as soon as the services of qualified teachers can be obtained. The number of pupils in the various schools numbered 1,681; of these 1,116 were Hindoos, 205 Mahomedans, and the remainder of other castes and classes. The average attendance was 1,324, and the cost of educating each pupil attending the Government schools is calculated at Rs. 32.2.10. A grant in aid had been made to a well-conducted Hindoostanee school in the Bangalore cantonment.

The Military Establishment consists of 7 regiments of horse and 4 of foot, the former numbering 2,289, and the latter 2,182. They perform police and escort duties in the districts, and are reported as being in all respects in perfectly efficient condition. Under the head of vaccination, we find that nearly 96,000 persons were operated upon during the year, and that 91,000 cases are reported to have been successful. The number of vaccinators throughout the province was 75. The hospitals and dispensaries of the Mysore Government cost Rs. 59,033, for which sum 22,000 people were attended medically, and 96,000 were vaccinated. The number of patients during 1860-61 exceeded by 2,000 those treated in the previous year, owing to the prevalence of cholera, which in July and August 1860 was felt rather severely at Bangalore. With the exception of the Astagram division, the health of the province is reported upon as good, but in that district nearly 5,000 people were in a very short space of time carried off by the same fearful scourge. The revenue from forest lands had fallen off during the year under review, but this was attributable to the customary sales not having been held; nearly 10,000 logs of valuable teak, black wood, and other good descriptions of jungle timber were on a rough estimate ready at the various depots for sale. Large tracks of waste land were being taken up, owing to the continuance during the last few years of the very high prices of grain. Under the head of mining we find that about one hundred thousand maunds of iron were manufactured in 1860-61 in Mysore, and 25,000 maunds were exported to the adjoining territories. The value of the iron produced was estimated at not more than 2½ lacs of rupees.

Such, then, is the present state of Mysore, the administration of which was assumed by the British Government in 1831, since which time the country has attained its present prosperity. The net balance in hand was on the 30th April, 1861, as we have previously mentioned above, 8¼ lacs of rupees, very nearly an ordinary year's revenue, and the revenue for 1861-62 it is estimated will not fall far short of 1 crore of rupees. An interesting feature in the administration of this province since its assumption by our Government, and one which it is believed has very materially conduced to its present state of prosperity, has been the gradual abolition of a number of cesses and transit duties, which, without essentially increasing the revenues of the State, pressed heavily in many instances upon the industry and comforts of the people. We think it will hardly be credited when we state that in 1831-32 the "Sayer" revenue was levied under no less than 537 heads, and produced only a little more than 6½ lacs of rupees. For the present year the same excise duty under 25 heads is calculated to reach a sum of above 9 lacs. Previous to 1836-37 there were a number of petty imposts or duties on vegetables, plantains, wood, coolies, leaves, sheep's wool, blankets, fowls, eggs, bamboos, &c. Several of these were abolished in that year, others not till 1843-44. According to the latest change of system, a simple ad valorem duty was directed to be levied upon twenty articles only, the highest percentage being on opium, and the lowest on country blankets; five articles only are taxed at from 10 to 15 per cent., and these are ganjah, betel leaves, dry cocoa-nuts (kopra), manufactured timber and opium. The excise duty called halut is a tax on four articles, coffee, betel-nut, pepper, and cardamoms. The tax upon betel-nut forms no inconsiderable item in the aggregate revenue of this State, the amount realised in 1858-59 being Rs. 4,29,011; the rates on the three several sorts of nuts were Rs. 1.4, 12 annas and 6 annas respectively. The rate upon one maund of cardamoms of 28 lbs. having a market value of Rs. 40 was fixed at four rupees, and in one division alone (the Nuggur) Rs. 11,528 was paid as duty on this seed; the rate per maund of pepper was also fixed at 4 annas, and this paid in the above-mentioned district alone a duty of nearly Rs. 16,000, the quantity produced there being 81,845 maunds.—Times of India.

WANTED—POPULATION FOR BRITISH BURMAH!

The folly of encouraging emigration from India to the colonies has received a remarkable illustration in a correspondence between Colonel Phayre, Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce. While thousands of coolies annually leave the ports of India for foreign countries, the population of British Burmah is not more than ten to the square mile. With a practical desire for the good of the rich province which he governs, Colonel Phayre has always been anxious to increase its population, but has differed from us as to the best means of accomplishing this. He is willing to help private importers of labour in every legitimate way. He is anxious for such a contract law as binds the coolies in the colonies, and there wins the admiration of the very philanthropists who condemn it here. But hitherto he has declined to recommend the State to become an importer of labour, just as the colonial governments are. Still, not unwilling to be convinced in a case on the decision of which the prosperity of British Burmah chiefly depends, he has asked the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce, as consisting of the merchants and planters most interested in a supply of cheap labour, to show him how the State can best encourage immigration. Both parties are agreed that the country, from its undeveloped wealth and vast extent, will absorb any number of labourers, and that it is desirable to import Chinese rather than any race from the peninsula of Hindostan.

The Chamber of Commerce have failed to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them. They do not grapple with the difficulty, they avoid all details, and they ask for privileges for the labourers which are most extravagant. They recommend Government to give coolie settlers, besides a free passage, grants of land free for from fifteen to twenty-five years, and "to compel the settlers to clear a certain portion of the land within a certain time." They ask for a Contract Law by which the rights of employers and employed shall be clearly defined, and declare that without such a law hirers of labour "must suffer considerable inconvenience." With the exception of the last, these are terms no civilised government would accede to, and which no intelligent merchants should have asked for. To exempt from tax "cleared" land for fifteen years, and that in the case of coolies whom the State would have to feed for a year and to supply with ploughs and cattle, all at an estimated cost of not less than Rs. 220 after landing them at Rangoon, is to pay for population far more than it is worth, valuable as it is, and to do for the merchants what they should assist in doing for themselves. People from Burmah and the Shan States have already settled down in thousands, receiving land free of tax for merely three or four years. These settlers are much more "respectable" than any who might be "compelled" to cultivate, that is, to submit to a provision which the English settler in Hindostan has just got rid of by the fee-simple rules as an intolerable burden. At present, moreover, thousands of coolies annually emigrate from Coringa and Madras to Rangoon and Moulmein, make money during the season, and return with their profits to their families, glad to escape by sea the robbers to whose cruelty their brethren are exposed by land on the road between Chittagong and Arracan. The one source of emigration is too scanty, and the other is too temporary, to be at all equal to the labour demand of British Burmah. But that which proves an inducement in their case needs only to be systematised under State supervision, to bring thousands of poor Chinese from Canton.

This question of Government interference in the supply of labour has equal interest for all the scantily-peopled provinces of India. The plan seems to us simple, and the respective duties of Government and of private persons to be clearly marked out. Let the local authorities of Burmah in all respects imitate such colonial Governments as those of the Mauritius and West Indies. Let an emigration agent be sent to Canton. British Burmah will be far more popular with Chinese emigrants than the colonies, because it is almost part of their own land, professes their own faith, and is already colonised by not less than six thousand of their own people, all of whom are prosperous traders or cultivators. Not only so, but there is almost as frequent intercourse between the Chinese of Pegu and their own country as is the case with the wealthy shoemakers of Calcutta. They make fortunes and return to their native land, spreading the fame of the settlement they have left. In these circumstances the agent would have no difficulty in securing a superior race of emigrants, to whom a free passage alone would be an inducement. On landing the coolies would be made over to a superintendent of immigrants, whose duty it would be to see to their welfare, their indentures, registration, assignment to merchants or planters, the bestowal of grants of land on them if they preferred that, their condition in their master's service, and their return to their own country should they wish it. All should be bound for a term of three years, or, if they are to become settlers themselves, should receive rent-free land for the same period, and such advances for food and stock as the tweavee is in India, the value to be repaid by instalments. The latter class should not be entitled to return at the cost of the State, and thus the only expenditure for them would be a free passage. Others might prefer to remain as coolies on their own account in the three ports, and should be similarly treated. Coolies bound for three years, on the expiry of that period, should make all subsequent engagements only from year to year, and the three years' term should be shortened on the immigrant paying part of his passage-money from his earnings. For the agricultural settlers on their own account, no spot is so well suited as the forest tract in the district of Rangoon, which stretches from Twantay for twenty miles almost to the Bassein Creek. Already a Shan colony has been there formed, and there is hope that the Karens may be won by Christianity from their barbarous habits.

We ask the Government of India to sanction for British Burmah, its own land, only what it so zealously carries out for the colonies and for aliens like the French. We ask Colonel Phayre to do only what is done by such colonies as Trinidad and the Mauritius, with the approbation of all philanthropists. Even if the province bore all the cost, by its increased prosperity the outlay would be soon repaid with enormous interest. But the hirers of labour would be only too glad to pay their share of the cost, as the West Indian planters do, for they would soon see the extravagant rates now paid for labour reduced. We fail to see why Chinese immigration should not do for Burmah all that Indian immigration has done, in saving the colonies from the ruin that impended on the abolition of slavery, and raising them to a pitch of unparalleled prosperity. In 1842, before it had coolies, Trinidad exported 20,506 hogsheds of sugar; in 1850 there were exported 40,000. Can Lord Elgin and Colonel Phayre assign any reason, either from morality, political economy, or practical common sense, why the same means should not produce similar results in British Burmah? If they cannot, the duty is imperative on them at once to encourage Chinese immigration.—Friend of India.

RANGOON.—Our future Recorder, Dr. Clarke, has arrived, and has taken his seat on the bench of the District Court of Rangoon as Judicial Deputy Commissioner, pending the Act authorising the Government to appoint Recorders to the Courts in Rangoon and Moulmein; which Act, by the-by, it is now said, is not to be an Act of Parliament, but of the Legislative Council of the Governor-general of India. It matters not under what authority Dr. Clarke takes his seat as Recorder so long as it is sufficient, and he has it, for it can scarcely be satisfactory to him as an I.L.D., and a member of the Bar, to see his decisions reversed in appeal by a Major of Infantry, whose good fortune has raised him to the position of Commissioner of Pegu; and that he is not only liable to this, but to be subjected to the impertinent remarks of the said officer in his decisions, he will find to his cost, lack of assurance and self-appreciation not being qualities by any means foreign to the potentate who rules Rangoon. The withdrawal of the very large military force which has within the last twelve months taken its departure from these provinces has already been fraught with much evil to the country, and every day shows more clearly how necessary it is to overawe the people of Pegu and Burmah Proper, at any rate with a semblance of power. Our constabulary, as now organised, may in reality be equally efficient with the military; they may be quite as capable, perhaps more so, of opposing any actual rising among the people, or an incursion from the Burmese territory. I in no way mean to disparage them; but the truth is, and it is a fact beyond denial, that they have not, and cannot have, the moral effect their red-coated brethren had. It was with the red coats of the British infantry that in 1825-26, and again in 1852-53, the Burmese measured their strength; they were defeated by them, and though they hated they acknowledged their superiority. They have contracted a wholesome dread of the power contained within the compass of the "brick dust" coat; but remove the outward covering, and their respect will evaporate, unless it be in the case of a white face. The Burman is a strange compound of courage and timidity, shrewdness and superstition, wisdom and folly; and he attaches more weight to outward appearances than many who do not know him intimately would imagine. That this is the case the present state of the districts even immediately about Rangoon and on the frontier distinctly proves. If we look at home within the precincts even of the town and cantonment of Rangoon, we have pretty nearly nightly evidence of the boldness with which the dacoits carry on their depredation, and in a measure the impunity with which they act. Moreover, they are now collecting in formidable bands, and, as in the Burmese time, are commencing to separate themselves from the community, and to live apart in separate villages; either on the tidal creeks where their swift lyoungs (boats) enable them to defy pursuit and capture, or in the depth of the jungles where their dwellings are hidden from the sight of the most inquisitive police officer. While this is the state of affairs within even the maritime districts of the province, they are even worse on the frontier. The trans-frontier dacoits cross into British territory with the greatest boldness, and penetrate far into our border districts in search of the plunder by which they live. They now loot our villages, and carry fire and sword into the heart of our territory, and escape back across their frontier before any force can be brought to operate against them. It was not wont to be so; but courage has returned to the heart of the Burman, as he has witnessed the departure from the land of his birth of those red coated warriors who deprived him of the soil his forefathers owned. He has not the same respect for the constable in his quiet attire that he had for the soldier in his more conspicuous uniform; the result is to be seen in the perpetual dacoities which now disgrace the border districts of Pegu. In one of them a British officer has lost his life under circumstances which call for some notice on the part of the Chief Commissioner, as it has occurred through the criminality of the subjects of the King of Ava. A body of dacoits of considerable strength lately crossed into British territory and began looting, burning and slaying, almost under the eyes of the Toungou authorities. Lieut. Halsted, an assistant-superintendent of police, hearing of what was going on, assembled the police force under his orders, and proceeded in pursuit of the marauders. After a hot chase of some hours he came up with the dacoits, and at once attacked them vigorously. His party was, however, fearfully outnumbered, and was eventually overpowered. On the police finding themselves overmatched, all who were capable of doing so bolted, leaving their officer in the hands of the dacoits, who, after they had seized and overpowered him, literally hacked him in pieces with their dahs. The conduct of the men who escaped is ordered to be investigated, but there is little doubt they were no match for the large party they found themselves suddenly opposed to, and there is, moreover, every reason to believe that Lieut. Halsted was intentionally deceived as to the strength of the party he was in pursuit of.—Englishman.

A "BURMAH BIBLE AND TRACT SOCIETY" has been established in Rangoon, with the object of providing for the publication and circulation of the Holy Scriptures in the Burmese, Karen and other languages spoken in Burmah, and of aiding in the circulation of tracts and religious publications.

FIRES IN PEGU.—Fires seem to be terribly frequent in Pegu. Nearly the whole of Promé has been destroyed, except the Telegraph office, and one or two other buildings. Another conflagration has occurred at Bassein, and also in the old town of Pegu. Why will the householders not build in brick?

LOSS OF THE "SARDINIAN."—The Rangoon Times says that on the 23rd of April last the British ship Sardinian, a fine large vessel of over twelve hundred tons burthen, was totally destroyed by fire. She was at anchor at the time, near the mouth of the Pegu river, and was loading with a cargo of cotton and rice for the European market. The Burmese coolies were allowed to smoke their cigars on board, and the new Deputy Judicial Commissioner will probably have a difficult task to decide between the agents, the underwriters, the owners, and the captain.

MR. LIONEL U. STEELE, Barrister at Law, has been appointed Senior Judge of the Madras Court of Small Causes.

THE BOMBAY ASSOCIATION.

The following memorial was presented to the Governor-general of India by the members of the Bombay Association, and to which the annexed reply has been sent to the Secretary of the Association:—To the Right Hon. the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., &c., Viceroy and Governor-general of India in Council.

The humble petition of the Bombay Association

Showeth,—That your petitioners have learnt that an influential agitation has recently been got up both in England and in India, to induce the Government to reduce the import duties upon yarn and piece goods.

That your lordship in council is not unaware of the important fact, that unlike other colonies of the British Crown, India pays its own charges without any cost to England.

That your petitioners beg to represent that the state of Indian finances has already permitted the repeal of the Licence-tax, a concession of which your petitioners in common with the whole of the community duly appreciate the value; that should the finances show such further improvement as to admit of other taxes being repealed, your petitioners respectfully submit that it would be more advisable to repeal the Income-tax than the import duties, which are apparently felt by no class whatever. That a reduction of import duties on Manchester goods at the present time is objectionable on special grounds, which your petitioners observe have already been brought to the notice of your lordship in Council.

That whatever disadvantages may result from the import duties, their levy at all events, your petitioners beg to observe, occasions neither disaffection nor danger, and being indirect taxation, they are directly felt by no one in India.

That the Income-tax, on the other hand, is a tax which is in itself felt to be most oppressive, and one that is susceptible of great abuse and is often rendered of peculiar hardship and oppression, and the imposition of which has caused universal discontent, entailing, moreover, heavy charges in its collection.

That if any measure is likely to afford relief and tend to ensure happiness and contentment to the millions of this empire, it is the repeal of the Income-tax, a measure of primary importance; the reduction of import duties on yarn and piece goods your petitioners submit is a measure of secondary moment altogether.

That your Petitioners, while with due deference approaching your Lordship in Council with their appeal on this subject, beg respectfully to state that they are far from wishing to be thought opposed to the principles of free trade, but with all due deference and respect pray that the oppressive, unpopular, and even demoralising Income-tax be repealed before any other tax in India. And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

(Signed)

JUGGONATH SUNKERSETT, President.

BOMANJEE HORMASJEE, Vice President.

And others.

Bombay, 15th April, 1862.

From the Hon. E. Drummond, Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, to the President, Vice-President and Members of the Bombay Association.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your memorial to the address of his Excellency the Governor-general in Council, praying for the repeal of the Income-tax in preference to a reduction of the Import duties, and, in reply, to refer you to the financial statement of the honourable Mr. Laing, and to observe that the recent measures of the Government for remitting the Licence-tax and for relieving completely two-thirds of the payers of the Income-tax, afford a sufficient proof that it is not the wish of the Government to make the burthen of taxation press on the people of India any further than is absolutely necessary to meet the indispensable expenses of the State.—I have the honour to be, Gentlemen, (Signed) E. DRUMMOND.

Fort William, Council Chamber, 30th April, 1862.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. F. HUTCHINSON.—The following address has been presented to Mr. F. Hutchinson:—To F. Hutchinson, Esq., Bombay. Dear Sir,—Having heard that you are on the point of leaving India for England, we cannot allow you to depart without expressing our sense of the valuable services which you have frequently rendered to us and to the public generally in the advancement of the municipal interests of this place, during the many years that you were one of the active members of the late Board of Conservancy, and of her Majesty's Bench of Justices. It is to you in a great measure that the public are indebted for many improvements in municipal arrangements, and when it became necessary to increase the funds in order to provide for the expenditure on the Vehar Water Works, and a new and a thorough system of drainage of this town and island, you devised the means of effecting that object. This was acknowledged by our much-esteemed Governor, the late Lord Elphinstone, who, in a letter addressed to the bench of justices by the Secretary to Government under date 19th March, 1851, expressed himself as follows:—"After careful consideration the Hon. the Governor in Council is of opinion that the plan which I am now instructed to propose, and for which Government are in a great measure indebted to Mr. Hutchinson, the Collector of Bombay, would be the most unobjectionable mode of raising the requisite funds." We have also to express our acknowledgments of the kind and friendly demeanour which uniformly characterised your official intercourse with us, and your ready accessibility at all times whilst holding employment under Government. In order to mark our personal regard for you, we beg your acceptance of a silver tea service to be selected by you in England, and we place at your disposal the sum of £500 which has been subscribed by us for this purpose. Wishing you every happiness and prosperity in all your further undertakings,—we remain, dear sir, yours faithfully, Juggonath Sunkersett, Bomanjee Hormusjee, Rustomjee Jamssetjee Jejeebhoy, Cowasjee Jehangier, Sorabjee Jamssetjee Jejeebhoy, Framjee Nusserwanjee, and others. Bombay, 12th April, 1862."

BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—A special general meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, pursuant to a notice, was held on Wednesday, 14th May, at one o'clock P.M., for the purpose of electing a Chairman in the place of James N. Fleming, Esq., who has left Bombay for Europe. Members present: John Parsons, Esq.; A. J. Hunter, Esq.; Charles Macdonald, Esq.; E. P. Repton, Esq.; W. Trevor Roper, Esq.; A. B. Boyle, Esq.; A. Morrison, Esq.; S. Burstall, Esq.; W. Nixon, Esq.; R. Wallace, Esq.; John Mitchell, Esq.; R. McIlwraith, Esq., and R. Latham, Esq. John Parsons, Esq., was called to the chair. The Chairman read the circular calling the meeting. It was then proposed by John Parsons, Esq., seconded by C. P. Repton, Esq., and carried unanimously:—"That the Hon. Michael H. Scott be elected Chairman, and Robert Hannay, Esq., be Deputy Chairman for the unexpired term of the present session."

ADDRESS TO MR. J. B. LANE.—The following is the address presented to Mr. Lane, Managing Agent of the B. B. and C. I. Railway, by the Engineer officers of the line prior to his departure by the last mail for Europe, and his reply:—"To John Benn Lane, Esq., Managing Agent B. B. and C. I. Railway, Surat. Sir,—We the undersigned members of the staff, of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company have learned with deep regret of your failing health, though we are not surprised that at length you feel the effects of over-work. There are few amongst us who have not many times experienced kindness at your hands, and there are none of us who are not grateful for your devotion to the interests of the Company we serve, and with the success of which we feel our interests and ambitions to be interwoven. We are proud of successes which have attended our exertions under your direction, and we confidently look forward to sharing further triumphs with you. Under these circumstances we beg that you will accept, with the expression of our best wishes for your health and happiness, a piece of plate which we shall request the Secretary of the Company to present to you in London in our name. Upon it we propose to have engraved the words, 'Presented to John Benn Lane, Esq., Managing Agent, by the staff of the B. B. and C. I. Railway, on finishing the line from Dhoolia to Bulsar, 16th August, 1861,' and we hope we may soon present another to you engraved with the words 'line finished between Ahmedabad and Bombay, and working towards Agra.' Trusting that we may soon welcome you renewed in health again amongst us, we beg leave to subscribe ourselves your friends. (Signed) F. Mathew, H. F. Whyte, J. M. Sleater, G. H. Bayly, L. P. Banks, John Gair, H. Hogarth, T. M. Foy, David Richmond, John Dui-gan, Theodore Cooke, Robert Gompertz, F. W. Foot, J. B. Hayes, and thirty-six others." "To T. Mathew, Esq., Deputy Engineer, Bombay. Dear Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and the address presented to me through you by so many of the officers of this company, with whom I have for so many years had the privilege and pleasure of co-operating in prosecuting the works and working of this railway. On the eve of my departure on sick furlough to Europe nothing could be more gratifying and acceptable to me than the kind assurance of good will and friendliness to which this address gives expression. The kindness alluded to on my part has never been more than poor reciprocation of that I have always experienced at the hands of yourself and those who have joined you in this address. I notice with gratitude the handsome compliment paid to my devotion to duty and the interests of our employers, and with pride the allusion to the successful results of our past united exertions and the confident hope of sharing together further future triumphs. Without the ability, zeal, assiduity, and cordial co-operation which I have witnessed and experienced on the part of yourself and those who have joined you in this address to me, my best efforts could have been of little avail towards accomplishing the successful results which we are all now proud of. Allow me, therefore, in turn to express my deep gratitude to you and the other officers of the company for the valuable parts you have yourselves performed and the cordial assistance I have always received from you. I shall be glad to receive the piece of plate which is intended to accompany the address, as it will ever remind my family and friends of the occasion and circumstances under which it has been presented, but be assured neither it, nor yet the inscription which it is to bear, will be needed to deepen the engraving on my memory of the sincere pleasure and gratitude with which I now accept the handsome and complimentary address which has been so kindly and considerately presented to me. And remain, &c., John Benn Lane, Managing Agent."

BELGAUM, May 11.—A circular has been sent round intimating that an efficient workshop has been established in the lines of H.M.'s 44th Regiment, at which carpentry, upholstery, shoemaking, and saddlery, gunsmith and farriery, and musical instrument repairing are executed in their various branches, under the superintendence of skilful workmen. You can perceive from this catalogue that residents in Belgaum have no longer any cause for complaint of the want of resources to insure their household comfort, or the gratification of fancy indulgences. To be sure there are, and have always been here, establishments at which most things of the above nature may be undertaken; but the attraction and confidence inspired by European workmen (who, if at all worth their salt, turn out work in a manner which natives dare not aspire to equal) will, I believe, greatly deprive them of their custom, which will now be transferred to the soldiers' workshop.

On the other hand, the school of industry, which is a sort of reformatory for all captive Thugs and dacoits, turns out tents, floor cloths, towels, and so forth, of a description quite equal to the best of the kind manufactured at Jubblepoor. The departments in North Canara have been organised on the Bombay system. Mr. Goldfinch, C.S., is the Collector, and Mr. John (Head Accountant of the Dharwar Office) is the Deputy. Assistants also have been nominated, but names have not transpired. Captain Baker, of the Royal Bombay Engineers, is the District Engineer in charge of the Public Works Department, assisted by a numerous staff. The country is reported to be dreadfully unhealthy. The last letter states that nine out of every ten persons are suffering from fever and dysentery! This afternoon a heavy shower of rain fell, when an inch and a half of water was gauged in about thirty minutes. It was by far the heaviest fall as yet this season, and was preceded by violent gusts of wind, and accompanied with much hail. I must leave it to your imagination to conceive the scramble for hailstones—the only substitute here for ice. An ice-machine is, however, on the way out for an European dealer, who will soon establish a first-rate shop in Belgaum.—Times of India.

MAHABLESHWUR, May 12.—There is not much news going here to tell you of. The weather, the usual topic when one is hard up for a subject, continues very cool, and towards evening dense clouds of heavy mist send across the hills from the west, so as to quite obscure the moon, and saturate one's clothes, on which it settles like hoar frost, with dampness, and visitors begin talking of an early monsoon, and consequently a speedy exodus from the hills. Among those who have already gone are General Smith, C.B., and his A.D.C. Captain Macnaghten; Captain Thompson, H. M. 56th Regt.; Captain Pym, of the Cavalry; and four or five others; and among the arrivals during the last week are Lady Frere and Dr. Girard, Staff; Messrs. Fawcett and Goring, 33rd Regt.; Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, and Rev. C. Cooke. Lady Frere, since her arrival, has been unwell, and not always able to see visitors. There are a great many tents pitched all over the hill, and two days ago, during my ride, I counted no less than ten different establishments under canvas. No wonder! The landlords ask too high rents, and consequently there are more than a dozen houses which have been unlet the whole season. General Hale leaves for Poona on the 27th, General Hobson on 3rd June, and the Commander-in-chief on 7th or 9th. His Excellency has issued invitations for a large dinner party on the 24th, her Majesty's birthday. There is to be a large picnic to Kate's Point this afternoon, and another to Elphinstone Point on Wednesday. Besides these and a few dull dinners there is nothing in the shape of gaiety stirring.—Bombay Times.

SURAT, May 18.—The decision passed by the deputy magistrate, Mr. Moteeram Dulpuram in the frauds perpetrated by two cotton merchants, has, it appears, produced a salutary effect amongst the mercantile community of Surat. These two merchants were convicted of adulterating cotton for sale with a view of increasing its weight. The charge having been proved against them, one was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, and the other for a less period. This circumstance has caused a deep sensation among the cotton dealers, and it is confidently stated that the fraud, which was lately assuming a serious form, has really received a fatal blow.

WRECK OF THE BRITISH SHIP "BEECHWORTH" IN BOMBAY HARBOUR.—We regret to report that the Beechworth, Captain William Frain, while endeavouring to work out of the harbour, on the evening of Monday, the 12th of May, grounded on the S.W. point of the Caranja shoal, about four miles and a-half from the Apollo Bunder. When this disaster occurred the vessel was in pilotage charge of Mr. Comey, of the Master Attendant's Department. From the first but little hope was ever entertained of getting her off the reef on which she struck; and whatever opinions may have been expressed on the subject then, it is now fully apparent to the most casual observer that there is not the slightest chance of her ever leaving the rocks on which she now lies, except in fragments. On her first touching the bottom, on Monday night, she heeled over to starboard at an angle of 45 degrees. On Tuesday morning she partially recovered herself, and on the afternoon of that date the water had reached no farther than a height of about twenty-two feet. Since then her bottom has gradually ground away, and she has settled down fully ten feet more, so that at high water the whole of the after part of the ship is under water, the vessel presenting a truly lamentable picture. Work can only be carried on when the tide is out, and hence the quantity of cargo discharged has been comparatively small. It is to be apprehended that the burst of the monsoon will break up the vessel—even, indeed, if she do not work herself to pieces before. The Beechworth is a North American built ship of the first class, 1,265 tons register, and is owned by Messrs. Willis and Co., of Liverpool. Her agents in Bombay are Messrs. Rennie, Scovell, and Co., and the value of the cargo, which consists of cotton, wool, linseed, coir yarn, hemp, &c., may be roughly estimated at £100,000, which is insured in various offices in this place. The value of the vessel is about £10,000, and she is insured in Liverpool, to which port she was bound when this unfortunate occurrence took place.—Times of India.

TELEGRAPH FROM BAGDAD TO KURRACHEE.—In the statement of Home charges last issued by Mr. Laing, there is an item of £230,000 for the telegraph through Persia, that is, from Bagdad, to which it is at present complete, to Kurra chee. We (Friend of India) see that Mr. Walton has left Bombay for Kurrachee to lay the line along the difficult Mekran coast. Colonel P. Stewart, of the Bengal Engineers, has been sent to negotiate with the Shah of Persia to arrange for laying the line through his territories, but it is doubtful if it would be as safe there as among the savage Beloochees of the coast. The Bombay Review recommends that the wire be laid from Bagdad down the Arabian coast as far as a place called Graine or Quaita, and thence across by means of a series of small islands and promontories at convenient intervals to Ras El Khymah, without going near the Persian coast, or rendering necessary the employment of any submarine cable of more than 200 miles in length. By passing from island to island the telegraph will be saved from the hands of the pirates inhabiting the coast by El Katif, the only people of Arabia from whom we may expect unfriendliness. From Ras El Khymah to Muscat there is no difficulty. Nor will the laying down of the deep sea cable, 170 miles long, from Muscat to Chobar, on the Mekran coast, be a very formidable work. The line will touch the coast at Chobar, and there the difficulty begins. For some distance the rocks present abrupt precipitous sides, and there it is proposed to hang the wires from the top. The Beloochees, who, it was thought, could not be tamed, have agreed to give their help in constructing the line, and the Khan of Khelat has promised that the posts and wires shall be carefully guarded. The completion of the line is not looked for till the end of 1864, when we shall be able to send a message from Rangoon to London in one day.

WRECK OF THE "SULTANA" ON THE "SHAH BYRAMGORE" REEF.—Some days ago we (Times of India) published, on the authority of a telegram from Cochin, the fact of the ship Sultana, Captain Rice, having been wrecked on one of the Laccadive Islands, and the escape to the Malabar Coast in safety of the chief mate and a portion of the crew. A requisition was at the same time made for a steamer to give assistance to the vessel. This request was at once responded to by the Government, who despatched the steam-frigate Auckland, Commander Fraser, to the rescue. The Auckland left Bombay harbour at 1.40 P.M. on the 7th May, and got sight of the wreck of the Sultana on the "Shah Byramgore" reef at 11.5 on the 9th. They there picked up a native who informed the exploring party that the captain and crew of the Sultana had reached the small island of Chitlak in safety in native boats, and had been well treated. An officer was sent to report on the condition of the wreck. She had all her masts and yards standing, but was much injured, her fore-foot and rudder being knocked away, and she was taking in water according to the rise and fall of the tide. There was no possibility of getting the vessel off, and even if this was done she would go down in the deep water alongside of the place where she had struck. The natives at Chitlak reported that they were engaged by the captain of the Sultana to save as much from the wreck as they could, for the benefit of the owners, and they were stripping off the copper as fast as possible. After ascertaining the state of the wreck, and finding that they could be of no assistance, the Auckland stood for Betrapar, another of the small islands of the Laccadive group, where they picked up ten Lascars of the Sultana, who have been brought to Bombay by the former vessel. These men stated they were left there by the chief mate to lighten the long boat, which was making for Mangalore. The Auckland also learnt at Chitlak that the captain of the wrecked ship Sultana and a portion of the crew which had landed there had proceeded, three days before the arrival of the Auckland, in native boats to Mangalore, where they have no doubt arrived in safety, the weather being very favourable.

ZANZIBAR.—We regret to hear that Colonel Lewis Pelly, British Consul at Zanzibar, has been living for some months past in constant danger of his life, the Arabs having formed a plot to assassinate him on account of the efforts made by our Government to suppress the slave trade. It is said that some ships have been seized by the Royal cruisers which were not slavers; and we believe that Colonel Pelly, so far from approving, was the first to object to the legality of such captures. As the representative of the Government at Zanzibar, he, however, was singled out by the Arabs as the victim of their revenge. Happily they have not yet been successful; and we trust that our Government has energetically warned the Sultan of Zanzibar that, if anything happen to our consul, his reign will be at once brought to a sudden end.

FREIGHTS.

To London—Cotton, 22. 12s. 6d.; Seeds, 22. 7s. 6d.
To Liverpool—Cotton, 22. 7s. 6d.; Seeds, 21. 15s.

Imports (Bombay, May 24).—Cotton Piece Goods.—During the fortnight a large business has been done in Grey Goods, chiefly Grey Shirtings, at prices in several instances higher than those quoted in our list. Grey Shirtings of nearly all makes are in active request, and large sales have been effected during the fortnight at advanced rates. Grey Longcloths continue dull, and are unchanged in value. Grey Domestic are quite unasked for. Grey Drills maintain their former value. Grey T. Cloths, principally 4 lbs. to 4½ lbs. Blue En. attract much attention, and the prices of those descriptions show an advance. Grey Madapolams have changed hands to a large extent, fetching higher rates; the demand continues good. Grey Printers maintain their former value. Grey Jaconets up to ten pick makes and 45 in. five are still in good request at very firm rates; other makes are dull. Grey Malls are quiet. In Grey Cambrics there is not much doing. Bleached Goods are still without improvement; the market is very quiet. Coloured Goods and Prints are also dull, and beyond a few speculative purchases nothing has been done. Yarns.—During the fortnight a firm demand has existed for both Mule and Water Twists, and we have to report a material advance in several counts. The firmness of holders checks larger operations. On the Yarns have been dealt in to a small extent at dearer rates. Goods are quiet and unchanged in value. Turkey Red dull, and lower in value. Metals.—Metals of all kinds continue very dull, and the quotations must be considered nominal, as only a trifling business has been done.

Exports (Bombay, May 24).—Cotton.—The market experienced a slight vacillation during the past fortnight. Soon after the departure of the last mail the demand slackened a little, and prices declined about a few rupees, but the market rallied soon afterwards, and prices rose to their former level. Inquiries are principally made after Dhollera, Bhownuggu, and Sawingind Dhawar, which afford the best selection; other sorts are of inferior quality and not sought after. Supplies are now arriving freely from the districts, but still they add but little to the stocks, which are not adequate to the demand. Wool.—The staple continues most in favour with native hipsters. Stocks consist principally of inferior qualities. The better sorts are scarce and dearer. Oils.—Supplies of Lucced continue light; and prices show a further advance, to day's quotation being Rs. 6 to Rs. 6-2½. Rapeseed is firmly held for Rs. 7 to Rs. 7-4½, in the absence of supplies. Sesame is nominally worth Rs. 36 to Rs. 38. Poppy Seed can be had at Rs. 7 to Rs. 7-4½; Niger Seed at Rs. 27 to Rs. 29, and Ground Nuts at Rs. 26 to Rs. 27. Coffee.—Stocks still continue light, and prices must again be quoted dearer. Mocha and Berbera are held for Rs. 16 to Rs. 17, and Malabar for Rs. 11-4½ to Rs. 11-12½. Pepper.—Quiet, and prices a shade weaker. Saltpetre.—Superior qualities are scarce and dearer. Madder Root can be had at our quotations. Stocks are very large. Opium.—The market has improved considerably since our last, under favourable advices from China, combined with light importation from Malwa. We quote to-day Rs. 1,610 for first class opium, of which, however, there is very little in the place.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. E. N. P. GLOVER, H.M.'S BENGAL INFANTRY.

Head Qrs. Simla, May 10.—At a general court martial re-assembled at Agra on the 24th day of April, 1862, Lieut. Edward Henry Philip Glover, of H.M.'s Bengal inf., was arraigned on the following charges :—

1st. That he, E. H. P. Glover, on the 30th day of November, 1861, at Agra, he being then and there an officer serving in India at a distance of upwards of one hundred and twenty English miles from the presidency of Fort William, with a gun loaded with gunpowder and a bullet of hard clay or earth, did feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously shoot at one Meer Khan, with the intent then and there, and thereby, to do him some grievous bodily harm.

2nd. That he did make an assault upon one Meer Khan, and him, the said Meer Khan, then and there did beat, hurt, and ill-treat.

Finding.—The court is of opinion that the prisoner is not guilty of the first charge, of which he is accordingly acquitted. Guilty of the second charge. Sentence.—The court sentences the prisoner to three months' imprisonment.

CHAS. S. REID, Colonel, President.

Agra, April 25, 1862.

Confirmed, but not approved, HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Simla, May 2, 1862.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE COURT.

The Court begs most earnestly to recommend the prisoner to the merciful consideration of H.E. the C. in C., on the following grounds :—

That although the facts averred in the charge did occur, the Court is of opinion that but little criminality attaches itself to the prisoner, who, they fully believe, was only guilty of error of judgment, and of boyish folly.

That the Court believes in the sincerity of the prisoner's expression of penitence and contrition, and feels assured that the severe ordeal already undergone will remain impressed on his mind, leading him to be more circumspect in future.

CHAS. S. REID, Colonel, President.

Agra, 25th April, 1862.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The C. in C. is unable to accede to the recommendation of the Court, the sentence being already too lenient.

It is shown by the evidence that Lieut. Glover, in despite of the remonstrances of his servants, and by threats of maltreatment, compelled Meer Khan to sit down covered with a quilt whilst he fired at him. The excuse set up, that this was done merely to ascertain whether a ball of hard dry clay would penetrate the quilt, or be broken against it, cannot be listened to, for it was quite unnecessary, in making such an experiment for his own amusement, to peril the life of a human being. One shot broke, but the second wounded the servant in the leg, and laid him up for a time. If the shot had struck Meer Khan in the eye or temple, it might have deprived him of sight, or proved fatal. The C. in C. is quite at a loss to understand how the Court can excuse such a premeditated and selfish outrage on humanity, as a "boyish folly." H.E. cannot believe that if the act had been committed on any friend or relative of any member of the Court, they would have come to the same conclusion.

The prisoner had some time before been punished by the magistrate for having discharged a loaded pistol at a policeman, a fact which renders still more unexcusable the excuse of "boyish folly."

Brigadier Troup is requested to assemble the President and members of the Court Martial, read to them the remarks of the C. in C., and furnish the President with a copy of them.

Lieut. Glover is to be sent to the Fort of Agra, to undergo the imprisonment awarded.

Military Letters.

THE ORGANISATION OF THE ARTILLERY SERVICE IN INDIA.

No. 509.—The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 132 of March 31, 1862, are published for general information, and the Governments of Fort St. George and Bombay and H.E. the C. in C. in India are requested to give effect to the instructions conveyed therein :—

Para. 1. I have carefully considered in Council your Despatch No. 272 of Oct. 22, 1861, forwarding a letter from the Adjutant-general of the army, conveying the views of H.E. the C. in C. on the Report of the Committee, of which the late Colonel Sir G. Barker, c.b., of the royal artillery, was president, on the organisation and equipment of artillery for service in India, expressing generally your concurrence in the recommendations of the committee, and proposing certain modifications of some of their proposals.

3. I shall now proceed to communicate to your lordship the decisions which her Majesty's Government have arrived at, with the full concurrence of H.R.H. the General C. in C., upon these important subjects.

6. You observe that the Madras horse artillery has worked with 116, and the Bengal horse artillery with 112 non-commissioned officers and soldiers, and that their work has been done in a most satisfactory manner; and in consideration of the peculiar nature of the service in India, and the necessity of reducing, as much as possible, expenditure in every branch, and especially in the military branches of the service, you recommend that the total establishment of non-commissioned officers, gunners and drivers, in each battery of horse and field artillery, should be 140, exclusive of artificers.

7. The General C. in C. has given an opinion upon this point :—"That the establishments of the late Indian artilleries were not sufficient, and it often followed that, after a general engagement, the number of guns had to be temporarily reduced; * but taking into consideration the present requirements of the Indian service, and the important considerations of a financial nature to which Sir C. Wood draws attention, H.R.H. is not desirous of raising any objection to the reduced establishment of 140 Europeans (exclusive of artificers) for field batteries."

8. H.M.'s Government concur in these views, and sanction the adoption of this establishment for horse artillery and light field batteries for service in India, viz., 140 Europeans of all ranks, exclusive of commissioned officers and artificers.

RESERVE OR GARRISON BATTERIES.

10. The Meerut Committee have recommended a strength of 130 non-commissioned officers and gunners for garrison or reserve companies of artillery.

11. You are of opinion "that seventy-five non-commissioned officers and gunners will be sufficient for reserve or garrison companies, and that with that number they will be as strong as is necessary or expedient, under the financial circumstances of the empire."

12. This number of men appears to be sufficient as a peace establishment, and, for the reasons which you have given, H.M.'s Government approve of its adoption.

13. Experience alone can show, however, whether, with the number of reserve batteries now proposed, the organisation will suffice to render the batteries themselves efficient in garrison and siege operations, and be equal at the same time to furnishing reinforcements, on occasional emergencies, to the light field batteries. They must be looked to as available for both these purposes.

14. I annex, for your information, statements showing the distribution of these numbers for each description of battery, as proposed by H.R.H. the General C. in C.

DETACHMENT SYSTEM.

15. The introduction of the detachment system throughout the artillery in India is approved.

HORSES—HORSE ARTILLERY, 9-POUNDER BATTERIES.

16. Your proposal to fix the peace establishment of horses for the horse artillery at 178, for the 9-pounder batteries at 110, to be increased to 200 in the former case, and 130 in the latter, on a battery taking the field, is approved.

17. H.M.'s Government also approve of your proposal to change the mode in which horses have been hitherto allotted to the several branches of the service, and to make the selection hereafter, first for the artillery, the horses so selected being afterwards divided between the horse and field batteries.

SEPARATE GUNNER AND DRIVER SYSTEM.

18. I have given very careful consideration to this point, and to the facts and arguments which you adduce in favour of a continuance of the mixed system which has hitherto existed in India. I have also before me the views of H.E. the C. in C. in India upon this important point.

19. The same system at one time prevailed in the British artillery, but, after long experience, it has been found not only advisable but necessary to enlist two classes of men under the separate denomination of gunners and drivers, a lower standard of height and size being required for the drivers, in consequence of the difficulty experienced in obtaining a sufficient number of men of the required size for both duties.

20. In order to meet this difficulty, I suggested to H.R.H. that the standard might, perhaps, be reduced. Upon this H.R.H. observed, that "the present standard for gunners of the royal artillery (five feet seven inches) is as low as it can possibly be reduced, having regard to the efficiency of the general service, which, with heavy ordnance, requires men at least that height to enable them properly to perform their duties; but even at this standard it is found impracticable to raise sufficient men to keep so large a force up to its establishment, and hence the necessity for enlisting men of five feet four inches as drivers, who, with field artillery, are quite equal to the work of gunners, when required," and H.R.H. therefore trusts the standard for gunners will not be altered.

21. H.R.H. has further observed, that under this system, "although the men are mustered respectively as gunners and drivers, they are always equally available for the duties of either grade, and in the field brigades at home the drivers, during the past year, have been through the prescribed course of gunnery instruction, and are found fully equal, in cases of emergency, to the duties required of gunners. The present strength of the regiment, from 40,000 to 50,000, renders it," H.R.H. observes, "impracticable to raise a sufficient number of men to cover the casualties in so large a force of the standard height of gunners, and, accordingly, a proportion of men of much shorter stature are enlisted, who are readily obtained, and who are found better adapted for the particular duties of drivers than taller men; but, at the same time, as before stated, their instruction in artillery drill and exercises is not lost sight of, and, in a year or two after joining the service, they become proficient in all that pertains to an artilleryman's duty."

22. Under these circumstances, and taking into consideration the impossibility of two systems in the same corps working harmoniously, the General C. in C. expresses a hope that the gunner and driver system may be fully extended to the new brigades and batteries, as being the most conducive to their future efficiency.

23. H.M.'s Government are fully aware of the very high state of efficiency to which the Indian artillery had attained under the system now advocated by your Government. They do not, however, overlook the fact that, until very lately, the number of European drivers in the Indian artillery was small in proportion to that of gunners, and less difficulty was experienced in obtaining a sufficient number of men qualified for both duties. This difficulty has already been found to be insuperable in the royal artillery, and the separate system has been adopted and found to work exceedingly well.

24. Under all these circumstances, H.M.'s Government have come to the determination that it is not desirable to attempt to introduce in the brigades serving in India a practice wholly dissimilar in this important particular from that in force with the regiment at large, and they therefore desire that the separate system may be gradually introduced, as drivers are sent out from this country, into the whole of the artillery in India. It will be necessary to introduce this change, as opportunity offers by whole batteries, replacing by the regular drivers the gunners who may have hitherto served as such, and transferring the latter to other batteries.

CONTRACT SYSTEM.

25. H.M.'s Government quite concur in the views you have expressed on the subject, and approve of the contract system, as it is obtained in Bengal, being adopted as the rule for the whole of the artillery in India.

POLES AND SHAFTS.

26. Your proposal that shafts shall be substituted for the poles in all cases where the latter have been heretofore used, is also approved.

POINTS OF DETAIL.

27. You propose that the recommendation of the Meerut Committee, that six spare ammunition wagons, drawn by bullocks, should be attached to each battery, should be adopted.

31. I cannot close this despatch without conveying to you the expression of the high sense which H.M.'s Government entertain of the public spirit and professional ability displayed by the officers composing the Committee at Meerut, and the cordial feeling of unanimity with which they undertook and carried through the discussion of this important and complicated subject, and ultimately set at rest questions which had, for many years, given rise to difference of opinion and practice involving no little detriment to the public service.

32. Much credit is due on this account to all the members of the Committee, but the acknowledgments of H.M.'s Government would have been especially due to their late distinguished president, Colonel Sir G. Barker.

THE STAFF CORPS.

No. 502.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 262 of March 7, H.E. the Governor general in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 135 of March 31:—

Para. 1. I have received and considered in Council your Letter No. 44, dated Feb. 8, containing your decision on the following question submitted by the Government of Bombay regarding the staff corps:—

Question 130.* An officer proceeded to England on medical certificate in 1857, and, according to the new furlough regulations, was entitled to retain his appointment for a period of 15 months. As he did not return on the expiration of that period, and consequently lost his appointment, are the fifteen months thus passed to be considered as staff employ, so as to bring that officer under the operation of para. 73, or, as he did not rejoin his appointment at the expiration of his leave, and can hardly be said to have held an appointment within the last three years, is he debarred from entering the staff corps?

Answer 130. This officer is entitled to reckon for staff service the period of fifteen months during which he was on leave.

2. I am unable to approve the answer given, as it is not in accordance with the decision communicated to you in my despatch No. 315, dated Aug. 9, 1861, which stated that "no leave of absence, either on sick certificate or private affairs beyond the privilege leave of one month in six, will be allowed to reckon towards the staff service required by the Royal Warrant as a qualification for promotion in the staff corps." An officer may, however, be considered as having been on staff employ for the period in question, so far as his claim to admission to the staff corps is concerned.

POLICE LEVIES' CLAIM TO PRIZE MONEY.

Port William, May 6.—No. 503.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 1,011 of Nov. 5, 1861, the following paragraph of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 111 of March 24, is published for general information:—

Para. 21. Your G.O. admitting the claims of men of the police levies, horse and foot, who were under the command of military officers and performing military duties, to share in prize money, is approved so far as respects prize money taken during the late military operations in India, the distribution of which has, in many cases, called for special arrangement and decision.

CHAPLAINS' CLAIMS TO PRIZE MONEY.

No. 504.—The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 111, dated March 24, are published for general information:—

Letter dated Nov. 16, 1861, No. 299.

Para. 54. According to the usage in India, chaplains have not hitherto been considered entitled to share in prize money. [Para. 35.]

55. It is stated, however, to be the practice at Chelsea Hospital to allow of their sharing in prize property. I am of opinion that a similar rule must be established in India.

56. The revised scale of distribution of prize money, commencing with the distribution of the Delhi booty, the right of chaplains to share is to commence from the same date.

MAJOR GENERAL SIR SIDNEY COTTON.

No. 500.—H.E. the Governor general in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 136, dated March 31:—

Para. 1. On receipt of your letter dated 3rd Jan. last [No. 30], I lost no time in bringing under the favourable consideration of the General C. in C. the proposal contained therein for an extension of the period of service on the divisional staff of Major general Sir Sidney Cotton, K.C.B., with the expression of my hope that this distinguished officer might be permitted to hold, until the 1st Nov. next, the important command which he has exercised with so much success.

2. I am now informed that there is no objection on the part of H.R.H. to this arrangement.

MADRAS STAFF CORPS—LIEUT. WILLIAMS.

No. 501.—The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 133 of March 31, are published for general information:—

Para. 1. I have received and considered in Council your letter No. 375, dated Dec. 31, 1861, transmitting correspondence relating to a memorial from Lieut. Williams, 13th Madras N.I., praying for admission to the Madras staff corps, notwithstanding that he has not passed the prescribed examination in Hindostanee.

2. Paras. 69, 72, 73, 74, 75, of your G.O. of April 10, 1861, No. 332, offer the privilege of joining the staff corps to officers now holding staff appointments upon certain conditions. Para. 72 requires of them simply that they do not possess the substantive rank of colonel.

3. Para. 75 declares that those whose tenure of staff appointment, at the time of transfer to the staff corps, shall have exceeded one year, will not be subjected to probation or to any introductory test other than those already prescribed for any department in which they may be serving.

* Published in G.G.O. No. 1,118 of Dec. 6, 1861.

* See General Mansfield's Minute, page 106 of Appendix to Report of Royal Commission, 1859.

4. Para. 73 admits to the staff corps officers who have held staff appointment within the last three years, upon the understanding that they shall have passed the prescribed examination in Hindostanee, and did not lose their appointment through misconduct.

5. In para. 75 it is also declared that the option of joining the staff corps will be open to those officers only who may be considered by the Government under which they are serving to be in all respects fit for the staff corps.

6. It appears that Lieut. Williams has been for some years adjutant of his corps, having passed the examination required in Madras for such appointment. A case has been also brought to my notice (and there may be other similar cases) of an officer in Bombay, who has been actually employed upon the general staff having passed in a vernacular language, common to the whole or a large portion of that presidency, though not in Hindostanee.

7. It would appear hard, if, by a too strict and literal application of the rule regarding the Hindostanee language, the privilege of joining the staff corps on its first formation should be denied to officers who have been already pronounced by their own Government qualified for certain staff situations, and have performed their duties well therein.

8. Taking these circumstances into consideration, as also the necessity of adopting and enforcing one uniform rule in future for all staff officers in regard to the examination in Hindostanee, I have determined that in cases of both kinds, that is, where an officer has qualified for a staff employment or department, as Lieut. Williams appears to have done, by passing the prescribed examination for that office or department, and also in the case of an officer whose proficiency in any language other than Hindostanee has already been accepted as qualification for general staff, such officers, if coming under the terms of para. 69 of your G.O. No. 332 of April 10, 1861, may be appointed to the staff corps under paras. 72 and 73 of that order provisionally, and with the understanding that they pass the examination in Hindostanee required for general staff within six months from the date of their appointment to that corps, failing which they will revert to their former corps and position in the service.

AUDIT OF PAYMASTERS' ACCOUNTS.

Fort William, April 22.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 100, dated 17th March, 1862, is published for general information and guidance:—

The Secretary of State for War having decided that under clause 5 of the good conduct warrant, soldiers who have completed 16, 21, and 28 years' service, and whose names have not been entered in regimental defaulters' book for the last 14 years preceding their claim, are entitled to receive at once the rates of good conduct pay granted after 18, 23, and 28 years' service, respectively. I have no objection to this interpretation of the warrant being made applicable to the troops in India, and request that the necessary instructions may be issued accordingly.

Hitherto, on a British Regiment in the Bengal Presidency leaving India, the paymaster has been allowed to remain in India for one month after departure of his corps, in order to settle his accounts, and for the whole of that period, if not embarking before its expiration, he has retained Indian allowances.

2. This indulgence was necessary while British corps throughout the Bengal Presidency were paid by advances issued from the Presidency Pay-office, a system which led to open accounts.

3. In future, however, the detention of the paymaster will not usually be necessary, consequent on British regiments being now paid through divisional paymasters, whereby the advances issued taken up for the issue of pay to soldiers for the current month are settled on the presentation of the abstracts on the first day of the month following, and open accounts are not allowed to exist.

4. The period for a paymaster to settle his accounts is accordingly restricted to one week, or to the first departure of a mail steamer on or after expiration of that week. Permission to remain in India, or draw Indian allowances, for a longer period, will only be granted when reasonable cause can be shown, and on special application in each case. The Controller of Military Finance in submitting the request will explain fully the progress made by the examiners in auditing the accounts, as also the state of the paymaster's transactions.

Return Home of the 75th Foot.

Adjutant-General's Office, H.M.'s British Forces Calcutta, April 14th, Head Quarters, Camp Umballah, March 19th.

No. 53.—On the departure of the 75th regiment for England, the C.-in-C. has the satisfaction to record in a general order the very important and gallant service which the regiment performed at the action of Budlee-ke-Seraie in 1857.

Budlee-ke-Seraie was one of the first occasions on which the enemy in position offered serious resistance to the British troops.

Advantageously placed in very difficult ground, the rebels, in force, prevented with the fire of an entrenched battery of heavy guns the advance to Delhi of the force under the late gallant Lieut.-General Sir Henry Barnard, K.C.B.

The only means of effecting a passage was the capture of the battery.

Resolutely led by Brigadier General Showers, C.B., the 75th regiment, exposed for twelve hundred yards to a destructive fire of round shot, shell, and grape, which caused a very heavy loss to the regiment in killed and wounded, took the battery by storm, and enabled the British force to take up, that same day, their position before Delhi.

Nothing more useful, nothing more brilliant, was done during the late campaign than the opening at Budlee-ke-Seraie of the road to Delhi, by the 75th regiment.

At Delhi the 75th regiment distinguished itself as part of the attacking column under the orders of an officer of most remarkable merit, whose loss the army has never ceased to deplore, Brigade General Nicholson, C.B.

In noticing the good conduct of the regiment at Budlee-ke-Seraie and Delhi the names of two officers and a non-commissioned officer of the regiment, whose gallantry was as continued and devoted as it was productive of important results, ought not to be omitted. They are those of Captain, now Brevet Major Brookes, Lieutenant, now Captain Le Pelley, and Colour Sergeant Coughlan.

Native Cavalry and Irregular Infantry.

Head Quarters, Simla, April 17.—Officers commanding regiments of native cavalry and irregular infantry are directed to furnish direct to the military secretary to the C.-in-C. on the first of every month, a nominal roll showing the dates of first commissions, the army rank, and dates of appointment, of all European officers borne on the strength of their corps.

These rolls are also to exhibit what appointment each European officer is holding, whether he is permanently or temporarily attached, whether he is a paid or an unpaid doing duty officer, and if absent, on what account, and under what authority.

Amendments in the Military Regulations.

With the sanction of Government, the C.-in-C. is pleased to direct the following amendments in the military regulations, section X.CIII. Part I.

Para. 1. In lines 5 and 6, the words, "Her Majesty's Indian Military" are to be substituted for "East India Company's."

Para. 5 is to conclude thus: "Native army may be sued in the European Court of Requests; but to the extent of two hundred rupees only."

Para. 7, in line 7, the word "warned" is to be substituted for, "directed." In line 8 the word "forthwith" is to be expunged. In line 9, after "Government," the words "and for authority to eject the individual," are to be added. The parenthetical marks are to be expunged.

Para. 6 is to stand as follows: "Claims are to be preferred to the station staff officer on or before the 1st of the month. Applications for registry of claims may be made either personally or by agent, or in writing; but when a written plaint is delivered, it must be on stamped paper of the value required by law for a plaint in a civil court. The claims are to be entered in a register which is to specify the nature and amount of the demand, the residence of the plaintiff and defendant, and the witnesses or evidence to prove the claim. Claims by plaintiffs at the station preferred after the 1st of the month cannot be submitted until the following month."

Para. 14 is to commence thus: "A plaintiff at a distance should employ an agent at the station to apply for registration of the claim and to deliver to the station staff officer the vouchers, receipts, or other documentary evidence in support of the claim; but if he elects to send a plaint on stamped paper he must himself bear the expense of the stamp. The station staff officer," &c., to the end, will stand as at present.

Para. 16. Line 4 is to stand thus: "written statements of the plaintiffs, if any, and the defendants' acknowledgments," &c.

Para. 38. The following words are to be added: "It cannot—whether claimed or not—award price of stamp, costs, or expenses of any kind, in addition to the amount of the original debt decreed."

Para. 45. In line 3, after the word "award," the following words are to be inserted: "or of its illegally decreasing the price of any stamp, or any costs or other expenses."

Claimants for the Victoria Cross.

Head Qrs., Simla, April 29.—Embarrassment has lately arisen from the defective nature of evidence submitted to the C. in C. in support of a claim to the Victoria Cross.

The terms of the statement of the principal evidence, and without which the C. in C. would not have recommended the claimant for the Victoria Cross, caused H.E. to believe that the evidence had been an eye witness of the act of bravery on which was founded the claim.

Afterwards, and immediately before the decoration was to be conferred on the claimant, this evidence casually informed the C. in C. that he had not witnessed the act of bravery.

As previously stated, H.E. would not have considered the claim valid, unless supported by ocular evidence.

The claimant was therefore informed by the adjt. gen. of the army, and the C. in C. that, in accordance with the spirit of the Warrant and the custom in similar cases, ocular, and not hearsay, evidence was necessary.

But H.E. was so anxious not to disappoint the claimant, that he informed him that, if he could produce any one British officer who had witnessed the act, he would give him the Cross.

The officer stated his inability to do so, and the presentation was deferred.

Subsequently, a British officer, who had not appeared at all as an evidence in the case, sent in a statement to the C. in C. to the effect that he had, personally, witnessed the act of bravery.

Sir Hugh Rose, therefore, directed the Victoria Cross to be presented, with the usual ceremony, to the claimant.

In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience caused by the defective evidence in the case in question, and in several other instances, all statements of services sent, for the future, in support of claims of officers for promotion, orders, decorations, or any reward whatever, are to specify, distinctly, whether the individual supporting the claim witnessed, personally, the act of distinguished, gallant, or useful conduct in the field; or whether his evidence is hearsay.

MADRAS STAFF CORPS.

HEALTH OF THE TROOPS.

Poona, May 16.—Commanding officers and medical officers of H.M.'s regts. are requested to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the orders regarding the amount of conservancy establishment allowed under the orders of Govt. to corps and detachments. [G.G.O. 26th Feb., 1861, No. 93.]

It frequently happens that the C. in C. has to examine long complaints on matters connected with the health of the troops, the remedy for which is already in the hands of commanding officers and medical officers, if they would have the goodness to apply the means placed at their disposal.

A like principle should be kept in view in the matter of attention to drains, cesspools, and any lodgment of water or collection of filth. Personal attention on the part of the commanding officer and regt. staff officers, including the surgs., and orders given immediately when irregularities are discovered, will, in a great many cases, obviate the necessity of a recurrence to superior authority, or demands on the public purse, while the object desired, viz., of ensuring the comfort and health of the troops, will be attained with a great economy of time and correspondence.

The underment. commissioned officer passed the colloq. exam. in Hindoostanee:—

MINUTES WRITTEN BY THE LATE VICE-ROY AND HIS COUNCIL UPON THE RETIREMENT OF COLONEL JAMESON.

No. 200.

India-office, S.W., January 13, 1862.

Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to forward, for your information, copy of a despatch from the Government of India relating to the highly satisfactory manner in which your duties as First Member and President of the Military Finance Commission were performed, and requesting that the hearty thanks of the Governor-general in Council might be offered to you for the very valuable service which you have rendered to her Majesty's Government in India.

In communicating to you the contents of this despatch, with copies of minutes upon the same subject by the Governor-general and by Sir Bartle Frere, concurred in by Mr. Beadon and Sir R. Napier, I am directed to inform you that Sir Chas. Wood fully concurs with the Government of India in ascribing to you the merit of having been the original and main agent in the founding and first working of that most important department, and in acknowledging the admirable manner in which your duties were discharged, and the valuable service which you have thereby rendered to her Majesty's Government.—I am, &c., (Signed)

T. T. FEARS, Maj.-gen., Military Sec.
Colonel Jameson.

No. 298 of 1861.—Military.—Separate.

To the Right Hon. Sir CHAS. WOOD, Bart., G.C.B., her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

Sir,—We have the honour to transmit herewith copies of minutes, recorded on the 28th October last, by the Governor-general and Sir Bartle Frere, and concurred in by Mr. Beadon and Sir Robert Napier, in testimony of the very valuable services rendered to the Government of India by Col. G. J. Jameson, of the Bombay Army, late President of the Military Finance Commission, whose ill-health compelled him to return to England, and has also necessitated his resignation of that appointment.

Colonel Jameson, in a demi-official correspondence with the Governor-general, so satisfied his Excellency of his ability to suggest the best mode of effecting reductions in expenditure at the close of our military operations, that the Governor-general determined to appoint him to be the First Member and President of a Commission of Inquiry into the means of effecting that object.

This appointment took place in June, 1859, and Colonel Jameson discharged admirably the task committed to him, till, in June, 1860, failure of health made it necessary that he should leave India.

In April, 1860, the question of converting the Commission into a permanent Department of Military Finance was taken into consideration; but, before this could be carried out, Colonel Jameson was compelled to proceed to England. He has been succeeded in the post which would have been his by Colonel Balfour, the present head of the Military Finance Department.

It is no injustice to the subsequent energetic and most successful exertions of Colonel Balfour to ascribe to Colonel Jameson the merit of having been the original and the main agent in the founding and first working of this most important department, to which will henceforth be entrusted the duty of keeping watch over the military expenditure of the whole of British India.

We request that you will have the goodness to offer to Colonel Jameson an expression of our hearty thanks for the very valuable service that he has rendered to her Majesty's Government in India.—We have, &c., (Signed)

MINUTE BY H.E. THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

1. Recent correspondence regarding the office of Controller of Military Finance at Bombay [Colonel Jameson and the Military Finance Department] has brought to my mind that Colonel Jameson, who held that office, and whose ill-health has compelled him, whilst in England, to tender his resignation of it, has been allowed to resign it without any expression of the commendation or of the thanks of the Government of India. I greatly regret this.

2. It was Colonel Jameson who, after a demi-official correspondence with myself regarding the best mode of effecting reductions in expenditure at the close of our military operations in 1859, was appointed, in June of that year, to be the First Member and President of a Commission of Inquiry into the means of reducing military expenditure. Colonel Jameson discharged this task admirably, and in April, 1860, the question of converting the Commission into a permanent Department of Military Finance was taken into consideration. Before this could be carried out Colonel Jameson was compelled to leave India. He has been succeeded in the post which would have been his by Colonel Balfour, the present head of the Military Finance Department.

3. It is no injustice to the subsequent energetic and most successful exertions of Colonel Balfour to ascribe to Colonel Jameson the merit of having been the original and the main agent in the founding and first working of this most important department, to which will henceforth be entrusted the duty of keeping watch over the military expenditure of the whole of British India; and I wish that the hearty thanks of the Governor-general in Council be offered to Colonel Jameson for the very valuable service that he has rendered to her Majesty's Government in India.

4. I trust that the Military Finance Department will continue to receive at all times the careful support of the Governor-general in Council and of the Secretary of State. Whenever it may overstep the strict bounds of its functions, as, in the exercise of duties which are novel in India, may probably now and then happen, it will of course be corrected by the Governor-general in Council, as it has hitherto been; and whenever its recommendations are not, in the opinion of the Governor-general in Council, judicious, they will of course be rejected; also the responsibility of each department subjected to its supervision must always be carefully preserved. But the want of such an institution as that of the Military Finance Department in past times has, I fully believe, cost India some millions; and now that the military expenditure of India will be determined far more than heretofore by authorities in England, and in some degree by authority which is charged with no responsibility in regard to the finances of India, I fear that, unless a general supervision is exercised in India, far more close than any that can proceed from the secretariats, or from any other military and financial departments which the Governor-general in Council has hitherto had at command, there will be very great danger that the military expenditure of the country will, in many branches, be framed at an unnecessarily high rate, and that expenses will, from time to time, be permitted, and become recognised, which India has no need to incur.

(Signed) CANNING.

Camp Allahabad, October 28, 1861.

I concur with the remarks of his Excellency the Governor-general as regards the merit of Colonel Jameson, and also the value of the Military Finance Department, especially when confined strictly within its proper provinces.

(Signed) R. NAPIER.
C. BEADON.

FUNERAL OF EARL CANNING.

Lord Canning was buried at Westminster Abbey on Saturday. The funeral was not public; indeed, in many respects it might have been considered too private for one who was followed to the grave by so many of those whose rank, public services, position, and character gave them the first place in the empire. There was a considerable crowd assembled round the doors. A sun-burnt, grey-headed man, who pressed to the gate and was not allowed to enter, exclaimed, "I would give all I have to see it. I served under him; and no better man lies inside these walls."

Soon after eleven o'clock the funeral cortege passed down Victoria-street to the western cloisters. A long array of carriages followed those which contained the chief mourners, the relatives and personal friends of the deceased. About half past eleven o'clock the door of the western cloister opened, and the head of the funeral procession entered; at the same time the organ pealed forth the solemn strains which Croft has given to the words, "I am the resurrection and the life," and the white-robed boys of the choir chaunted in unison with the clergyman the chords, to which the feet of those in the procession kept measured tread. The beadsmen, or those who receive as the last remnant of monastic benediction the alms of the abbey, led the way in their gowns—old white-haired veterans tottering to the grave with many-barred ribands, &c., supported by their younger fellow-almsmen. After the choir came the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, next a stand of waving black plumes borne on the head of one of the funeral servants. The coffin, covered with the pall, on which was emblazoned an earl's coronet and the arms of the deceased, with the motto "Ne cede malis, sed contra," was carried on men's shoulders up the aisle, and at its foot appeared the Marquis of Clanricarde, who, as brother-in-law of the noble dead, followed as chief mourner; then two by two came the mourners—Lord Dunkellin, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, Mr. Henry Bentinck, the Earl of Harewood, the Earl of Cork, Mr. Beaumont, the Duke of Hamilton, Lord de Tabley, Lord Harriess, Earl Somers, the Duke of Argyll, Sir Charles Wood, Sir George Grey, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Cardwell, Lord Stanley of Alderley, the Duke of Somerset, Lord Lyveden, Lord Ashburton, Earl De Grey and Ripon, Earl Grey, Mr. T. Baring, the Bishop of Oxford, and a long procession of other members of the Government, associates and friends of the deceased, servants under his administration, admirers of his public character or private virtues.

THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE.

In a former number we alluded to the system of extortion by which the Maharaj priesthood were enabled to indulge their depraved tastes, and love of coarse sensuality. So utterly abominable are the practices of these wretched impostors that they far exceed in impurity the grosser rites of the Cyprian goddess. The most extraordinary circumstance, perhaps, connected with their habitual immorality is the ready complicity of their deluded votaries and victims. Fully aware of the unbridled profligacy, the shameless covetousness of their high priests, the Vallabacharyans still believe in their godhead, and deny the possibility of their doing wrong.

"Oh, the lover may

Distrust that look which steals his soul away;—
The babe may cease to think that it can play
With Heaven's rainbow; alchemists may doubt
The shining gold their crucible gives out;
But Faith, fanatic Faith, once wedded fast
To some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last."

It is almost beyond human credence, however, that, after the glaring exposure that has been made of the adulterous intercourse of the Maharajahs with their female worshippers, any man will still permit his wife to repair to their temples, much less to their private residence. It has been proved in open court, on the sworn testimony of unexceptionable witnesses, that these Maharajahs give themselves out to be incarnations of Krishna, by hereditary descent from Vallabacharya, the latest avatar of that amorous god. "The Maharajahs," observed Chief Justice Sausse, in passing judgment, "have been sedulous in identifying themselves with the god Krishna by means of their own writings and teachings, and by the similarity of ceremonies of worship and addresses which they require to be offered to themselves by their followers. All songs connected with the god Krishna, which were brought before us, were of an amorous character, and it appeared that songs of a corrupting and licentious tendency, both in idea and expression, are sung by young females to the Maharajahs upon festive occasions, in which they are identified with the god in his most licentious aspect. In these songs, as well as in stories, both written and traditional, which latter are treated as of a religious character in the sect, the subject of sexual intercourse is most prominent." By a certain mystic rite males in childhood and females at their marriage are dedicated in "mind, property, and body" to the Maharajahs, who, in consequence, exercise absolute control over their sectaries. The ceremonial forms of adoration are simply disgusting. The worshippers greedily swallow the pan-sooparee chewed by their Guru, drink the water in which he has washed his feet or bathed his body, and eat the dust on which he has trodden. The women swing him in imitation of Krishna's dalliance with the 16,000 gopees, or shepherdesses, and unhappily carry that imitation to its extremest limits. All this has been going on for generations in the very town of Bombay, unsuspected by the majority of the European residents, and yet perfectly notorious among the wilfully blinded natives. Even now these disgraceful practices have only been dragged into the light of day through the exemplary moral courage of a young Hindoo, of the Vallabacharyan sect, who could no longer endure to see spiritual mysteries degraded into the lowest forms of sensuality. Himself a member of the Banyan caste, and, therefore, a votary of the Maharajahs, he was naturally trained from his childhood to believe in their infallibility and spotless character. But as his powers of observation became enlarged and his judgment matured he was compelled to the conviction that more worthless hypocrites did not exist upon the surface of the earth. Still he held his peace until Jadunathjee Brizruttonjee Maharaj threw down the gauntlet, as it were, by publishing a series of articles in native periodicals impugning the good faith and sincerity of the Reformers and religious purists, among whom this young man, Kursondass Mooljee, occupied a distinguished position as the editor of the Satya Prakash, or, "The Light of Truth." The latter accepted the challenge, and on the 21st October, 1860, published a reply, entitled "On the Primitive Religion of the Hindus." The concluding paragraph is all that we need quote, and this was couched in the following terms:—

"Jadonathjee Maharaj has commenced issuing a small work styled 'The Propagator of our own Religion.' We ask him in what way do you wish to effect the propagation of religion? Your ancestors, having scattered dust in the eyes of simple people, made them blind: do you wish to make them see; for, taking a false pride in the upholding of your religion, do you wish to delude simple people still more? Jadonathjee Maharaj, should you wish to propagate or to spread abroad religion, then do you personally adopt a virtuous course of conduct, and admonish your other Maharaja, that as long as the preceptors of religion shall themselves appear to be immersed in the sea of licentiousness, for so long they shall not be competent to convey religious exhortation. Gadunathjee, having composed the commentary abovementioned, has attached to your Vaidhava permission a great blot of ink. Let that be first removed. Scorn the writer of the commentary. You Maharaja, acting up to that commentary, defile the wives and daughters of your devotees. Desist from that and destroy at once immorality such as that of the company at the Ruz festival. As long as you shall not do so, for so long you cannot give religious admonition, and propagate your religious faith. Do you be assured of that."

Upon this an action for libel was brought against Kursondass Mooljee in the Supreme Court of Bombay, and the trial was prolonged to a most unusual length, thirty-one witnesses being examined for the plaintiff and thirty-three for the defendant. The result has been a verdict for the former, with nominal damages to the extent of five rupees, but without costs. The Chief Justice, over-ruling his colleague, was of opinion that the libel was proved; but, on the other hand, he pronounced in favour of the defendant on the plea of justification. The Puisne Judge, Sir J. Arnould, for his part, was disposed to acquit the defendant entirely, and concluded his able and exhaustive review of the evidence on both sides with the following eulogistic remarks:—

"This trial," said the learned judge, "has been spoken of as having involved a great waste of the public time. I cannot quite agree with that opinion. No doubt much time has been spent in hearing this cause; but I would fain hope that it has not been all time wasted. It seems impossible that this matter should have been discussed thus openly before a population so intelligent as that of the natives of Western India, without producing its results. It has probably taught some to think; it must have led many to inquire. It is not a question of theology that has been before us; it is a question of morality. The principle for which the defendant and his witnesses have been contending is simply this, that what is morally wrong cannot be theologically right; that when practices which sap the very foundations of morality, which involve a violation of the eternal and immutable laws of right, are established in the name and under the sanction of religion, they ought for the common welfare of society, and in the interest of humanity itself, to be publicly denounced and exposed. They have denounced; they have exposed them. At a risk and at a cost which we cannot adequately measure, these men have done determined battle against a foul and powerful delusion. They have dared to look custom and error boldly in the face, and proclaim before the world of their votaries that their evil is not good, that their lie is not the truth. In thus doing they have done bravely and well. It may be allowable to express a hope that what they have done will not have been in vain; that the seed they have sown will bear its fruit; that their courage and constancy will be rewarded by a steady increase in the number of those whom their words and their examples have quickened into thought and animated to resistance, whose homes they have helped to cleanse from loathsome lawlessness, and whose souls they have set free from a debasing bondage."

The most significant commentary upon the real merits of the evidence adduced has been furnished by the plaintiff himself, who has fled from the Presidency in terror of being indicted for perjury by the opposite party. If any thing can possibly open the eyes of the Vallabacharyans it should be this virtual admission of guilt on the part of one of their most honoured Maharajahs; but, as the old proverb says, there are none so blind as those who will not see.

STATISTICS OF BRITISH INDIA.

It is commonly remarked, with greater smartness than truth, that there is nothing so deceptive as figures. In defiance, however, of all epigrams, we venture to attach considerable importance to a tabular statement that has been published in India, showing the ratio borne by the civil expenditure of the Anglo-Indian Government to the area, population, and revenue of the country. The total area, then, exclusive of Scinde, is estimated at 905,561 square miles, people 1 by 134,765,278 inhabitants. The gross revenue, inclusive of that from Scinde, levied upon land amounts to Rs. 203,193,270, from which has to be deducted the cost of collection, or Rs. 20,201,105,—the percentage of cost to collection being Rs. 9.94. Each square mile, therefore, yields Rs. 224, equivalent to a capitation tax of one rupee and a half. The Assessed Taxes are, in the gross, Rs. 20,840,975, collected at a cost of six per cent., or Rs. 1,250,513. The assessment is at the rate of Rs. 23 per square mile, or Rs. 0.15 per head. The Customs contribute a total amount of Rs. 37,394,103, minus cost of collection, Rs. 1,642,889, or Rs. 4.89 per cent.; each square mile returning Rs. 41, at the rate of Rs. 0.27 for each inhabitant. From Salt the gross collection is Rs. 39,800,000, at a cost of Rs. 7,600,097, or 19.09 per cent. The proportion of this branch of the revenue to a square mile is Rs. 43, or Rs. 0.29 per head. Stamps, again, yield Rs. 12,160,404, less charges Rs. 333,211, or 2.74 cent.; each square mile contributing Rs. 13, and each individual Rs. 0.09. Finally, from Opium the Government derives a gross revenue of Rs. 61,075,615, from which is to be deducted for cost Rs. 13,351,319, being a percentage of 21-86. The proportion of Opium to a square mile is therefore Rs. 67, or Rs. 0 45 per head. On the other hand, the expenditure on Law and Justice is Rs. 15,676,472 per annum, and on Education, Science, and Art Rs. 3,807,109, while the Police Charges amount to Rs. 22,347,004. In addition to these goodly rows of figures should be taken the Eastern Settlements, with an area of 1,575 square miles, and a population of 202,540 souls. This outlying portion of the British Empire in the East yields a Land Revenue of Rs. 1,276,671, minus Rs. 37,810, at the rate of 2-96 per cent.; the proportion to each square mile being Rs. 810, or per head Rs. 6-30. The Assessed Taxes return a net revenue of Rs. 1,340; that is, Rs. 0-8 per square mile, or Rs. 0-006 for each inhabitant. From Customs the Government receives Rs. 2,000, at a cost of Rs. 7,645, or 382-25 per cent.; the ratio to the square mile being less than a rupee, or 0-009 per head. The Civil expenditure is thus divided:—Law and Justice, Rs. 171,667; Police Charges, Rs. 33,540; and Education, Science, and Art, Rs. 13,890.

It may now, perhaps, be worth while to see in what proportion each province contributes to the State Exchequer, and how much it draws out for the purposes of its local civil administration. The receipts from Bengal are Rs. 44,902,952 as Land-tax, Rs. 7,500,000 as Assessed Taxes, Rs. 21,394,180 as Customs, Rs. 17,900,000 from Salt, Rs. 5,160,000 from Stamps, and Rs. 40,747,615 from Opium. In return for these munificent contributions it receives Rs. 3,531,241 for Law and Justice, Rs. 5,215,939 for Police Charges, and Rs. 1,087,229 for Education, &c. The area of Bengal Proper is stated at 253,000 square miles, with a population of 40,852,397. Of Oude the area is 25,000 square miles, with 7,000,000 inhabitants. The Land Revenue is Rs. 10,881,781, Assessed Taxes Rs. 1,100,000, and Stamps Rs. 214,300. The outgoings are for Law and Justice Rs. 509,396, for Police Charges Rs. 1,558,358, and for Education Rs. 13,500, or Rs. 0-001 per head. Nagpore, with an area of 76,432 square miles, contains only 4,650,000 inhabitants, who pay in Land-tax Rs. 3,357,501; Assessed Taxes, Rs. 218,550; and Stamps, Rs. 70,350. The charges of this province are Rs. 243,289 for Law and Justice; Rs. 418,847 for Police Charges, and nothing for Education. The North-West Provinces contain 108,000 square miles, peopled by 30,250,000 individuals, who contribute Rs. 42,550,504 to the Land Revenue; Rs. 3,181,486 to the Assessed Taxes; Rs. 591,100 to Customs; Rs. 6,350,000 to the Salt Revenue; and Rs. 2,000,000 to that from stamps. The disbursements are Rs. 3,849,466 for Law and Justice; Rs. 3,700,000 for Police Charges; and Rs. 651,430 for Education. The Punjab, again, has an area of 95,600 square miles, and a population of 15,467,821 souls, paying to the State Rs. 19,003,945 for Land-tax, Rs. 873,892 for Assessed Taxes, Rs. 3,135,000 for Customs, Rs. 2,500,000 for Salt, and Rs. 686,904 for Stamps. In return it receives Rs. 1,513,312 for Law and Justice, Rs. 2,400,000 for Police Charges, and Rs. 199,914 for Education. Of Scinde the area and population are not given, but the Land Revenue is put down at Rs. 3,473,250, Assessed Taxes at Rs. 340,520, Customs at Rs. 500,000, and Stamps at Rs. 168,000. Under the three heads of Civil Expenditure we find respectively the sums of Rs. 164,326, Rs. 697,766, and Rs. 27,283.

The superficial area of the Bombay Presidency appears to be 140,407 square miles, and its population 12,038,113, from whom is derived a Land revenue to the amount of Rs. 27,950,000, Assessed Taxes Rs. 3,583,045, Customs Rs. 7,950,000, Salt Rs. 4,550,000, Stamps Rs. 1,986,300, and Opium Rs. 20,328,000. On the debtor side Law and Justice stand for Rs. 1,790,479, Police Charges for Rs. 2,562,288, and Education for Rs. 445,090. Though of somewhat smaller extent, the Madras Presidency contains nearly twice as many inhabitants as that of Bombay, the former consisting of 136,872 square miles, and the latter of 23,301,697 souls. The Land tax yields Rs. 44,322,500, Assessed Taxes Rs. 3,066,080, Customs Rs. 2,465,770, Salt Rs. 8,500,000, and Stamps Rs. 1,712,200; the three branches of Civil expenditure being respectively charged with Rs. 2,528,410, Rs. 4,975,780, and Rs. 625,050. Pegu, Martaban, and Tenasserim, taken together, comprise 70,250 square miles, maintaining 1,205,250 inhabitants. These three provinces contribute to the Exchequer Rs. 4,870,981 from the Land-tax, Rs. 214,613 from Assessed Taxes, Rs. 1,343,553 from Customs, and Rs. 161,850 from Stamps. Their outgoings are 645,547 rupees for Law and Justice, 562,872 for Police, and 42,720 for Education. Under the head of "General and Political"—to which neither area nor population is assigned—we find a revenue from Land-tax to the value of 442,685 rupees, from Assessed Taxes 961,449, from Customs 12,000, and from Stamps 500. The disbursements, however, are very considerable, and absorb far more than the receipts, the charges for Law and Justice being 900,006 rupees, for Police 185,154, and for Education 714,893.

From these details we gather that the Land revenue is at the rate of 1-09 rupee per head in Bengal, 1-55 in Oude, 0-72 in Nagpore, 1-40 in the N.W.P., 1-22 in the Punjab, 2-32 in Bombay, 1-90 in Madras, and 4-12 in Pegu, Martaban, and Tenasserim. The Assessed Taxes in the same manner are 0-18 rupee in Bengal, 0-15 in Oude, 0-04 in Nagpore, 0-10 in the N.W.P., 0-05 in the Punjab, 0-28 in Bombay, 0-13 in Madras, and 0-17 in Pegu, &c. Customs are levied from each inhabitant at the rate of 0-52 rupee in Bengal, 0-01 in the N.W.P., 0-20 in the Punjab, 0-66 in Bombay, 0-10 in Madras, and 1-11 in Pegu, &c. The Salt duty, of the oppressiveness of which so much nonsense has been written and spoken, costs each individual per annum 0-43 rupee in Bengal, 0-20 in the N.W.P., 0-16 in the Punjab, 0-37 in Bombay, and 0-36 in Madras. The Stamps, if equally distributed, would amount annually to 0-12 rupee per head in Bengal, 0-03 in Oude, 0-01 in Nagpore, 0-06 in the N.W.P., 0-04 in the Punjab, 0-16 in Bombay, 0-07 in Madras, and 0-13 in Pegu, &c. The Civil expenditure, if regarded from the same point of view, would amount to an individual charge of 0-08 rupee for Law and Justice in Bengal, 0-07 in Oude, 0-05 in Nagpore, 0-12 in the N.W.P., 0-09 in the Punjab, 0-14 in Bombay, 0-10 in Madras, and 0-53 in Pegu, &c.; for Police, to 0-12 in Bengal, 0-22 in Oude, 0-09 in Nagpore, 0-12 in the N.W.P., 0-15 in the Punjab, 0-21 in Bombay, 0-21 in Madras, and 0-46 in Pegu, &c.; and for Education, Science, and Art to 0-02 in Bengal, 0-01 in Oude, 0-02 in the N.W.P., 0-01 in the Punjab, 0-03 in Bombay, 0-02 in Madras, and 0-03 in Pegu, Martaban, and Tenasserim.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 13.

RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY BILL.
On the order of the day for going into Committee upon this Bill,

The Duke of ARGYLL (in answer to Lord Lyveden) said this Bill was intended to give the sanction of Parliament not to the arrangement between the Government and the new company, but only to that limited arrangement between the Government and the old company under which the latter would transfer to the new company their property in the cable upon payment of a sum of £36,000 a year by way of interest, such sum being now converted into the more negotiable form of annuities charged upon the Consolidated Fund.

The Bill then passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 17.

DEATH OF LORD CANNING.

Earl GRANVILLE, with evident emotion, said: It is my duty, however painful, to inform the House of the loss of one of its most distinguished members. That great, just, and courageous man, Lord Canning, is no more. He has, under Divine Providence, by the highest qualities that dignify statesmanship, preserved and strengthened the dominion of his Sovereign and his country over a vast and prosperous empire. He has sacrificed, but not thrown away, his own life, and that of one dearer to him, in the work. This House will, in unison with the Queen and her people, appreciate the national loss we have sustained.

A few moments passed in profound silence.

Lord CHELMSFORD then said: In the absence of the noble earl (the Earl of Derby) I cannot refrain from joining in the strong expressions of regret which we have just heard from the noble lord. I am sure your lordships deeply sympathise with those sentiments, and I only wish I had words to express my sense of the irreparable loss which the country has sustained.

Lord BROUGHAM: My lords, I am sure there can be no dissident voice, not only in Parliament, but throughout the country, to the expression of deep regret at the loss we have just sustained. Without any distinction of party, and without any difference of rank, I believe it will be admitted that the talents and the virtues of Lord Canning stand as high and in as proud a position as those of any man who has ever served the Queen.

Lord LYVEDEN: Having been associated with Lord Canning during the most eventful period of his career, I cannot refrain from saying one or two words on this occasion. It is greatly to the honour of Lord Canning that he went out to India impressed with the belief that he would have a long reign of peace and prosperity, during which he would be able to promote the social happiness and the material welfare of the people of India. But during his sway the greatest insurrection which history records took place, and in place of new financial arrangements he had to display his energy and his resources in defending the empire of the Queen. Equally incapable on the one hand of being induced to do what was wrong by popular applause, and of being deterred from doing what was right by popular detraction, he had the infinite glory of finishing his career as he intended to commence it—by setting right the finances of the country, and by improving its social condition. His private and attached friends, as well as the whole country, must deeply lament his loss, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that he died not too soon for his glory, and that he was withdrawn from the scene after achieving the greatest honour which can be gained by an Englishman—that of having preserved for his country one of its most important provinces, and raised it to a state of prosperity which it had never enjoyed before.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 17.
THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary of State for India whether there was any foundation for the statement in the military journals that 4,000 troops were immediately to be sent to India; whether the additional annual cost of these troops, amounting to above £400,000, independently of £13 per man for home charges suddenly thrown upon the revenues of India would not destroy the equilibrium of receipt and expenditure provided for in Mr. Laing's budget for 1862-3; and whether it was prudent to suffer the continuance of the alleged existing irritation in India arising from the pressure of the income-tax to assist in the maintenance of the present large European force in a time of peace?

Sir C. WOOD was understood to say that no measures out of the ordinary course had been taken in sending troops to India. A certain amount of force had been fixed for that empire, and he did not believe that it had been reached at that moment.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 19.

RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY BILL.

This Bill, instead of being read a third time, was, on the suggestion of Lord REDESDALE, re-committed, and ordered to be reprinted, with an amendment proposed by the Duke of ARGYLL, to the effect that as it had on a former occasion been contended that the first three lines of the first clause, taken in connection with the preamble, gave a Parliamentary sanction to the arrangement with the new company, and that, therefore, the arrangement ought to be set forth in the Bill, he should propose to omit those lines in the first clause, and, at the same time to add to the Bill a schedule containing an abstract of the arrangement.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 19.

EMPLOYMENT OF NAVAL OFFICERS IN CHINA.

Lord R. MONTAGU asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether it was true that the services of Captain Sherard Osborne, or of any other officer of her Majesty's navy were to be placed at the disposal of the Chinese Government; whether such officer would be paid by the Chinese Government, and whether he would, at the same time, retain his commission and continue to receive pay as an officer in her Majesty's navy; and whether one or more gunboats were to be lent to the Chinese Government for any purpose they might think proper?

Mr. LAYARD said that application had been made for the services of Captain S. Osborne and other officers. The subject was under the consideration of the Government, but he was not aware that any decision had been come to upon it. He did not know that any gunboat had been lent to the Chinese Government.

Mr. BRIGHT: By whom was the application made, and when?

Mr. LAYARD: By the agents of the Chinese Government in this country.

THE NEW REGIMENTS.

Sir A. AGNEW desired to know why the officers of the 19th, 20th, and 21st hussars, and of the regiments of infantry from the 101st to the 108th inclusive, were not gazetted; it being understood that all these regiments were embodied, and that the officers of most of them had been appointed and had performed their regimental duties for a considerable time?

Sir G. C. LEWIS said that the Indian Government were organising these regiments, but the officers could not be gazetted until the rolls were received in this country.

JAPAN.

Mr. WHITE asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the ports in Japan, which were to be opened in conformity with the treaty, would be opened at the time fixed, and if not, why the provisions of the treaty were not to be carried out?

Mr. LAYARD said that her Majesty's Government had come to the determination to defer the execution of the third article of the treaty of August, 1858, for five years, to commence on the 1st of January, 1863. According to that article, certain ports in Japan were to be open to English traders. Under the arrangement he had mentioned, that opening would be postponed for five years.

COTTON.

Mr. J. B. SMITH called attention to the obstacles existing in India to the increased growth of cotton, and the importance to India and to this country of their removal. We were living now, he observed, in a cotton famine, which to a large class in this country was a famine of food, and the prospect of a supply from America was small. The only other country which could supply cotton in quantity was India. The Indian cotton, however, was considered inferior to the American, which was attributed to the state of the Indian mind. He detailed some of the efforts made to overcome the prejudices of the cultivators, and especially the results of the experiments of Mr. Shaw, in Dharwar, which proved that India was capable of growing cotton equal to ordinary Orleans, and this cotton formed the bulk of the raw material used in the manufactures of this country. He then adverted to the obstacles which impeded this branch of agriculture in India—the rudeness of the implements, the necessity of works of irrigation, the poverty of the ryots, and their dependence upon the soucars, or native bankers. But the great obstacle was the want of cheap carriage, and he dwelt upon the importance of opening the navigation of the river Godavery, which communicated with some of the finest cotton districts. He complained of the backwardness of the Government to promote this work, and, though he believed they were now in earnest, they were still parsimonious in their supply of money, which, even if borrowed, would yield a large return. But, without English superintendence and capital, good cotton could not be grown in India with advantage; and there must be good water-conveyance. He wanted, then, to know what course the Government meant to pursue, and what encouragement they would offer to English agents? He moved for copies of further correspondence relating to the improvement of the navigation of the Godavery.

Mr. SMOLLETT could not admit the necessity of the Government giving a direct encouragement to the growth of cotton in India. All obstacles, however, should be removed, and the chief obstacle was, he said, the want of a permanent tenure of land, on the principle of Lord Cornwallis's settlement in Bengal. From local knowledge, he professed great distrust in regard to the Godavery scheme, which he pronounced a mad proposition, the river running through an unhealthy country, destitute of timber, and without inhabitants. Before any further expenditure was incurred in this scheme, he thought a commission should be appointed in India to examine the question in all its bearings.

Mr. TURNER stated the result of a purchase of cotton made for him in India, and its quality in comparison with American cotton. He believed we could get a sufficient supply of good cotton from India to meet all our wants, if the best efforts of the Indian Government were directed to the subject.

Sir C. WOOD said he thought Mr. Smith had overlooked the state of the Indian finances, the difficulties with which the Government had contended, and what they had really done. He reminded the House of the large sums expended in India upon public works of one kind or another, and he did not think it wise or politic, he said, to borrow money for such a purpose. He stated the steps which had been taken by the Government to increase the supply of cotton, observing that all the evidence tended to show that the same means which had been employed in the cases of sugar, silk, and indigo would be equally successful in the growth and improvement of cotton, and he had no doubt that before long, if a remunerative price were paid for Indian cotton, we should be, if not independent of other countries for the supply of this article, supplied from India to a considerable extent. Whatever facilities the Government could give for the promotion of this object would be afforded. He showed what had been accomplished in improving the means of communication by railroads, remarking that the construction of ordinary roads was difficult, owing to the nature of the soil and the absence of materials. As to the opening of the navigation of the Godavery, he had always been of opinion that it was desirable; and, though he did not anticipate all the advantages which Mr. Smith expected from the work, the navigation should be opened, and everything had been done that could be done to complete it. He did not oppose the motion.

Colonel W. PATTEN expressed great satisfaction at the statements of Sir C. Wood, and the prospects they held out.

Mr. BAZLEY believed that large supplies of excellent cotton might be obtained from India, and urged the Government by every means in their power to promote and facilitate its cultivation by lessening the cost of carriage, augmenting the supply of water, and removing obstacles to the purchase of land.

Mr. A. MILLS briefly commented upon some remarks made by Mr. Smollett.

Mr. FINLAY said the difficulty of doing away with the middlemen, who interposed between the cultivators and the buyers of cotton in India, was that the ryots were so poor that they required advances in small sums, for which they could give no security but their crops.

Some observations were made by Colonel SYKES, Mr. CAIRD, Mr. GREGSON, and Mr. VANSITTART.

Mr. SMITH withdrew his motion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 20.

THE OPIUM CROP.

Mr. TORRENS asked the Secretary of State for India whether there was any truth in the statements which had been published in various newspapers of a deficiency in the yield of opium for the season, and, if so, whether it was likely that any loss would ensue in the revenue in India; and whether any representation of grievances had been made to the local Government by ryots in different zillahs in Bengal, who received advances from the Government there to enable them to cultivate the poppy plant; if so, would he describe generally what were the grievances complained of, and whether the Governor-general or the Lieutenant-governor had appointed a commission to inquire into them.

Sir C. WOOD had received no official information upon any of the points to which the hon. member had directed attention. He had reason to believe that there had been some failure in the opium crop, but it by no means followed that there would be a loss of revenue, because the sale of a smaller quantity at a higher price might produce as good a revenue as that of a larger quantity at a lower rate.

THE LATE LORD CANNING.

Charles John Canning was born at Gloucester-lodge, Brompton—a house now incorporated with the Kensington Museum—in 1812, the third son of the celebrated George Canning. The most important fact connected with his early life is his education at Christ Church, Oxford. We have often had to record the glory of this College as the chief nursing mother of statesmen in our time. In the previous generation Trinity College, Cambridge, had this honour; but the race of veterans whom she reared are now almost gone, Lord Lansdowne being one of the very few left, and Lord Palmerston being claimed by St. John's. Christ Church was the intellectual home of Peel and the followers of Peel. Among the followers of Peel, indeed, we cannot count Sir George Lewis, but there remain Lord Stanhope, Mr. Gladstone, Lords Dalhousie, Canning, and Elgin. The last four were at College together; the last three graduated very nearly at the same time. They all obtained honours; but the two who were wholly Scotch were least high, while the two who were only half Scotch stood the highest. Lords Elgin and Dalhousie were respectively first class and fourth class in classics; Mr. Gladstone, on the other hand, was a double first, while Lord Canning all but reached this position, for he was of the first class in classics, and of the second in mathematics. Three of these have been successively lifted to one of the most splendid positions which a British subject can enjoy. Lord Dalhousie was Governor-general of India from the beginning of 1848; Lord Canning succeeded him early in 1856. Let us hope that Lord Elgin, upon whom the honour has fallen in the present year, will enjoy a happier fortune than that of either of his college friends.

Lord Canning, then Mr. Canning (for the peerage which his father had earned was given in the first instance to his mother) entered upon public life in 1836, when he appeared in the House of Commons as member for Warwickshire. In the following year his mother died, and he went to the Upper House. When Sir R. Peel came into power, in 1841, he was appointed Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs. He held this post till 1846, in spite of the inconvenience of having both the Secretary and the Under-Secretary of the same department in the House of Lords. Of course, Lord Aberdeen could not be spared from the Foreign-office, and it may be imagined both that Lord Canning would feel anxious to distinguish himself in the same political line as his father, and that Sir Robert Peel, in tender memory of the past, would be particularly ready to further the political aspirations of George Canning's son. For a month or two, in the reconstructed Ministry of Sir Robert Peel, Lord Canning was Chief Commissioner of Woods and Forests; but in July, 1846, he resigned with his party, and, declining high office at the hands of Lord Derby, returned with the Coalition Ministry in 1853. In the Government of Lord Aberdeen Lord Canning was Postmaster-general, and distinguished himself as far as possible in such a department by his administrative capacity. He worked very hard, made many changes in the internal organization of the department, and set on foot the practice of submitting annually to Parliament a report of the work, and especially the progress, achieved by the Post-office. He held the same appointment for a short time in Lord Palmerston's Cabinet, but it became necessary, as the year 1855 wore on, to select a successor to Lord Dalhousie, and none seemed so fit to send out as his college friend Lord Canning. The peculiar fitness of this selection lay in the fact that the Governor-generalship was the destined prize of which George Canning had been balked. He had received the appointment, he was on the eve of starting for India, when Lord Castlereagh committed suicide, and the Foreign office was left without a head. Canning, a comparatively poor man, gave up the chances of acquiring a fortune in the splendid post of Viceroy, in order to win a name for himself at home, and, perhaps, to reach the Premiership. He did win a name, and he did become First Minister, but he died in the effort. These were events which Lord Palmerston, as a Canningite, could not forget, and Lord Canning, otherwise well qualified for the post, was appointed to succeed Lord Dalhousie.

He began his reign in India on the last day of February, 1856, and the events of it are so recent, besides being, by their importance, so well known, that it can scarcely be necessary for us here and now to write their history. In the year after he assumed office the mutiny broke out, and he had to stem it as he could. Never has any Governor-general of India had to go through so fierce a trial. He had a fearful load of responsibility; for a moment the Indian empire seemed almost lost; in Calcutta the European inhabitants were in the greatest consternation; and Lord Canning was accused of weakness and softness in dealing with the crisis. The Indian empire was saved as by a miracle. It was saved by the firmness and the resolution of a very small band of men, chief among whom ranks Lord Canning. For a time even the friends of the Governor-general were in doubt as to the wisdom of his policy; but it is now confessed that in that terrible emergency he displayed extraordinary courage, great administrative and very great moral qualities. There are few finer things in modern history than the fact of his quietly remaining at his post after receiving Lord Ellenborough's outrageous despatch on the Government of Oude. As he had before been accused of too much leniency to the natives, he was now accused, and that, too, by the Home Government, and in the most extravagant terms, of too much severity. After such a public rebuke, especially in the knowledge that it was undesired, he could easily have escaped from the labour of a most arduous task, the pacification of India. He might have resigned, and let some new man undertake the work. He held on, however. He knew that under the circumstances resignation would be most embarrassing to the public service, and that no one could do the work of pacification so effectually as himself. He remained where he was, and he has had the satisfaction of seeing India once more happy and content, once more able to make the revenue meet the expenditure, once more promise to rise from its decay and to flourish in a new life. Having faced such unexampled dangers, having grappled with such enormous difficulties, and having accomplished such wonderful triumphs, Lord Canning came home, two months ago, for a little repose. The repose which he sought he has found in death.

Lord Canning, who was raised to an earldom in consequence of his services in India, has left no family. His titles, therefore, die with him, and the line of George Canning now survives only in Lady Clanricarde and her children.—Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.—The following are the names of the successful candidates at the competitive examination held on the 4th of June and following days for junior appointments in the Public Works Department in India, together with the number of marks obtained by each candidate, the maximum number of marks obtainable being 1,000:—

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. A. C. Gompert as Consul at Bombay for H. M. the King of Prussia.

APPOINTMENT.—CHINA.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint C. W. Murray, Esq., to be a Member of the Legislative Council of the Colony of Hong Kong.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL IN FOREIGN PARTS.—In Asia, in the four dioceses of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Colombo, this society now supports 75 clergymen, who are all missionaries to the heathen, and have under their charge 22,404 baptized native converts and 7,412 natives under Christian instruction preparatory to baptism. Ten years ago there were in connection with it within the same countries 18,822 baptized natives and 5,419 catechumens. New missions have been begun within the last year at Roorkee in Bengal, at Ootatoot in Madras, and at Singapore. To Borneo the society sent last September a band of five new missionaries.

QUEEN'S CADETS.—It has been officially notified that there exists vacancies for four naval Queen's cadets at the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. Candidates must be the sons of officers of the Royal Navy or Royal Marines who have fallen in action, or have died of wounds received in action or diseases contracted on active service, and have left their families in reduced circumstances. The age of admission is from sixteen to nineteen years. All applications to be addressed to the Secretary of the Admiralty, Whitehall, S.W.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The shipments of specie by the Ceylon were £410,251, of which £399,586 was silver and £10,665 gold; to Alexandria £1,000 in gold, to Ceylon £3,000 in gold, to India £1,665 in gold and £27,020 in silver, and to China and the Straits £372,566 in silver.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—A War-office order of the 20th inst. confers the decoration of the Victoria Cross on Captain Henry George Browne, late of the 32nd and now of the 100th Regiment, for conspicuous bravery during the siege of Lucknow.

ORDER OF THE BATH.—War-office, June 20.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Rutherford Alcock, Esq., C.B., her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in Japan to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders, of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

REWARDS FOR SERVICES.—LUCKNOW.—The following General Order from the Horse Guards, signed by Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B., Adjutant-General, has been promulgated at Chatham Garrison for general information:—"Her Majesty having been graciously pleased to grant to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers who composed the garrison of Lucknow, in 1857, the permission to reckon an additional year's service towards pay and pension, and having been pleased to extend this boon to the force which entered that place under the late Sir Henry Havelock in September of that year, is now further pleased to direct that the troops composing the detachment left by that officer in the Alumbagh on September 25, together with those who subsequently entered it and remained there until the relief by Lord Clyde, on Nov. 18, 1857, shall also participate in the above advantages. The grant is to be entered at once in the record of services of all those who are entitled to its advantages. This General Order is to be substituted for the one bearing the same number, and dated March 24, 1862, which is hereby cancelled. The additional year's service in all such cases is allowed to reckon towards the qualifications for medal and gratuity."

ANOTHER INDIAN TEA COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Eastern Bengal Tea Company, with a capital of £100,000, in £5 shares. The object is to cultivate three estates in the province of Cachar, to be purchased from Dr. Barry, one of the earliest tea planters in Eastern Bengal, and comprising in all about 10,000 acres. These estates are already partially planted and supplied with labour, and Dr. Barry is to act as superintending manager for three years.

INDIAN RIVER NAVIGATION.—A new undertaking is about to be introduced, to be called the "River Navigation of India and China Company." The capital proposed is £500,000, in shares of £5 each. The first object will be to provide efficient transport for the increasing traffic on the Ganges, and subsequently the operations will be extended to other Indian and also to Chinese rivers. The great want on the Ganges is of light-draught boats capable of reaching Allahabad in all seasons, and the plan of the present company consists in extending an experiment in that direction, which is stated already to have been made with great success. The Board of Management comprises several persons of Indian experience.

LARGE IRON BRIDGE FOR INDIA.—There is in course of construction in Manchester a very large iron railway and carriage way bridge combined, intended to span the Jumna, near Delhi. It is to consist of twelve spans, each girder being two hundred and sixteen feet long, which, with the thickness of the eleven piers upon which it is to rest, give a total length of over half a mile. The first span of this malleable iron lattice bridge is now completed. The metals for the East India Railway Company are laid along the top, and the roadway along the bottom, the latter having a clear height of sixteen feet. The bridge is from designs by A. M. Rendel, Esq., C.E., London, and is being constructed at Messrs. Ormerod, Grieson, and Co.'s, of the St. George's Ironworks, Hulme, Manchester. One unusual feature of the structure is that all the rivet holes are drilled, instead of being punched. The bridge, notwithstanding its great strength, has a light and airy appearance. The open lattice-work has the effect of relieving it from the dull and heavy aspect inseparable from tubular structures.

By Lieutenant-colonel W. HOUGH,

Late Deputy Judge-advocate-general, Bengal Army, and Author of several Works on Courts-Martial.

In one thick 8vo. vol., price 25s.

"It would be impossible to over-estimate the utility of this work to members of the military profession as a comprehensive exposition of the law especially applicable to them, and to the practice of military tribunals; and it would be difficult to speak in terms of commendation too high of the manner in which it has been executed."—Morning Chronicle.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territory subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 8s.

This subject kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 8s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 3 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CAROOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo, bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

WHITE and SOUND TEETH are Indispensable to personal attraction, and to health and longevity, by the proper mastication of food.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,

A white powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredient of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the teeth, and ensures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamel surface. Its antiseptic and antiscorbatic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of the decay of the teeth, induce a healthy action of the gums, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour indicative of perfect soundness. The breath also attains a grateful purity and fragrance. Price 2s. 9d. per box.

Caution.—The words "Rowlands' Odonto" are on the label, and "A. Rowland and Sons, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp. Sold by them, and by chemists and perfumers.

The NEW WATER CARAFE FREEZER or CHAMPAGNE FRAPPE PAIL. Everything converted with Freezing, of the best, cheapest, most modern, and reliable character, especially adapted for hot climates and ships' use. The CARBONATOR, a newly patented machine for the manufacture of Soda Water in a degree of perfection hitherto unknown, without trouble, at a trifling cost, and with no fear of getting out of order or bursting, it being made of pure Tin and Silver. REFRIGERATORS, or PORTABLE ICE HOUSES, of best make and in every variety. Prospectus free.

WENHAM LAKE ICE COMPANY, 140, STRAND, LONDON.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—

TRUE MADRAS CURRY and MULLIGATAWNY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. a dozen upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho-square; FORTNUM, MASON, & Co., Piccadilly; and of the Principal Sauce Vendors throughout the Kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS

Stand unequalled for restoring vigour to weak and relaxed constitutions, and have been proved to be the best medicine ever offered to the public. To those who are suffering from languor and exhaustion occasioned by a residence in hot climates, these Pills will be found particularly beneficial. They give energy to the muscles and nerves, strengthen the stomach, and completely renovate the system, so that the patient is astonished at the effect thus produced.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD, A. Chemist, 65, Charing-cross, London. In boxes 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

DISTEMPERS OF THE SKIN.—The readiness with which Holloway's ointment removes all obstructions in the circulation of the vessels and lymphatics, explains their irresistible influence in healing all sores, bad wounds, and indolent ulcers. To ensure the desired effect, the skin surrounding the diseased part should be fomented, dried, and immediately well rubbed with the Ointment. This will give purity to the blood and strength to the weakened nerves—the only conditions necessary for the cure of all those hideous ulcerations which render life almost intolerable. No sooner is the Ointment's protective power exerted than the destructive process ceases and the constructive business begins; new healthy growths appear to fill up the lately painful excavated pit.

TEMPORARY OFFICES—34, GRACECHURCH-STREET, E.C.

This Company is formed for the purpose of cultivating and producing tea on an extensive scale on the estates, described hereafter, in the province of Cachar.

The province of Cachar (an appendage of the Bengal presidency) lies immediately to the east of Sylhet, and while adjoining the district of Assam, is considerably more contiguous to Calcutta.

In 1854 the indigenous tea tree was discovered growing wild throughout this province, and since then most of the available lands have been taken up for the cultivation and manufacture of tea, which have proved eminently successful. Some of the teas grown on part of the Company's property have realised the highest prices in the market.

Tea estates in Cachar are becoming every year more and more valuable; for instance, the following tea companies' shares realised in January, 1862, as under, viz.:

The Shares of the Silchar Company's Gardens and Estate, 150 per cent. premium.

The Shares of the Equitable have changed hands frequently, at 300 per cent. premium.

The Ballydrain Company could have sold their shares, but refused to do so, at 300 per cent. premium.

All these companies are in active operation, and from the teas of this year's manufacture very large dividends are anticipated.

There are also several other companies that have been formed within the last three years, all of which are progressing satisfactorily, and large dividends are anticipated—namely:

The Cachar Tea Company—the first formed in the province of that name—the shares of which are now at 80 per cent. premium.

The Monocherra and the Mutual, both of which are equally prosperous, though, from no shares being offered, their premiums cannot be quoted.

This Company has agreed to purchase three estates, comprising not less than 10,000 acres of land in fee simple:—No. 1, nearest to Silchar, called "The Borokini"; No. 2, called "The Imperial"; No. 3, called "Lotakany."

No. 1 Estate is situated on the Gogra River, about six miles from the station of Silchar, the head-quarters of the local regiment and officers of Government. The area of this grant is 3,000 acres. 300 acres are already under plant, of which one-third is occupied by plants of considerable age in full bearing, and the remainder by plants of one year's growth. This garden is in excellent order and full of promise; it is under the management of one of the most experienced men in India, and has great capabilities. From this season's growth 18,000 lbs. to 20,000 lbs. of fine tea are now being manufactured, and 50 maunds (36 cwt.) of good tea seed are expected to be collected from this plantation, the aggregate value of which at the lowest calculation will not be less than £1,800.

On this estate there are 300 Coolies settled for a term of years.

A China tea maker is in charge of the tea factory, and a practical gardener is under engagement to go out to India and conduct the manual operations of the nurseries and gardens. This estate has two excellent bungalows for the manager and assistant, commodious lines (native houses) for the Coolies, and is well stocked with implements and every requisite.

No. 2 Estate is situated about sixteen miles from No. 1, in the Hylakandy Valley, on the Kutia Khul river, adjoining the Assam Company's property, and has water communication throughout the whole year. It has definite boundaries, has a good lay of land, and occupies a very central position in regard to the province and the neighbouring estates; it comprises about 5,000 acres, of which 200 acres have been opened up in the immediate vicinity of the river, and thickly filled in with healthy vigorous plants. The garden has a bungalow erected for its superintendent, and lines for the Coolies, and is well stocked with every essential for a tea garden. There are 200 men settled on the estate, and the whole is under the management of one of the most experienced tea planters in Cachar.

No. 3 Estate, comprising about 3,000 acres, is higher up the Hylakandy Valley, some six miles distant from No. 2.

Dr. Barry, the vendor of these estates, was the first who initiated the successful growth of tea in Eastern Bengal, without the boundaries of the Assam Tea District. He has such confidence in this undertaking, that he not only takes a considerable portion of his purchase money in shares, but moreover guarantees a minimum dividend of 6 per cent. per annum on the whole called-up capital for a period of three years.

The Directors have made favourable arrangements with Dr. Barry, who is under agreement to give his services for three years as superintending manager, and to provide the Company with whatever tea seed may be required for extending their operations, at current rates, a consideration of no small moment.

The business of the Company will be commenced as soon as the Directors shall be of opinion that adequate capital has been subscribed for. In the event of no allotment taking place, the deposits will be returned in full.

Prospectuses may be obtained of the Brokers to the Company, Messrs. Croaley Brothers, 30, Cornhill, and Messrs. Froom Brothers, 20, Change-alley, Cornhill, as well as at the offices of the Company, where every information will be given.

Applications for shares must be addressed in the annexed form, but no application will be considered unless a deposit of 10s. for each share applied for shall have been previously made with the Bankers of the Company.

The collected works of CHARLES LEVER in a uniform series must, like the Novels of SCOTT, BULWER, DICKENS, and THACKERAY, find a place on the shelves of every well-selected library. No modern productions of fiction have gained a greater reputation for their writer; few authors equal him in the humour and spirit of his delineation of character, and none surpass him for lively descriptive power and never-flagging story; and the whole Press of the United Kingdom has lavished the highest encomiums upon his works.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

NOTICE.

MESSRS. Wm. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE intelligence received by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd May dissipates the apprehensions that have been entertained with respect to the failure of the opium crop. It is true, indeed, that the crop has failed to a very considerable extent, but the revenue of the current year will not thereby be affected. The opium supply on which Mr. Laing founded his calculations was, of course, that produced in the preceding year, so that any shortcomings in the present one can have no other effect than to enhance the price, and consequently to augment the revenue. The estimated value was only 1,200 rupees a chest, but the price is already very nearly 1,500 rupees, and more likely to rise still higher than to fall below the last-mentioned sum. According to the Hurkaru, "all that has happened is, that instead of 4,000 chests a month for four months, there will be only 3,000—i. e., 31,000 chests of Bengal to sell instead of 35,000. But the price is now Rs. 1,490 a chest, and the trade, instead of apprehending a supply of 50,000 Bengal in 1863, are insured against any larger supply than 37,000 (or only 7,500 over this year), up to 1st January, 1864."

The disturbances in Assam have been entirely suppressed, and six of the unemployed Indian officers have been appointed as Assistant-Commissioners. A larger European agency is, however, imperatively demanded. The new Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, it is said, proposes to visit that district in person, and judge by personal inquiries on the spot what is really required to be done to ensure the continuance of peace and security.

Mr. Laing returns to Europe by this mail on six months' leave of absence. Whosoever wishes well to India will heartily pray for his perfect restoration to health, and a speedy return to the scene of his useful labours.

The local journals are full of the recent libel case in which Sir John Peter Grant was cast in damages. The plaintiff stated that the defendant, on the 1st September, 1860, published a book entitled "Selections from the Records of the Government of Bengal. No. XXXIII. Part III. Papers relating to Indigo Cultivation in Bengal," in which he inserted a privileged communication from Mr. Lushington, Commissioner of Nuddea, charging the plaintiff with being accessory before the fact to certain acts of lawlessness during the recent rent and indigo disturbances. Now, it so happened that the persons accused of taking part in these riots had been brought to trial and acquitted previous to the publication of these charges, so that nothing but malice or the most unpardonable negligence could account for Sir J. P. Grant's circulation of the calumny. The jury accordingly found him guilty, but as Mr. McArthur failed to show that his character had in any way suffered from the libel, nominal damages only were given, to the extent of one rupee. Vindictive damages were not asked for, but justice surely demanded that the plaintiff should not have been compelled to incur a heavy expense in clearing his reputation from defamatory allegations. Diis aliter visum. Sir J. P. Grant has therefore the miserable satisfaction of having inflicted a positive injury upon one of the hateful race of planters.

The news from China is very unsatisfactory. The English and French troops have assumed the offensive against the Taepings, and stormed the walled town of Kah-ding, twenty-five miles from Shanghai. The beginning of strife has been likened to the letting out of water, and nowhere does the similitude hold good so much as in our relations to China. All our wars with that empire have arisen out of trivial causes, and for the most part with the wrong on our side. We trust that we are not about to add to our former errors the responsibility of shedding human blood in a quarrel that does not concern us.

Two Indian questions were mooted in the House of Commons yesterday evening. Ever anxious to promote the material welfare of the natives, Mr. Buxton is desirous to reduce the European forces in that country, in order to diminish the burden of taxation. While respecting his motives, we deny his premises and repudiate his conclusions. Lord Stanley, Sir Charles Wood, Mr. Vansittart, and Mr. Cairnaird are certainly inspired with a superior wisdom when they distrust the superficial semblance of tranquillity and contentment, and rest their hopes of its permanence on the presence of 80,000 Europeans. So long as we remain encamped in India we must remember that our position is that of a militant, if not a belligerent Power, and as such exposed to attacks from within and without whenever a momentary weakness may tempt avowed foes and alienate pretended friends.

Mr. Adam and Mr. Duff complain of the insalubrity of Calcutta, and recommend the removal of the seat of Government to Poona. On the other hand, Mr. Gregson and Mr. T. G. Baring refute the aspersions cast upon the climate of Calcutta, and reject the superior claims put forth in favour of Poona. For ourselves, we entirely agree with the latter, and trust nothing short of dire necessity will be held to justify the transfer of the seat of Government from the actual capital of India.

In the Upper House, on the question that the report of amendments in the Red Sea and India Telegraph Company Bill be agreed to, a conversation ensued, in which Lord Redesdale, Lord Camperdown, the Duke of Argyll, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Overstone, and Lord Grey took part, the principal point of discussion being whether the agreement between the Government and the Company might not be put in a clearer form. The Lord Chancellor suggested that at the end of the first section, which concluded thus, "That the agreement of the 18th November, 1858, and all covenants and conditions contained therein, shall be deemed at an end," these words should be added: "but the new Company shall be bound to fulfil the covenants contained in the schedule annexed." He thought the new Company would then be bound and rendered capable in law of performing the agreement. The report was then received.

BENGAL.

WITCHCRAFT IN BENGAL.

The practices of witch-finding and witch-murder, which still prevail in very many parts of India, have been brought prominently forward in a case recently referred to the Sudder. Two women at Raneegunge were smitten with disease, mysterious as most diseases are; and, accordingly, two of their relatives applied to a sorcerer, for information as to the cause of the sickness, and the means by which the sufferers might be restored to health. The sorcerer finding the cases beyond his medical experience, at once declared that the two women were bewitched; that they had been bewitched by a woman named Roopee, and that, unless Roopee was put down, the invalids could not recover. Of course every word was implicitly believed by the two men. Their passions were powerfully aroused, for one of the supposed victims was the daughter of one of the men, and all four were related. The two men appear to have at once proceeded to the house of Roopee, and then and there to have beaten her violently with sticks. Subsequently, thinking they had not done enough, they set upon her again the same day, and treated her in a still more inhuman manner, forcing filth of the vilest kind down her throat. In the end they found that the woman was dead, and they then carried her body to a neighbouring river and threw it in. The body was subsequently recovered, and examined by the civil assistant-surgeon at Raneegunge. The latter reported that the poor wretch had suffered from a concussion of the brain, and that two of her vertebrae and four of her ribs had been fractured; but he did not believe that the injuries could have been produced by the sticks shown to him, and which, according to the evidence, were alone used by the prisoners. It seems that the two men who had thus committed the assault on Roopee were employed in the colliery at Raneegunge. They made no secret of what they had done, but virtually admitted that they had killed Roopee. Accordingly, they were at once arrested by Mr. Lordner, the superintendent of the colliery, and brought before the deputy magistrate of Raneegunge. Here they made a full confession, and the case was subsequently tried by the Sessions Judge. Here, however, the two prisoners pleaded not guilty, but made no defence, excepting that one of them said that all the villagers joined to kill Roopee. Four witnesses also deposed that they had carried, or accompanied the carriers of the body of Roopee, to the banks of the Barakur river, where one of the prisoners pushed it into the water. The Sessions Judge found the two men guilty, not of murder, but of culpable homicide. The Sudder Judge, however, drew attention to the fact that the prisoners had only confessed that they had beaten Roopee, and that they had subsequently found she was dead; but they had not confessed that they intended to kill her; and, indeed, the doctor had sworn that the sticks alone could not have inflicted the blows by which the woman was killed. That Roopee was murdered could not be doubted, but the Judge considered that the evidence against the prisoners only convicted them of aggravated assault; accordingly, the two men were sentenced to imprisonment in banishment for fourteen years. Now, we submit that these are not the steps which are really necessary to put down the crime of witch-murder; and it appears to us that the wrong men have been punished, and that the one who is really guilty has been permitted to go scot free. The real criminal was the sorcerer, and that man ought to have been arrested and sentenced to a far heavier punishment than was inflicted upon his miserable dupes. The only evidence against the prisoners was their own confession, and according to that evidence the sorcerer was an accessory in the murder of Roopee. If the evidence was good against the one, it was surely good against the other; and it is evident that the sorcerer was by far the greater criminal. His motives must have been bad. In directing the wrath of his two dupes against Roopee he could at the best have been only anxious to disguise his own ignorance, but in all probability he was actuated by jealousy or a hatred of Roopee. Then, again, the punishment of that man would have had a far more salutary effect upon the whole district than the punishment of his dupes. It would have been seen that the law could triumph over the sorcerer, and sorcerers and others would have been more careful for the future how they stirred up men to commit acts which would recoil on their own heads. The punishment of the present prisoners will, perhaps, excite a little wholesome fear for the future, but it is plain that the sympathies of the villagers were all on the side of the men who so grievously assaulted Roopee. Many of them joined in the act, and not one appears to have interceded in her behalf. Under such circumstances we think that fourteen years' imprisonment for the sorcerer, and a fine upon the village where the murder was committed, would have done infinitely more towards checking the crimes of witch-finding and witch-murder than the course which has been pursued. Again, the punishment inflicted upon the two prisoners is far too severe. The law officers appear to have sought to make up for their own deficiency by an undue and ill-advised severity towards those who were least criminal. A man sees his daughter withering away under the influence of some mysterious disease; he is told by a sorcerer that she is under the influence of a witch, and unless that witch is "put down" his daughter will die. If a father believes this, he naturally rushes upon the witch, and beats her with a stick to save his daughter's life. The whole village of course sympathises with the father. Acts are done in the heat of passion from which our nature recoils, and the supposed witch is murdered in the scuffle. Then our modern Daniels try to put down the crime, not by punishing the man who urged the father to the act, not by punishing the villagers who aided and abetted the act, but by imprisoning and banishing the unhappy father, and then proclaiming what they have done as a means of deterring others.

Law after this barbarous fashion has been but too often administered both here and at home. It has been stripped of all moral meaning until it has exercised no influence save that of fear. Because horse-stealing and sheep-stealing were crimes that could be committed with comparative ease, we have hanged men for horse-stealing and sheep-stealing, instead of leaving the owners to take better care of their own property. Men complained, and with truth, that their lives were set against the lives of sheep and horses. Protection of person and property are indeed the main, if not the only, duties of the law, but, at the same time, the law is bound to assert its own morality, and be a great moral teacher. In this respect the sentence pronounced against the witch-murderers is utterly devoid of meaning. A father tries to save his daughter's life, and is very nearly hanged for his pains.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. A. P. CAVORKE is appointed an Honorary Magistrate in Calcutta.

THE ANGLO-SAXONS OF MUSSOURIE seem to be an energetic community. Dissatisfied with the administration of municipal affairs by the late Commissioners, they have turned them all out of office, refusing to allow Mr. Manderson, the magistrate of the Doon, to take part in the proceedings, because he is not a householder on the hills, and declaring that by law "a clerk in holy orders" is disabled from serving on a municipal body. Such is not the law in Bengal. The chief grievance seems to have been that money had been wasted in improving the Mall, which is enjoyed chiefly by "young ladies and young gentlemen" who should pay for it, while the local funds should be devoted to the construction of other roads which would prevent the over-crowding of the Mall. The householders seem to have had real grievances.

THE FLOATING SANITARIUM.—The committee of officers, military, medical, and marine, which went down the river to fix upon a site for the hospital ship Bentick, settled upon an anchorage at the mouth of the Hidgelee river, just below Cowcolly. The situation is about the best that could have been selected; as, whilst out of such influence of the sea as would have caused the vessel to roll and labour, to the distress of the sick on board, it gives the full benefit of the ocean breezes, and of all the other benefits arising from proximity to the blue water. The fittings of the Bentick are advancing, but there is a great deal to be done, and it is not probable that she will be finished and ready for occupants and sent to her station before the end of July.

MR. TEMPLE, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Province, was received on his arrival at Nagpore by the volunteers, who formed a guard of honour, and with the usual salute of thirteen guns. On the 8th May he held his first durbar. The Rajah Bhahadur of Doer, the relations, courtiers, ministers, and scribes of the late Bhonsla Dynasty, as also the police superintendents, inspectors, and rissaldars, the sheristadars, the extra assistants, and the chief bankers, were all invited. The secretaries, the divisional commissioners, the deputy and assistant commissioners, the inspector-general and the district superintendents of police, the chief engineer, and the civil surgeon, and the Rev. Alexander Taylor, were in attendance on the occasion. The durbar was held in the drawing-room of the Residency. After the usual ceremonies, garlands of flowers, Pan and Atta were given to all those invited by Mr. Temple himself. The general feeling after the durbar was given went in the following expressions—"Vah! vah! was there ever such a gracious durbar known here since the days of Sir Richard Jenkins?" Next day Mr. Temple entertained at dinner the civil and military officers of the station, after which he was to leave for Chindwarra, and will be at Motoor, on the Puchmaree range of hills, on the 18th. Thence he proceeds to Baitool, by the Lanpee Hill to Raipore, and thence to Chandah, and back to Nagpore before the end of this month.

PAPER CURRENCY.—The following statement of the amount of Government currency notes in circulation, of the amount of coin and bullion reserve, and Government securities held by the Departments of Issue of Paper Currency, on the 30th April, 1862, is important:—

The limit of four millions up to which notes may be issued unrepresented by coin is thus passed, the total sum in circulation three weeks ago being £4,100,000, while the investments amount to only £400,077. These investments have been made with great secrecy and tact, and the result is that 5½ securities stand to-day at 12 per cent. premium.

DR. J. R. TAYLOR, Inspector General of Hospitals at the Cape, is, it is said, to be appointed Principal Inspector General in India of the Amalgamated Medical Services. Dr. Taylor knows India well.

STATUE TO LORD CANNING.—The subscriptions to Lord Canning's statue amount to Rs. 32,800. The list is headed by the Puttialla Chief with Rs. 5,000, the Maharajah of Burdwan and native members of Council each Rs. 2,000, and Sir J. P. Grant, Sir B. Frere, and Mr. Beadon each Rs. 500.

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR has given an entertainment to the station of Agra in the gardens of the Taj Mahal. The Taj, the gardens, and the river and roads within two miles were lighted up, the fountains played, a band was in attendance, there was a display of fireworks, and dancing was kept up to a late hour.

MR. STAINFORTH, who has just resigned the Civil Service, and was a member of the Bengal Board of Revenue, has joined the bar of the Sudder Court. This is the third high civilian in Bengal who practices at the bar of the Company's Courts.

LORD ELGIN AS MÆCENAS.—The Agri-Horticultural Society have invited Lord Elgin to become patron of the society. The Governor-general declined through his private secretary to receive a deputation, but accepted the office and forwarded a subscription of Rs. 500. A deputation from the Asiatic Society waited on Lord Elgin to request his Excellency to become patron of the society, to which Lord Elgin acceded. Lord Hardinge is said to be the last Governor-general who was president of the society.

THE INDO-RUSSIAN ROMANCE.—One of the two fortunes left by Indian merchants in St. Petersburg is likely at last to find a successful claimant. We (Friend of India) must remind our readers that Roy Brahmin and Moolla Ooch, a Sikh and a Mussulman merchant, having journeyed to the capital of Russia, there made fortunes respectively amounting to half a million sterling and twenty thousand pounds, sent for Ramdass and Galarman Chouk from India to join them, and died before the arrival of their friends. Meanwhile Ramdass has also died, and the half million will probably fall to the Russian Government, while Galarman Chouk has moved the London and Calcutta authorities to find proofs of the truth of his claim to the twenty thousand pounds left by Moolla Ooch. The authorities having failed to discover his native place, "Cachee," in North-Western India, and his relations, Galarman Chouk has left St. Petersburg and reached Bombay via London, to institute the search for himself. There can be little doubt that, with such energy, he will discover the long lost proofs of his story, and convince the Russian authorities, who have acted so very honourably in this matter. The conclusion will be, we presume, that the fortunate heir will receive his money and live like a prince in his native district after all his wanderings.

CUTTACK, May 15.—The Khunds up in Boad are up to their tricks again; burning houses, &c.; 130 of the 8th battalion Bengal military police are up there under the command of a native officer. A large body of Khunds attacked twelve men of the baggage guard of the Bengal police battalion; they were hard at work all night trying to drive them off, which they did, killing three and wounding six, so we hear down here. One company of the 43rd Madras native infantry left some time ago for Boad. I hear that Lieutenant Dolmage, of the 8th battalion Bengal military police, has arrived from Balasore, and proceeds immediately to take command of the 8th Bengal military police there; it is to be hoped that he, in conjunction with Lieutenant Rideout, will give the Khunds a good drubbing, as they deserve it, for making troops march about at this time of the year. I believe the row is all about a tract of land called Pachera, and it is believed that the Rajahs of Boad and Sonepore encourage the Khunds, but they do it so quietly that it cannot be brought home to them. Boad is on the banks of the Mahanuddy River, about 140 miles from this.—Englishman.

THE SHIPWRECKED MARINERS' AND FISHERMEN'S ROYAL BENEVOLENT SOCIETY, besides granting pensions to widows and orphans of deceased seamen, gives free outfits and passages to their homes to seamen shipwrecked in any part of the world where an agent of the society has been established. It is proposed to establish an agency in Calcutta. Meanwhile, the Government Shipping Master, Captain Burbank, has kindly consented to receive contributions.

MR. FARRELL.—A commission is about to sit upon Mr. Farrell, the joint magistrate of Sasseram, who is to be brought to trial upon a charge of trading, and sundry other acts of irregularity, inconsistent with the duty and discipline of a covenanted officer. The commissioner and judge of Patna (Messrs. Cockburn and Lantour), and Mr. Bayley, the collector of Shahabad, form the commission, before which Mr. Farrell will appear.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The Public Works Department has fallen. Alone of all establishments in the empire, that department was able to resist the wave of reform which swept away other abuses administrative and financial. At last that, too, has yielded to the assault, and loud as any murmurs that ever met the ear of Colonel Balfour are the remonstrances of Public Works Secretaries and Superintending Engineers. In the official year 1860-61, out of a sum of three millions sterling devoted to imperial public works in India, no less than £735,100 was spent on establishments and contingencies. This is a percentage of 23·8 of the total expenditure. It was high time that Major Chesney should be deputed to visit the various Engineers' circles, and reduce this monstrous, because unfruitful extravagance. Already, we are glad to learn, Lord Elgin has carried out several of his recommendations, resulting in a large reduction of this percentage, which must ultimately come as low as fifteen or even twelve. The Government of India, however, should be careful that the establishments are diminished in such a way as not suddenly to arrest works in progress. The details of expenditure during that year, the first of the cotton crisis, will be seen from the following official table. A little more than a fifth of the whole three millions was spent on "communications," or 21·4 per cent., while the sum expended on military buildings was still so high as 29 per cent.

COLONEL STANNUS, late of the 5th Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed by the Commander-in-Chief to command her Majesty's 20th Hussars. A contemporary highly eulogises this recognition of "unqualified merit." The services of Colonel Stannus, he says, were pre-eminent on every occasion when they were required in the field of battle. He distinguished himself greatly in the Sikh campaigns during which he commanded the escort of H.E. Sir Hugh Gough, who was in one instance saved from capture by a body of Affghan horse through his instrumentality; he having dashingly charged them with a small party of the escort, and, as the chief himself acknowledged, prevented his falling into their hands.

THE RENT LAW.—There is some prospect at last of a peaceful termination of the rent difficulty. Mr. Hills, the well-known landholder of Kishnaghur, raised the rent of a tenant with right of occupancy from 5 to 12 annas a beegah, and the deputy collector gave him a decree for the enhancement. The tenant appealed to Mr. L. S. Jackson, the judge, who decreed enhancement to the amount of 10 annas a beegah, on the ground that since the rental was fixed the profits of the agriculturist have just doubled through no effort of his own. Mr. Hills has appealed to the Sudder Court, and for their judgment we look with much interest. This case is one of several thousands, all of which depend on the decision arrived at. That decision should go far to stop the tide of litigation with which the Rent Law of 1859 has flooded the country, overwhelming all but the wealthiest and most despotic native landlords who disregard it.

INDIA'S OPPORTUNITY.—A letter in the Hills states, on the authority of several merchants in China, that since the Taeping revolt the price of tea has crept up from 7½d., the old rate, to one shilling a pound on the spot, for the good common black teas. Meanwhile, Russia has thrown the tea trade by sea open to ships, in her ambition to augment her seafaring population; and cargoes are now being sent direct to her ports in the Baltic. These merchants are of opinion that unless England and France can interfere to put down the rebellion in China, the price of tea there must go higher yet, owing to disorder and ruin caused by the rebels. The rebels, the other day, sent us a message, that if we interfered with them, they would, to annoy us and cut off our silk trade, hew down all the mulberry trees in China. The shipping of green tea to America this year has given cent. per cent. on the speculation. Captain Hutton, well known for his attempts to improve Indian silk, states that silk offers larger profits than tea, the latter selling at Rs. 4 per seer, realising no more than Rs. 160 per maund, while silk at Rs. 25 per seer will readily produce 1,000 Rs. per maund. It is marvellous that at the same time the command of the cotton, tea, and silk market is in the grasp of India.—Friend of India.

FAILURE OF THE OPIUM CROP.—Since Mr. Laing produced his budget the Revenue Board has reported to Government that the quantity of Opium manufactured next season will be less than was expected. "Heavy storms have caused a great falling off in the out-turn, and the most that may now be reasonably expected is 37,573 chests, that is to say, 20,698 chests from Behar and 16,875 from Benares. Looking at the low consistence of the Benares produce, it seems doubtful whether even this revised estimate will be realized." There is nothing alarming in this, and little that will affect Mr. Laing's most moderate estimate. Already the prospect of a reduced supply has sent prices up, and at the last sale the rates were about Rs. 300 a chest above Mr. Laing's estimate. In any case this year's Budget will not be affected, as the reduced supply will not be sold till 1863.

BREAKING DOWN OF CASTE PREJUDICES.—A curious fact, and one not uninteresting as a sign of the times, has just occurred, and as it has caused a reference to the Secretary of State for India, we think it worth notice in our columns. A native officer in one of the Bengal regiments has applied to Government for leave to England, on private affairs, for two years. As far as the Indian Government is concerned, there appeared to be no objection to a native officer getting furlough to Europe for one year, with his usual pay for nine months and net pay for three months; but the individual proposing to take this furlough was given to understand that it must be taken in lieu of the usual leave to visit their homes granted to native officers and soldiers. The case being not only unusual, but, we believe, without precedent, has been referred to the Secretary of State for India, whose decision will, no doubt, be such as to facilitate the views of the present applicant, and invite, as far as possible, a repetition of this novel and unexpected case. The visits of natives to England strengthen our empire in India.

ASSAM.—The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has received sanction for the appointment of six of the unemployed young Indian officers as assistant-commissioners, with the pay, status, and duties of those in the Punjab. Still, this will not entirely meet the evil. The addition still leaves Eastern Bengal, a country twice the size of Ceylon, and having more than the population of that colony, with only twenty officials, who, from the commissioner downwards, are military men. The time is at hand for a chief commissionership.

THE KURRACHEE MARE'S NEST.—The unfortunate and ill-used pseudo-Nana, who has been judiciously so long tortured at Kurrachee, has been sent round to Calcutta, en route to Cawnpore, for the inspection of Dr. Tressider, who was the Nana's physician before 1857. The likeness of the Kurrachee man to the Nana is certainly remarkable.

SENIOR MEDICAL OFFICERS.—It is believed by the authorities in Calcutta that such of the senior medical officers as shall be included in the retiring scheme, and shall be willing to accept the pensions offered, will be able to retire and leave India as early as October; and we understand that the time within which resignations can be given in is to extend to the 31st December, subject, however, to prolongation by the Indian Government, should it consider such an extension expedient. As, however, the rates of retiring pensions are to be exceedingly liberal, we should think that the surgeons who are so fortunate as to be offered them will immediately flock in to a man, save the Government the trouble of writing, and, by getting out of the way, allow the long-deferred amalgamation of the medical services to be proceeded with.

"CANNING" TOWN.—The Act, XXVI. of 1850, to enable improvements to be made in towns, is to be applied to the town of Canning, on the Moolah. This is the first time, we believe, the town has been officially recognised as "Canning" in the Gazette.

THE WEATHER, during the past month (says the Serampore journal) has been most peculiar. The predicted cyclone has not come, and pundits, both Cambridge and Bengali, are out in their calculations thus far. Though May is the hottest month of the year, when the rays of the sun are most direct, we have had in Bengal a series of small storms and showers of rain, which have kept the atmosphere comparatively cool. The season has been most healthy, and now the only fear is that the ordinary rains may be postponed or be less copious than usual, the effect of which will be deadly. The healthiest and coolest year in the past decade was 1854, the hottest and most unhealthy 1857 and especially 1858.

MEDICAL STAFF APPOINTMENTS.—The Englishman states "that it is the intention of the Government to abolish, on and after the 1st of Jan. next, the greater number of the medical staff appointments held by its medical officers at the presidency, and through which the general public of Calcutta are provided with medical attendance. It is high time that this measure were carried out; indeed, it has for very many years been desirable, for the good of the two principal parties concerned—the Government and the public; and we are happy to say that, in now making the advisable change, no hardship or injustice will be done, as we believe we are correct in stating that every officer now holding the appointments to which we refer will be included in the coming medical retiring scheme, and will accept the pension offered to him, and retire. It does not, however, follow that, in so doing, they will make so many medical vacancies in Calcutta, as we know of several who will retire under the new scheme, but will remain for some time longer in Calcutta as private medical practitioners."

ANOTHER SWINDLER AT MADRAS.—An East Indian dandy and swindler has been sentenced in the Madras Supreme Court to rigorous imprisonment for four months for cheating. Representing himself as a lieutenant, he obtained from a tradesman one hat and feather, several articles of millinery, and one bottle of pomade, all of the value of Rs. 334-12, in order with these "to make a better appearance in society."

SUPPRESSION OF MERIAH SACRIFICES.—Since the extension of the new constabulary force to the hill tracts of Ganjam, and the withdrawal of Captain McNeill, agent for the suppression of Meriah sacrifices, Mr. Forbes, the collector, has made arrangements for the future suppression of human sacrifice and infanticide. In conjunction with Mr. Robinson, inspector-general of police, he has selected three posts—viz., Subernagherry, a central position in the Chinna Kimey Maliah; Mahasinghee, an important village lying due north from Subernagherry, and conveniently situated for the control of the country towards Kalahnudy, under the Nagpore commissioner; and Oodiagherry, which is a healthy station, sufficiently near to the infanticidal tribes of the Soorada Maliah to render surveillance or interference effectual. At each of these posts an inspector of proved character and steadiness will be in charge of not less than fifty men. The magisterial duties will be provided for by the establishment of two well-paid sub-magistrates, one at Oodiagherry, and a second to remain during a part of the year at Subernagherry and the rest of the time at Mahasinghee. Mr. Forbes himself and his assistant will annually visit the hills, and will take a yearly census of villages in which infanticide is supposed to exist. Crime will, however, be most effectually suppressed by roads opening up the country, and those suggested are a main line from Godairy, one hundred miles; cross line by Cuttingiah, fifty miles; cross line by Doho Ghat, fifty miles; and cross line from Oodiagherry to Mahasinghee, twenty-five miles. Thus the hill tracts will be transferred to the district of Ganjam at a cost of Rs. 6,148, the hitherto exceptional agency abolished, and the country civilised.

KIRWEE PRIZE PROPERTY.—We (Englishman) have received a copy of Messrs. Hamilton and Co.'s auction catalogue for the sales of that property, which are to be held next month (June); and we find by a rough calculation that this bullion, in both metals, is worth, in round numbers, about twenty-six lakhs of rupees, or £260,000, something considerably over a quarter of a million of money sterling. Continuing our calculation, we arrive at the result that if the auction percentage on this sum is as stated to us, the profit of the sellers of this portion of the prize-property will not fall very short of two lakhs of rupees, or £20,000. Now, as every ounce of this bullion has, according to the catalogue, been assayed at the Calcutta mint, and its value so settled by the Assay-master's stamp and guarantee, we insist that it ought never to have been brought to auction; and if it be not now too late to interfere, some action should be taken to save, for the captors and owners of the Kirwee prize, the large sum mentioned above. Somehow or other, in these days, prize-money, which looks and sounds large in the realisation, becomes fine by degrees and beautifully less in the distribution; and we certainly think that the Kirwee force may rightly call upon their prize-agents for an explanation in this matter.

LOSS OF THE BARQUE "DEFIANCE."—The Defiance sailed from Moulmain on the 20th April, bound to Madras, with a cargo of timber, &c., had light winds, and fine weather, with partial squalls occasionally; ship making no water during the passage worth noting. The pumps were generally worked twice a day, water in the well being twelve and thirteen inches. On the night of the 11th May, at 10 o'clock, when in about latitude 7deg. 50min. N., and longitude 84deg. 40min. E., the weather commenced getting very squally from the S.W., and the wind increased; double reefed the topsails, and stowed mainsail. At midnight the water in the well increased to eighteen inches; the pumps were worked. At 1 A.M., on the 12th May, sounded the well and found the sounding rod wet all over. Pumps still going on. About 4 A.M., finding the pumps not sucking, and ship appearing lower in water, and the sea washing about the main chains, opened the main hatch and sent the second mate down to see how far the water was up in the hold; he reported that the water was within two feet of the between decks. The pumps were still worked, and in order to lighten the vessel thirty planks, which were on deck, and some two hundred bags of rice, which were at hand, were thrown overboard. By this time, it was 8 A.M., found the water gaining on the ship fast, and the pumps quite useless. Got up some fresh water from below, and filled a few casks on deck, and got ropes, blocks, &c., to reeve tackles to get the long boat out, but before anything could be done the ship filled so rapidly that about 11 A.M., all of a sudden, she capsized on her starboard side, and the crew and passengers, with great difficulty, had just time to climb up the best way they could, on the port side, which was above water, the ship lying on her beam ends, shipping seas clean over her. The port quarter boat being clear and on the topside, she was launched, and the second mate and a portion of the crew got into her, and floated off and gradually increased their distance from the wreck, and about an hour after, seeing a ship at some distance, made for her, and when on board of her they sighted the wreck from her royal yard arm, bearing about S. by E., and about six A.M. the ship, which proved to be the Armingo of New York, Capt. Cassan, came and took on board all the passengers and crew. There was no chance of saving any single document or any single article of clothing. Were it not for the timely help rendered by the Armingo all would inevitably have perished. The certificate of registry of the vessel was also lost along with the other documents. During this disaster all the crew and passengers were saved, with the exception of one male infant which belonged to one of the passengers, and was washed away from its mother's arms, while every one was climbing up to save their lives. When the crew and passengers quitted the ship she was beginning to break up; her poop and cabins were all broken up, and the planks were fast giving away. The Armingo made for Trincomalee, in the island of Ceylon, being the nearest port, and landed the crew and passengers there on the 16th May, 1862.

COORG.—The Madras Times draws a glowing picture of the capabilities of Coorg, and of its prosperity since annexation thirty-five years ago. The rain-fall is two hundred inches, thrice that of Calcutta, and clothes the hills, four thousand six hundred feet high, with verdure, besides promoting coolness. "Tis strange Mercara is not more talked of as a residence for the European. It possesses all the requisites to render it most desirable. When Bangalore is parched with heat and smothered with dust, Muddukairey has cool winds and copious showers. It is exempt from the chilliness of the Neilgherries. It has good roads both to the coast and landwards, and pleasant rides and walks in all directions. The cultivation of coffee is spreading, but the anomaly is still maintained of keeping Coorg, though a purely British territory, under Mysore rules. At present, in Wynad, a planter receives a grant of land for which he pays an annual rent of eight annas per acre for forest, and two rupees per acre for land under coffee cultivation, and he may purchase the fee-simple by a present payment of twenty years' rent. In Coorg he gets a grant of land for which he has to pay Cardamom tax, till his coffee comes into bearing. The Cardamom tax is then remitted, and he pays four annas per maund on his produce; so that if his estate produce ten cwt. per acre, he will have to pay a duty of ten rupees per acre, or five times as much as the planter of Wynad."

H.M.'s 69TH REGIMENT.—Two companies of H.M.'s 69th regiment have left Madras for the Hills, and a wing of another European corps will follow, so as to distribute the benefit of the Jacktalla Sanitarium as widely as possible.

DR. MONTGOMERY.—The Madras Government has expressed its gratitude to Dr. Montgomery, Professor in the Medical College, for a valuable gift of diagrams of the human body, drawings of extinct animals, botanical and physiological drawings, made by himself; also drawings and wax models made by the late Dr. Montgomery, of Dublin, illustrating the diseases of women and children. The originals of the latter were purchased with the rest of the Montgomery Museum for the use of Queen's College, Galway, by her Majesty's Government in 1858.

THE RAILWAY TO BEYPORE was opened on the 13th May, to the great joy of all who have to travel in that direction.

COLONEL OUCHTERLONY, R. E., recommends to the Madras Government the encouragement of the formation of building companies, which would undertake the whole of the public works of the Presidency on contract. The present building rates are increasing in an alarming ratio. In the Godavery Delta the labouring class have become so prosperous that they will not now work at the canals, or in brick-making and road repairs, unless their own terms are granted to them. This is gratifying testimony to the improvement of the labouring classes and peasantry. Government is disposed to encourage the proposition should it come before them in a tangible shape, but do not quite share Colonel Ouchterlony's sanguine anticipations of economy by the introduction of the contract system.

BOMBAY.

THE BHEELS.

It is not yet two years since these Bheels received such chastisement at the hands of Lieuts. Probyn and Atkins as would have been thought sufficient to have deterred them from pursuing their calling of professional marauders for many a year to come. Not so, however—for within six months, nay, within three, the same uneasy reckless spirit manifested itself among these people which is well-nigh their most marked characteristic. The occurrence to which we allude took place in this wise. In July, 1860, the native merchants of Bombay, who deal and speculate largely in opium, transmitted thence towards Indore twelve camel-loads of treasure, amounting in all to two lakhs and seventy-thousand rupees. On the arrival of the camels and their escort at Sangavee, the latter were told by Khajee Sing, Naik Rukhwaldar of the Scindwah Ghat, in the Sathpooras, that Bheema Naik, the chief of Scindwah, was in rebellion, and that it would not be safe to pass through his country unless reinforced. On the following day, however, the escort was allowed to proceed with its charge; but in the meanwhile Khajee Sing had collected his followers, and shortly overtaking the camels, obliged their escort to leave the road and take them into the dry bed of a nullah at the foot of the hills. Prior to this occurrence Khajee Sing, who was in the pay of Government as naik rukhwaldar, had written to the Political Agent, stating that he could not perform the duties imposed upon him for the pay he received, and that, unless his allowance was considerably augmented, he must help himself. With the usual impudence of his people, Khajee Sing had therefore prepared the officers of Government for the step he was about to take, though, not until he was well aware that any interference on their part in his contemplated appropriation of the treasure he knew to be in his immediate neighbourhood would be impossible. In the first instance, after obtaining possession of the treasure, this Bheel chief and successful marauder effected his escape into the dif-fiicult passes of the Sathpoora, where he knew it would be impossible to follow him. At length, confident in his security, he moved into the Burwanee territory; no sooner had he done so, than Lieutenants Probyn and Atkins, with a party of the Poonah horse and mounted police, were upon him. Coming up with Khajee Sing and his followers in the Sathpoora hills, to the south-west of Newalla, he was at once attacked; and though he and his followers fought gallantly, they were completely routed, and fled in all directions. Khajee Sing, with his mounted followers, effected his escape, closely pursued, however, by Lieutenants Probyn and Atkins, for eight miles; the evening was stormy, the rain heavy, and night fast coming on. Every effort was made to come up with the fugitives, but the wearied horses of the pursuers were barely a match for the fresher steeds of their foes. At length, however, success appeared achieved—they were on the foe; but before a blow could be struck, Khajee Sing and his followers leapt from their horses, which they abandoned, and fled down the precipitous side of a dark and frowning ravine. Carbines were at once unslung, and ere the darkness of coming night had quite obscured the forms of the foe, two fell beneath the shots which were poured in upon them, and three more fell wounded, but were carried off by a party of Bheels who lay concealed in the ravine. All that Khajee Singh and his followers had possession of fell into the hands of their pursuers, and a portion of the stolen treasure was recovered. Night having fallen and heavy rain set in, and men and horses being alike exhausted with their long march and subsequent rapid pursuit of the foe, any attempt at further action was abandoned. In the first attack upon the Bheel position, the troops under Probyn and Atkins had caused many to bite the dust; and so great was their loss, that Khajee Sing was unable to re-assemble his fallen and scattered followers. Of the small party which accompanied him in his flight, five were placed hors de combat, two being killed; and yet this lesson, severe as it was, has proved insufficient to keep quiet and peaceable a people the very breath of whose nostrils is the state of perpetual warfare in which they exist. No lesson, however severe, no proof of the British power to chastise offenders against the laws, will ever carry conviction to the mind of the Bheel. The Ethiopie can no more change his skin, nor the leopard his spots, than the Bheel his nature, which makes the world his foe.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CIVILISING INFLUENCE OF RAILWAYS.—The new work and new wants created by railways seem to have produced the same results among the wild tribes of Bombay as in Bengal. The Deccan Herald says:—"The wild tribes of the Deccan are cutting ways for commerce through the hills, instead of easing travellers of their moneys and depriving them of their lives, as they were wont to do. Thousands of men and women who, some ten years ago, were in the habit of wearing only a rag of clothing, are now covered with the produce of the looms of Manchester. They can afford to live in huts instead of hovels, and even their children are paid while being taught their first lessons in trained labour. These are facts which have taken place under our very eyes, and within a few hours' ride of Poona. For these last three years Messrs. Adamson and Clowser have scarcely had fewer than 35,000 people employed upon the railway works which they are constructing." When a change in the land tenures sets the same proportion of the people of India free for manufactures as in Europe, there will be no limit to this prosperity.

HANSOMS IN BOMBAY.—The Poona Observer states that there is a movement in Bombay to use Hansom cabs, some of which have been imported from England as models for the Bombay builders, instead of buggies. Against this change the buggywallas are reported to have formed a combination to prevent the new vehicles from being brought into general use.

ECONOMY IN STATIONERY.—The Bombay Government has carried out reductions in the Stationery Department similar to those effected a year ago in Bengal. The committee appointed to report on the matter show that within the last ten years the consumption of stationery has increased 50 per cent. The establishment of the Superintendent costs 8 per cent. on the value of articles supplied. Henceforth a standard allowance is to be fixed for each office, which will never be departed from.

LADY FRERE, who abandoned her intention of proceeding to England on her husband's appointment as Governor of Bombay, when she had reached Madras, has taken up her residence at Mahableshwar.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, May 10.—The London Mail of March 26th arrived here on the 4th instant.

There has been a third combined naval and military expedition against the rebels during the past fortnight, which has resulted in the capture of a town containing loot to the value of 130,000 dollars. The force engaged on this occasion amounted to about 6,000, of whom 2,000 were Chinese, and the rest English and French. On the 27th ultimo a reconnoitring force proceeded to a place called Nan-hsiang, twelve miles to the westward of Shanghai, a little beyond which the rebels had a stockade. On approaching to view the place the party was fired upon, and an officer, Capt. Brown of the 5th, seriously wounded; some of the Chinese also were killed, and some wounded. Next day, after full preparations, the place was stormed and taken, and one of the defenders killed, the others having evacuated the works when they saw defeat inevitable. As they were running away we killed twenty-five of them with our guns. The place was found to be one of the numerous stockades that have been pushed forward in the direction of Shanghai, and which are very difficult to capture without artillery. The forces were, upon this stockade being taken, immediately advanced in the direction of Kah-ding, a walled city about as large as Shanghai. After marching along a good road, and through a beautiful country with fine thriving crops, the troops reached the southern suburb of Kah-ding, and took up their quarters in the best houses they could find. A few rebels on horseback came in front of the wall in the course of the afternoon, but a marine sentry shot one of them, and the others rode away. On Wednesday, the 30th, the commissariat boats arrived with more guns and stores, and a plan of attack was at once arranged to be executed the following morning. The rebels spent the night in strengthening their defences, and at half-past two next morning our guns were placed in position, and the troops remained in readiness to fire as soon as there was sufficient light. Accordingly, at five a.m., a fire was opened on the city from the French pieces, the Naval Brigade howitzers, the mountain guns of the Royal Artillery, Govan's 24-pounder howitzer, and a park of mortars simultaneously. In half-an-hour the enemy was silenced. In ten minutes more the ditch was bridged over by boats, and a scaling party advanced with ladders and entered the city, killing one man on the walls and about twenty in the streets. The storming party now opened one of the city gates, and the troops marched in to the music of the French band. The loot was brought together and taken charge of by the English, to be afterwards fairly divided by the loot committee; anyone suspected of private plundering was searched by a guard appointed for the purpose. Among other traces of foreign leanings on the part of the rebels were found some cherry brandy and porter, as well as arms and ammunition. There were one thousand five hundred prisoners taken, and a committee sat down to deliberate what should be done with them. Fifty, who were recognised as men of more importance than the rest, were handed over to the Taoutas for punishment. Many of the prisoners were branded on the cheeks with the Taeping characters, a practice in vogue among the rebels to arrest the allegiance of the wavering. The loss on our side is confined to a few trifling casualties, as may easily enough be supposed, while the number of rebels who were killed by our cannon is between one and two thousand.

Next in importance to Shanghai, where matters are moving so gaily, comes Ningpo, from which we have dates to the 30th ultimo. At that port affairs are taking a different turn, and the repose of the last five months is gone. It appears that certain demands were made on the rebel chiefs, whose men had fired on the English and French ships, and no satisfaction having been obtained, all communication between the foreign settlement and the city has been cut off, and the latter is about to be blockaded. It seems that on the 29th ult. the rebel Prince assembled all his adherents and trusty followers, along with the chiefs, in his council hall. He then addressed them in a strain inimical to foreigners, saying that he had had enough of their insolence, and urging that it was now time to "eat them up." Accordingly he moved and carried the two following resolutions: 1. That a reward of 1,000 dollars should be paid to any rebel soldier who should bring, in a basket, to the Prince, the head of Consul Frederick Harvey. 2. That a reward of 100 dollars be paid per head for all other European heads. Another rebel expedition has started for Chusan, the last having been a failure.

From Tien-tsin we learn that nearly half of the garrison has been sent away for service at Shanghai. The troops have been filling up their spare time in drilling Chinese soldiers.

From Newchwang and Chefoo we have no news; it is likely that these ports will soon enjoy the benefit of improved postal arrangements.

At Hankow there still continues some uncertainty regarding the price of land, but a reference has been made to Mr. Bruce, and it is hoped that he will urge the rights of foreigners to have their land at a fair market rate. The presence of Europeans is still offensive to the people of this port, and it is scarcely possible to walk along the streets without experiencing some demonstration intended for insult.

From Peking we have no particular intelligence.

At Kiu-kiang, where Mr. Forrest is present Acting-consul, the land renters are proceeding to set the place in order, and tax themselves for roads and works.

From Amoy we learn that Mr. Consul Pedder has been attacked while out walking, but he does not seem to have been seriously injured.

At Swatow some clan fighting has kept the neighbourhood alive for the last few days.

From Foo-chow there is no news of importance.

At Canton building is likely to be proceeded with on the Shameen site. All is quiet at present.

In Hong Kong there seems uneasiness felt at the growing scarcity of water, and the rainy season cannot come a moment too soon. The volunteers are making rapid advances in their drill; in uniform on parade they present the appearance of a very fine body of men. The weather continues moderately warm.

From Japan there is no news of importance. The yielding up of the treaty ports, which should have been opened this year, is causing great dissatisfaction among the smaller merchants; the large houses are not favourable to the multiplication of ports.—Overland China Mail.

GROTTO OF CAMOENS.—The China Mail remarks on the grotto consecrated by the exile of Camoens, the author of the Lusiad, in Macao. Unlike the neglect that too often dooms to decay the haunts of great men in England, and which nearly brought Shakespeare's birth-place to the hammer recently, the Grotto of Camoens has been preserved by an eminent Portuguese family, of whom the present representative is Mr. L. Marques, Procurador of Macao. The gardens, though private, are always open to visitors. The same gentleman has just received from Lisbon a brass bust of the poet, for the purpose of placing in the grotto. This has stirred up public feeling in Lisbon, where a very beautiful monument of the long-neglected poet will be erected.

THE STRAITS.

SAIGON.—We learn from French Cochinchina that Admiral Bonard has returned to Saigon. The allied forces under the command of Colonel Palanca, had taken Micui, after a determined resistance on the part of the Annamese. H.I.M.'s steamer Forbin has gone up to Tournon on a secret expedition. The whole of the commissariat officers were nearly poisoned by arsenic put into their food. The guilty parties have not been discovered, but the mandarins are suspected to have tampered with their servants. Telegraphic communication is established between Saigon and Bienhoa, and will shortly be extended to Barria and China town.

BUDDHIST TEMPLE IN AYINTHIA.—A traveller writes to the Straits Times an account of a journey through Siam, in which he describes a gorgeous Buddhist temple in Ayinthia, the old and now ruined capital:—"The temple itself was very grand, of immense size and height, marble pillars supporting the roof, the walls literally covered to the height of about twenty feet, with small gilded niches containing figures of Buddha. There must have been thousands of these little idols, and the value may be judged on reflecting that all these images, from the largest measuring sometimes 120 feet in length to the very smallest, are made of clay incased in copper, and that again covered with a layer of pure gold." Of another he says:—"Inside and outside the building itself, you would say, was made of gold and precious stones; but the articles of ornament which you find inside there is no mistake about. There is a massive silver mat of nearly half an inch thick, entirely covering the floor, with vases of solid gold, chandeliers, images of Buddha, all made of pure massive gold. The curtain surrounding the shrine is cloth of gold. The walls themselves, plated with gold as thick as ships' yellow metal, form a splendid contrast to the flimsy jimcrack decoration of the smaller temples which line the banks of the river."

MISSING INDIAMEN.—A report was posted at Lloyd's, on Friday last, of the Queen of the South, steamer, having, on April 20, in lat. 27 S, long. 11 E, seen a large ship on fire between 700 and 900 tons burden. At the time of coming up with her she was completely in flames, and there was nothing to identify her, neither could anything be seen of her boats or crew. The Queen of the South having arrived from Calcutta in the river a week previous, great surprise was expressed by the general body of underwriters at the captain not making known the loss before, particularly at a moment when so much painful anxiety prevails regarding the fate of four Calcutta ships which are missing. There can be very little doubt but the ship seen on fire was a Calcutta ship. The description answers one of them whereon insurances have been effected in the room, during the last few days, to a very large amount at twenty-five guineas prem. The ships missing are—the Nuggett, 1,013 tons, Capt. Bond, sailed from Calcutta, on Dec. 20 last; the Mooltan, 611 tons, Capt. Nicol, sailed on Dec. 11; the Arethusa, 942 tons, Capt. Clark, sailed on Dec. 15; and the James Armstrong, sailed on the 20th of the same month.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, May 30.—We have experienced—we cannot say enjoyed—the most extraordinary weather possible for the past fortnight. Had it been the first fortnight in April instead of the last in May, we could not have suffered more from intense heat. If the preparers and shippers of coffee are not satisfied with this suspension of the Monsoon rains, we think they deserve to be denounced as ungrateful. Nothing could possibly have been more favourable for shipping operations, and accordingly, for the season of the year, a good deal of coffee has gone forward. The Nimroud, which has just sailed, took away plantation, cwt. 7,895; native, 1,822; total, 9,717. This brings our exports to end of May up to cwt. 488,343. The Severn is about ready to load, the cargo is nearly all ready for her, and shortly after the middle of June, we have little doubt, she will be off with coffee almost enough to make up the half million of cwt. As the Ouva crop is only being shipped; as the first sprinkling of the new crop is coming in already from the lower districts; and as there are four months of the season still to run, we feel more and more satisfied that by the 30th of Sept. the exports will be up to 550,000 cwt. or more—not much below the average of 600,000 cwt. in fact. This is certainly a result very different to that which was anticipated at the commencement of the season. The exports of cocoa-nut oil are fully up to the average, and cinnamon rather in excess.

The prospectus of the Ceylon Company (Limited) has appeared in a modified form in the local papers. Any company offering the planters advances of money at moderate rates of interest cannot fail to be largely patronised.

The great and exciting topic in Ceylon at present (in the absence of the storms of the natural monsoon) is the occurrence of what we have ventured to denominate "the Jolly Cyclone." Whatever the Governor's intention may have been when he nominated Captain Jolly to the seat in the Legislative Council which had just been vacated by the representative of the planters, it is quite certain that he has raised a storm, and infused new life into the Planters' Association. Mr. Gavin is now the chairman of that body, which promises again to become a power in the State. Already at a numerously attended and animated meeting, have the members declared that, in consequence of the nomination of Captain Jolly, they consider the planters unrepresented in the Council. The merchants, who were asked to choose their representative, unanimously elected Mr. Geo. Wall, the head of the firm of which Captain Jolly is a member; but they certainly never anticipated that the two partners should sit together.—(Captain Jolly has since resigned.)

Of general intelligence there is little to chronicle. The health of the country—if we except a few cases of cholera in the north of the island—is pretty good.

At the last moment it becomes our melancholy duty, and we perform it with heartfelt regret, to announce the death of the veteran Lieutenant-General John Fraser. He was appointed Deputy Quarter-Master-General in Ceylon as a reward for his gallant conduct at the siege of Burgos, and since his arrival here in 1814 (a period of forty-eight years) we believe he was never out of the island but once, on six months' leave to the Cape. General Fraser took a distinguished part in the Canadian war, and his name will always be associated with the topographical labours which resulted in the first really good map of Ceylon. General Fraser died possessed of considerable landed property, his estate and residence on the romantic Pass which leads to Newera Ellia being well known.—Colombo Overland Mail.

DEATH OF COLONEL LILLIE.—The Colombo Observer announces the death of one more of our few remaining Waterloo veterans. Colonel Lillie died on the 24th April. For the last twenty years or so he has been settled in Ceylon as a coffee planter.

Official Papers.

THE NEW FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Read again Financial Resolution No. 5,126, dated the 4th December, 1857, as published in the notification No. 13 of the 26th March, 1858.

Read also Financial Resolution No. 8,718, dated 4th July, 1861.

His Excellency the Governor-general in Council observes that the object of the first of these resolutions was to put an end to the practice which had caused so much confusion and uncertainty in Indian accounts and estimates, of appointing officers from the Civil Service indiscriminately to offices of account without previous training, and constantly changing them as their advance in the service entitled them to promotion.

The avowed object was to adopt measures for repairing the offices of account in the different Presidencies, so that "a succession of officers, conversant with the business of accounts, to the higher post in the department might be secured, and appointments of vacancies regulated accordingly."

In like manner the object of the resolution of the 4th July, 1861, was to regulate the constitution of the Financial Department of the Government of India, so that it might be in a position to perform duties which are described in the resolution as "exactly similar to those performed by the Treasury in England."

The new system of audit and account of budget estimates, which has been introduced, makes it more than ever important that the objects contemplated by these resolutions should be thoroughly carried out.

The foundation of this system is, that estimates of all expenditure should be framed and revised with such care as to enable the Government of India to hold all local Governments, departments, and officers who spend public money, responsible for their observance; that accounts of all receipts and expenditure should be kept on an uniform system, so accurately and promptly as to enable the Government at any moment to know its real position and to check unauthorised outlay; and, finally, that the Financial Department proper or Treasury should exercise a constant central supervision and control over all estimates and expenditure, the more necessary in India, as the spending departments are not, as in England, subjected to the check of passing their estimates annually through the House of Commons.

Great reforms have already been effected in this direction, and no blame can be attached to the officers who have zealously co-operated in the arduous task of introducing a new system amidst the pressure of daily work and of financial difficulties.

At the same time it is apparent that the object has not yet been attained of organising a self-supporting machinery, which, as in England, can be depended upon to conduct the ordinary business of financial administration, without extraordinary efforts or constant risk of failure.

In the Financial Department proper, which corresponds to the English Treasury, there are two situations only below the Financial Secretary, at salaries which admit of their being held by Europeans, while in the English Treasury there are below the Secretary a permanent Assistant Secretary, and five divisions, each presided over by a "Principal Clerk," who is invariably a gentleman of great ability and experience, with a staff of four or five established clerks under him, recruited commonly from gentlemen of university education, liberally paid, and rising according to merit and seniority to the higher posts.

It is not too much to say that there are in the English Treasury, and the principal departments connected with it, seldom less than five or six officers, who have been conversant with the details of every budget for the last twenty years, and who would be perfectly competent to frame a very respectable budget themselves, if suddenly called upon.

The result is a machinery which works with very little risk of disturbance from political changes in high offices, and which it is the more important to introduce in India, as the effect of climate and other causes makes frequent changes in the higher offices inevitable.

As regards the Department of Account it is equally clear that, until a recent period, returns and estimates of Indian finance have been notoriously untrustworthy.

The Parliamentary Returns of "actual expenditure" for the year 1859-60, while correct as to the actual entries in the books, were calculated to mislead to an extent of several millions in any attempt to form a judgment as to what had been the established expenditure proper to the year 1859-60, and whether that of 1860-61 showed any material decrease in comparison with it.

Again, the figures which have been accepted until very recently as showing the probable revenue and expenditure of the financial year 1860-61, corrected up to the close of the year, prove, on the completion of the "actual" returns for the year, to have understated the revenue by £3,500,000, and the expenditure by nearly £1,500,000, thus misleading the Government as to its actual position to an extent of not less than £2,000,000, or more than the whole annual produce of the Income-tax.

Mistakes of this magnitude are now, it is believed, impossible, and the exertions of the accountant and auditor-general are bringing us to a point where we may hope to have reliable returns of actual receipts and expenditure under each principal head of the budget within two months at latest after the close of each month. But the maintenance even of present results is endangered by the increasing difficulty of obtaining officers of the "Covenanted Service," who are willing to abandon the regular line of service for the Financial Department, and of retaining those we have, without such frequent changes as necessarily greatly impair the efficiency of their offices.

An office of account is one which peculiarly requires a fixed Head who thoroughly understands his work, and knows the character and capabilities of those who work under him.

Of twenty officers now holding the principal offices of account and audit, no less than fourteen are acting away from their own proper posts in temporary appointments. Under such circumstances it is creditable to them that they have been able to effect improvements at all, and it would be unreasonable to impute blame to individuals because they have not at once succeeded in obtaining the efficiency of the English system which has been the growth of centuries.

At the same time it is evident that such efficiency can never be expected under a system which confines all the higher posts to men who have had no previous training, and necessitates constant changes of office to meet legitimate claims to advance of salary; while it is equally clear that it is not, and rarely can be, worth the while of a covenanted officer to attach himself to the Departments of Finance and Account unless he can commence by holding a high post, and be almost certain of changing to other posts still higher after a comparatively short period.

It is absolutely necessary, therefore, in framing any plan for the future organisation of the Financial Department to proceed on the principle that all distinction between "Covenanted" and "Uncovenanted" Services must be set aside, except for a few of the very highest offices as that of Financial Secretary, and that the salaries and constitution of the department must be regulated with a sole view to efficiency without distinction of service, profession, race, or religion.

This change will, however, come very gradually, as it is not proposed to interfere with the salaries of appointments actually held by covenanted officers or with existing prospects of promotion of such officers, where fit for it, except so far as these may be affected by the abolition of the three sub-treasurerships which, under the arrangement with the presidency banks, have become superfluous, and would have been abolished at any rate. And as it will take some years before a sufficient body of qualified assistants can be trained up under the proposed new organisation, the succession to the highest posts (more especially those of deputy auditor and accountant-general, which it is for many reasons important to fill by officers of weight and standing as well as of ability and experience), will for a long time continue necessarily to be held by the covenanted officers now attached to the department.

If, however, any officer should consider that his fair prospects of promotion on the faith of which he joined the department are interfered with by the abolition of the sub-treasurerships, or otherwise, he will be allowed to re-join the general service at the first moment when he can be allowed to leave his post without positive inconvenience to the public service; and in the mean time if any officer should be obliged for the service of the State to remain for a time in the Financial line when he would have wished to return at once to general service, the Government will be quite prepared to deal with each case separately in a liberal spirit.

In the mean time, although the change of system must be gradual and in some measure prospective, his Excellency the Governor-general in Council thinks it desirable that the occasion of a change in the Financial Secretaryship, from which Mr. Lushington has retired after so many years of arduous and meritorious service, should not be lost, in order to announce clearly to the officers of the department and to the public the scheme for the future organisation of Financial Administration which has been decided upon by his Excellency the Governor-general in Council after mature consideration.

The Financial Department, including the Departments of Account and Audit, will constitute one Department, at the head of which will be the Financial Secretary.

The Military Finance Department, having special duties of a professional as well as a financial character, will remain, as at present, an independent department, subject either exclusively to the Financial or Military Departments, but corresponding with the Government through either, according as the subject is financial or military.

The Head of the Military Finance Department will submit estimates and make his official communications on all subjects relating to finance or requiring orders in the Financial Department through the Financial Secretary, so that the latter will be cognizant of what takes place, and able to remark upon it as far as it may affect finance generally, though he will not be responsible for, or expected to interfere with, matters involving military considerations, or affecting the sole and undivided responsibility of the Head of the Military Finance Department to the Supreme Government for all matters of Military Finance.

The division of financial business into departments begins below the Financial Secretary.

The Auditor and Accountant-general of the Government of India is the head of the important Departments of Account and Audit, charged with the important duty of bringing the accounts of the Empire together, and, as a general rule, the Government will look to him as responsible for the correct performance of what may be called the mechanical duties of Account and Audit, as distinguished from administrative matters which come within the province of the Financial Secretary.

This, it is believed, will not involve any change in existing practice.

The Accountant and Auditor-general will continue, as at present, to sit with the head of the Military Finance Department as an "Audit Board," for the purpose of considering questions where Civil and Military Finance are intermixed, of consulting each other on doubtful questions, and of preserving, as far as possible, uniformity of accounts and system.

In case of difference of opinion between the two members, the matter will thus be brought directly before the Government for its decision.

The duties and responsibilities of the superior officers being thus defined, it remains to settle the position of the various grades of employés.

These will, as at present, consist of two main divisions, viz.:—

1st. Clerks doing the routine and mechanical work.

2nd. Assistants either doing, or in training for doing, the more important and responsible work.

No immediate change is proposed as regards the first division of clerks. As regards the higher division of the Service corresponding to the "established Clerks" of the Treasury and other English Public Offices, the general denomination would be applied of "Assistants (according to their respective classes) in the Financial Department," in addition to the special denomination of any office they might happen to fill.

They will form one Service, divided into four classes, viz. :—

Class I. Salary Rs. 1,500 a-month, rising Rs. 100 a-month after each year of service in the class to a maximum of Rs. 2,000 a-month; some extra personal allowance being admissible where the Deputy-auditor and Accountant-general at Madras or Bombay is required to fulfil the additional duty of acting as the sole or Senior Government Director of the Presidency Bank, consisting of—

Deputy-auditors and Accountants-general of the three Presidencies and the North-West.

First Assistant Secretary, Financial Department.

Class II. Salary Rs. 1,000 a-month, rising to Rs. 1,500, by an increase of Rs. 75 a-month each year after two years of service in the class, consisting of—

Civil Paymasters of the three Presidencies.

Deputy-auditors and Accountants-general, Punjab, and smaller Governments.

First Assistant to Accountant and Auditor-general of India.

Second Assistant Secretary of Financial Department.

Class III. Salary Rs. 700 a-month, rising to Rs. 1,000, by Rs. 50 a-month each year of the three years' service in the class, consisting of—

Civil Paymasters at other places.

First Assistants to Deputy-auditors and Accountants-general.

Second Assistant to Accountant and Auditor-general of India.

Third Assistant Secretary, Financial Department.

First Assistants to Principal Assistant Secretaries, Financial Department.

And any other officers fairly on a par with these.

Class IV. Salary Rs. 400 a-month, rising to Rs. 700 by an increase of Rs. 30 a-month each year after three years' service, consisting of—Junior Grades in the Central Office at Calcutta, and Chief Assistants in the Principal Local Offices.

As a rule every one should serve for a certain time in this class in the Central Office at Calcutta, so as to be instructed in the system of Accounts and Budget Estimates.

In addition to these established classes there will be a class of Apprentices or Probationers, at salaries not exceeding Rs. 250 a-month, consisting of youths who will be taken on trial, and from whom the established classes will be principally recruited as vacancies occur.

It will be distinctly understood that the Government always retains the power of selecting men of higher standing and experience, and placing them at once in any of the higher classes where the public service requires it.

Once placed in any class, they will rise as if they had entered the Service from the bottom; but, as a general rule, after an adequate supply of young men has been trained up in the lower grades, promotion will take place among them according to merit and seniority.

In order to secure due consideration to personal claims, and to the good of the public service, the following Rule, which prevails with great advantage in the English Treasury, will be adopted in regard to all vacancies and appointments, viz. :—

The Financial Secretary shall confer with the Accountant and Auditor-general; and if, after duly considering the report of the Officer at the head of the department in which the vacancy occurs, they agree on a recommendation, the Financial Secretary shall report it to the Governor-general in Council, but if they disagree, each shall report his opinion separately in writing to the Governor-general in Council.

The rise of salary in each class after the specified period of service will take place without any change of office or any special report in the absence of positive demerit, but promotion from one class to another will depend entirely on efficiency. The Covenanted Officers now in the Service who retain their present offices and prospects of promotion without change, except as already stated, need not be classed as above described, unless they desire it.

As regards the expense of the new organisation, it appears that the following is the present cost of officers in the Financial Department (exclusive of the Financial Secretary and Accountant and Auditor-general of India) with salaries of Rs. 700 a month or upwards :—

| Total of Covenanted and Uncovenanted .                   |     | 42,450       |

Making the total cost £50,840 a-year.

Under the new organisation when fully carried out, the corresponding establishment will be composed nearly as follows :—

|   | Minimum. | Maximum. |
|---|----------|----------|
| Class 1.—5 officers at £1,800 to £2,400 a-year ... .. | 9,000    | 12,000   |
| Class 2.—8 officers at £1,200 to £1,800 ... ..        | 9,600    | 14,400   |
| Class 3.—19 officers at £840 to £1,200 ... ..         | 15,960   | 22,800   |
| Total ... ..  | 34,560   | 49,200   |
| Average ... ..  | ...      | 41,880   |

Some of the expense of the present establishment would have been saved at any rate by the abolition of the sub-treasurerships under the arrangements with the banks; but, on the other hand, some increase of strength in the Central Department was indispensable if the existing system had been retained; so that, on the whole, it may be safely said that the new scheme will not be attended with any material increase of expense, while it provides for seven more offices than at present, in the Central Department, where additional strength is so much needed at salaries sufficient to secure the services of men of talent and experience, and holds out a career sufficiently certain and attractive to induce a succession of young men of good character and abilities to devote themselves to the exclusive study of accounts and Financial Administration.

Experience has suggested some further changes in the constitution of the Financial Department, as laid down by the Resolution of the 4th July, 1861, which may be conveniently made in connection with the above scheme.

The office of Under-secretary cannot with advantage be made a wheel in the administrative machinery, so that papers which are sent through the Assistant-secretaries to the Financial Secretary, and from him to the Financial Member of Council, should also be read and minuted upon by the Under-secretary.

No young man, however able, can be expected to deal with financial subjects without long preparation, and the attempt to do so would only waste time and divide responsibility.

But there is abundance of work for an intelligent young man as personal assistant to their Financial Secretary, and the office of Under-secretary is retained on this footing, though not as one of the regular establishments.

The Resolution of 4th July, 1861, states that "the most important appointment in the Financial Department is that of Assistant-secretary in the Account Department." Experience fully confirms this, and shows that there is no officer in the whole range of the Department, except the Financial Secretary, upon whose accuracy, zeal, and intelligence the Government must so constantly rely in the most important financial matters. Accordingly, the office is placed in the first class of the new organisation, and the present holder of it, Mr. T. Peachey, is confirmed in the appointment.

A large class of important business remains in the Financial Department, which is not provided for either in the Account or General Departments as constituted by the Resolution of 4th July, 1861.

The existence of the Civil Finance and Police Commissions has hitherto given the Financial Department a ready means of revising estimates and checking expenditure in the different Civil branches. But those Commissions have come to an end, and it is very important that the Financial Department should possess, within its own walls, a department whose special duty it is to watch civil expenditure, and to criticise, by the aid of uninterrupted tradition and official experience, all proposals involving expense, which may be submitted either with the Budget Estimates or in the course of the year.

Accordingly, a "Civil Finance Department" is constituted with an Assistant-secretary of the Second Class at its head, as an addition to the Account and General Departments, and Mr. R. H. Hollingberry, whose services in the Civil Finance Commission peculiarly qualify him for such an office, is appointed to fill it. This will not in any way interfere with the principle of the rule laid down in 1843, that all applications from Local Governments for increased expenditure shall be considered first in the Department of the Supreme Government, to which the business of the department in which the increase is proposed belongs. Any proposal, for instance, for increased expenditure in police will continue to come to the Financial Department through the Home Department, with the opinion of that department on the proposal, though the Financial Department will still require an establishment to enable it to apply its own revision to the proposal so made.

In some cases, as in passing the Annual Budget, time may not always admit of a previous reference from the Financial to other departments, but in this case sanction may be given to the estimate provisionally, subject to consideration of the details by the proper department, or such other special rule made as may be required to meet the special case.

The appointment of other important business of the Financial Department hitherto but partially provided for, as supervision of the revenue, preparation of financial and commercial statistics, and supervision of the currency, will be made between the different Assistant Secretaries as experience may suggest, and competent assistants to the Chief Assistant Secretaries will be appointed as fit men can be found or trained up from lower grades.

Ordered that the above Resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette for general information, and that a copy be forwarded to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for information.

Appointments.—The Hon. Edmund Drummond to be Secretary to the Government of India, in the Financial Department, from the 1st instant.

Mr. R. P. Harrison to be Auditor-general and Accountant-general to the Government of India from the 1st instant. E. DRUMMOND, Secretary to the Govt. of India.

DUTY ON PIECE GOODS.

Home Department, Separate Revenue.—No. 2,815. From A. M. Monteith, Esq., Under Sec. to the Govt. of India, to E. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Dated Fort William, May 7, 1862. Sir,—In continuation of my letter No. 2,207, dated 29th ult., I am directed to state that it was not intended by that communication to limit to the materials therein specified the term "piece goods" as used in the schedule of Act 11 of 1862.

The term, as used in Act 11 of 1862, includes piece goods of cotton, silk, woollen, linen, and mixed fabrics, or other goods usually manufactured in pieces or lengths.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) A. M. MONTEATH, Under Sec. to Govt. of India.

THE NEW FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

THE resolution of the Governor-general in Council re-organising the financial department of the Government of India is not only in itself a very important document, but further remarkable as the prelude to throwing open the highest offices of the State to "Uncovenanted" merit. The new system of Audit and Account had rendered it absolutely necessary that a radical and organic reform should be introduced, the old system having entirely and hopelessly broken down. Nor is it surprising that so much confusion and uncertainty should have characterised Indian estimates, when it is borne in mind that officers were appointed almost indiscriminately from the Civil Service without having had any previous training, or possessing any peculiar qualifications for the office. Then, as soon as an official had acquired a certain degree of aptitude and knowledge of details, he was almost sure to be whisked off to some other department of the administration, in which his financial experience would be comparatively of little use. And yet it was especially incumbent upon the Indian Treasury to exercise a strict supervision and control over all estimates and expenditure, as in that country there was no sort of Parliamentary check as exists in England. But the personnel of the department was altogether too weak for the work expected of it. Whereas in the English Treasury there are always five or six officers "who have been conversant with the details of every Budget for the last twenty years, and who would be perfectly competent to frame a very respectable Budget themselves if suddenly called upon," in India there were only two Europeans employed subordinate to the Financial Secretary, and these merely birds of passage, reposing for a moment before pursuing their flight to a more genial department. The consequence of such a state of things was shown in the untrustworthy statements put forth by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Laing. In the year 1860-61 the returns were so lamentably defective that the Revenue was understated by £3,500,000, and the expenditure by nearly £1,500,000, and even in the current year a notable mistake has already been detected, which converts a surplus into a deficit. It could not be otherwise when, "of twenty officers now holding the principal offices of account and audit, no less than fourteen are acting away from their own proper posts in temporary appointments." To insure, therefore, an efficient supervision of all financial arrangements, it has been wisely resolved to constitute a separate and "self-contained" department, divided into distinct classes, with a graduated promotion modified by distinguished merit. The barriers between the Covenanted and Uncovenanted Services are at once to be thrown down, and men of all colours, creeds, and nationalities are to be permitted to serve the State, without any favour being shown except to the most worthy. For a time, indeed, there will be practically no opening for outsiders, but as vacancies occur they are to be filled up without regard to race, religion, or interest. The only appointment to be reserved as the exclusive privilege of the Covenanted Service is that of Financial Secretary, but at the proper season even that reservation will have to be withdrawn. In the mean time there are four classes of appointments open to all men. The lowest commences at a salary of £480 per annum, rising to £840 by an annual increase of £36 after three years' service. The next consists of nineteen officers, at salaries rising from £840 to £1,200 per annum. A still higher grade, comprising eight officials, draws from £1,200 to £1,800; and the highest, in which there are only five officers, from £1,800 to £2,400 a-year. There is yet a junior class of probationers at salaries not exceeding £300 a-year, from which the upper classes will be chiefly recruited. For further details we must refer our readers to the Resolution itself, which is given elsewhere in extenso.

THE LATE COTTON DEBATE.

THE Cotton manufacturers of Lancashire are decidedly the most selfish and unreasonable people on the face of the earth. Like the waggoner in the ancient fable, they are quite ready to overwhelm the superior powers with clamorous importunities, but on no account will they apply their own shoulder to the wheel. It is so much easier to cry for help than to act for one self. It is so much pleasanter to blame our neighbour than to acknowledge our own shortcomings. How far more simple and satisfactory it is to lay hold of a scapegoat, and send it forth into the wilderness bearing our transgressions, than to set about redeeming the past and making good whatever may be amiss. Such for many a year past has been the practice of the Manchester millowners. With the most perfect complacency they laid their own deficiencies and neglect of duty upon the head of the East India Company, and then devoted themselves with redoubled zeal to the worship of Mammon. But their false god has betrayed them, and now in their grievous strait they can think of no other resource than to find a second scapegoat in the Indian Government of the present day.

The recent discussion in the House of Commons is very instructive. It shows how little these great "cotton lords" understand, or care for, their own favourite doctrine of free trade. Whatever tends to their own individual benefit is exalted into a national necessity. Whatever interferes with their personal prosperity is magnified into a national calamity. For the moment they are suffering from a dearth of raw material, and therefore with shrill outcries they beset the unfortunate Secretary of State for India, demanding abundant and immediate supplies of cotton, but at their own price and without risk or trouble to themselves. Hitherto they have looked to America for 85 per cent. of the entire quantity of cotton consumed in their manufactories, while the small balance was derived chiefly from India. Now, however, it is to the latter country they must look for means to carry on their trade, and those means are not forthcoming. The probability of such an emergency arising has been recognised for many years past, and, as Mr. J. B. Smith correctly stated, the East India Company was frequently importuned to promote the growth of cotton in the territories subject to their sway. Nor were those importunities unheeded. The Company expended the sum of £20,000 in making experiments under the superintendence of experienced American planters, the result of which proved beyond a doubt that by careful cultivation native cotton could be raised to an equality with "ordinary New Orleans," and that all that was wanted to insure a regular supply was a permanent demand at remunerative prices. It is very easy, though not a little impertinent, for Mr. J. B. Smith to talk of the Indian mind—that is, the mind of Anglo-Indian officials—being in much the same state of darkness as the agricultural mind of England twenty years ago; but it is surely not the business of Government to interfere directly in favour of any one particular kind of produce. All that can be fairly asked is equal protection for all subjects, whatever be their vocation, and equal encouragement for every lawful industry. Mr. Smith himself admits that "without English supervision and capital cotton could not be grown with advantage in India," and to find these requisites is clearly the province of private enterprise. He goes on, indeed, to say that "until we have cheap carriage in that country we could not compete with America"—but mark the reason why—"for the cotton trade in India must be an occasional one, and English merchants would not run the risk of such a trade." In other words, in order that the Lancashire manufacturers may never again suffer from a dearth of raw material, the revenues of India are to be expended in providing cheap carriage, and the ryots are to incur the risk and cost of growing cotton year by year, in the hope of an occasional opportunity of disposing of their produce advantageously. A more selfish proposition was never enunciated. In another part of his speech, Mr. Smith himself acknowledged that "no country would grow cotton for an occasional demand;" and further on, that what the ryots wanted was "not so much an increase of price as the certainty of a sale for their produce, and it was therefore essential to give them some security that they would be able to sell their cotton, not only in any given year, but for some years to come. "And to insure the quality and due delivery of this invaluable staple, trustworthy agents must be established at central stations to make advances, pay in cash the balance, supervise the cultivation, and press the bulky article into a more convenient size for transport. But all this is as nothing without cheap carriage, for cotton is a low-priced commodity and cannot bear much outlay. Here is the rub. According to the Manchester school the East India Company displayed a disgraceful apathy with regard to all internal communications except military roads, and in order to make this alleged neglect appear as black as possible, it is the fashion to speak of India as having been for a hundred years beneath their administration. Now, it is true that a century has elapsed since Bengal Proper came into their hands, but the Indian Empire as it now exists has been built up little by little, and two important provinces have been added within the present decade. And it must be borne in mind that the revenues of the empire have by no means increased in proportion to its enlarged borders; nor can it be denied that more might have been done to promote the material prosperity of the country had not so many millions been squandered on the Affghan, China, and Persian campaigns, which were Imperial rather than Indian wars. Some allowance, too, must be made for the immense distances to be traversed, the absence of road-making metal in many districts, and the scattered and impoverished population. Assuming the necessity in Oriental countries for the Government to charge itself with the duty of constructing roads and canals, it is quite clear that such works must be secondary to the actual requirements of the daily administration. The army, the police, the civil establishments of every kind, and the interest on the State debt, must first be defrayed, and then occurs the question of further capacity for taxation on the part of the people. This may be a "stupid system" in the eyes of Mr. J. B. Smith, but it is at least an honest and statesmanlike one, and quite in accordance with the true principles of political economy. It is idle to institute comparisons between India and the United States. There is nothing in common between a free, energetic, and enlightened people, unburdened by taxation and labouring for their own interests, and an indolent, oft-subjugated race, without any faith in the permanency of the Government, and living from hand to mouth. Besides, when Mr. Smith talks so glibly of the "canal round some rocks which impeded the navigation in a precisely similar manner," that was constructed by the State of Ohio on borrowed capital, he omits all details as to the length of the excavation and the nature of the obstructions that had to be overcome, so that it cannot be taken as a case in point. He also carefully avoids all allusion to the fact that it is only for a brief period in each year that the Godavery is navigable, and only then for vessels of very light draught, and that with the exception of cotton there is no produce to be brought down the river. So that he actually calls upon the Government to spend at least £300,000 of Indian money to enable a certain quantity to be conveyed to Liverpool in case it should be wanted. It might be supposed that such a promising and profitable undertaking as the Godavery river-canal is represented to be would justify the employment of private capital and enterprise, and, indeed, a company was provisionally formed for the purpose of opening up that much vaunted means of communication with the interior. But, as Sir Charles Wood sarcastically observed, "those gentlemen were not quite so sanguine when they were to spend their own money, and they declined even the enormous prospective interest which my hon. friend anticipates from such an investment." It is preposterous to ask the Indian Government to sacrifice everything to cotton. The East India Company incurred considerable expense to show that the quality could be improved by cultivation, but the Manchester capitalists took no trouble to turn this knowledge to account. And even now they admit that the demand will be only an occasional one, to supplement any falling off in the supply from America. The first thing is to offer a permanent and fairly remunerative market for the produce of the Indian ryots, and then there will be neither difficulty nor delay in providing cheap and sufficiently expeditious carriage. The manufacturers must meet the cultivators half-way, and then it will be the duty of the Government to foster a trade likely to benefit its subjects. But the Indian empire is something more than the feeder of the cotton-mills of Lancashire.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 26.

THE CAMEL CORPS IN INDIA.

General BUCKLEY asked the Secretary of State for War why the officers and men of the rifle brigade who composed the camel corps in India, commanded by Colonel Ross during the late mutiny (having received a medal and clasps for services under Sir Hugh Rose's force in Central India), have not received a share of prize-money?

Sir G. C. LEWIS said that the claims of the corps employed under Sir H. Rose were still under consideration, and he could not say when a decision would be arrived at. He hoped, however, that it would not be long postponed.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

Colonel SYKES inquired of the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether, on the 28th April last, or on any other day, the Tartar Government officials were supplied with arms, ammunition, and military stores from the arsenal at Hong Kong; whether these munitions of war were sold to the Tartar Government, or were a gift; whether, on the evacuation of Canton by the Allies, many hundreds of prisoners in the gaols, among whom were the mother and some relatives of the Taeping Emperor, were handed over to the Tartar Government; and, whether any guarantee was obtained that the lives of the mother of the Taeping Emperor and of his relatives should not be sacrificed.

Mr. LAYARD said that the Government had not received any information from China up to the date of the 28th of April, and, therefore, he could not tell his hon. and gallant friend whether any arms, ammunition, or military stores were sold to the Chinese—he did not know what the Tartar Government meant—to the Chinese Government on that day. Her Majesty's Government had, however, determined that arms, ammunition, and military stores not required by her Majesty's troops might be sold to the Chinese Government at cost price. When the Allies took possession of Canton they instituted a supervision of gaols, and all persons compromised on account of any connection with the Allies were immediately released. Criminals only were detained. The administration of justice was left, as far as possible, in the hands of the Chinese authorities, the British authorities watching over those who had been condemned to see that they were not put to torture, or subjected to any undue punishment. Sir H. Parkes had informed him that during our occupation of Canton only thirty or forty persons were executed, and these were well-known criminals. Sir H. Parkes had also informed him that he had inquired as to the mother of the Taeping chief, and ascertained that she was left in charge of a large establishment of 3,000 ladies, which it appeared that individual kept up. His mother was placed over that establishment to keep the ladies in order; and she appeared to be quite safe at Nankin. There were some women of the Taeping party kept in Canton, but not as actual prisoners. They were well fed and clothed, and if they had been turned out the probability was that they would have starved; therefore, they were humanely kept there; but that they had ever been handed over to the Chinese authorities was not correct.

THE COMMON COUNCIL AND THE LATE EARL CANNING.

On Thursday, the 26th, at 12 o'clock, the members of the Common Council of the City of London held a meeting at Guildhall, the Lord Mayor presiding.

Alderman SALOMONS, M.P., proceeded to move a resolution, of which he had given notice, in reference to the late Governor-general of India, to whom at a former meeting the Court unanimously voted the honorary freedom of the corporation of London. A visitation of Providence had interposed to prevent the realisation by the corporation of an intention which would have placed Earl Canning, had he lived, on the roll of distinguished statesmen and public benefactors on whom from time to time they had conferred the highest mark of distinction they had it in their power to bestow. There being no precedent of any eminent man on whom it had been proposed to confer that honour dying before the freedom could be presented in person, he (Alderman Salomons) had to propose a resolution which he thought would embody the feelings of the Court on this occasion, and which, in the event of its adoption, he desired to convey to Lady Clanricarde, the only surviving sister of the deceased nobleman, and who had been his constant attendant during the illness which resulted in premature death. He might say, on private information, it was understood that Lord Canning had adopted the younger son of the Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde as his heir. He moved, in the terms of the notice he had given—

"That by the lamented decease of the Right Hon. Earl Canning, late Governor-general of India, this Court is prevented from carrying into effect its unanimous resolution of presenting the freedom of this city to that distinguished nobleman, and therefore avails itself of the earliest opportunity of recording its deep sense of the loss which the country has sustained by the premature death of an able statesman, whose wise administration of the Government of India at a period of great peril, and subsequent measures of just and enlightened policy, conciliated the affections and advanced the general interest and prosperity of all classes of the population of that vast and important possession of the British Crown."

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Rowe. Trusting, however, that the Court would not allow the grave to close over the remains of the distinguished statesman without some lasting recognition of the eminent services he had rendered to his country, Mr. Rowe moved at the same time—

"That a bust of the deceased earl be executed at an expense by the Corporation not exceeding 200 guineas, and placed in Guildhall."

Both resolutions were unanimously adopted, and, at the instance of Alderman Salomons, it was also resolved that they be transcribed, and, after being signed by the Town-clerk, forwarded to Lady Clanricarde, surviving sister of the late peer.

THE OUTRAM TESTIMONIAL.

At the close of the operations in Oude, in which Sir James Outram took such a distinguished part, his friends in Bombay resolved to present him with some mark of the esteem in which they held his private character, and of the admiration with which they viewed his public career. It was therefore resolved, at a meeting held in Bombay in the year 1858, that for this purpose a shield, sculptured with scenes from his military and political life, would be most appropriate. The work then commenced has at length been completed. It has been exhibited, and has been much admired in Messrs. Hunt and Roskell's case at the Great Exhibition. It was drawn and modelled by Mr. Armstead, the designer of the Packington shield, a work perhaps surpassed in point of effectiveness by the present. It illustrates some of the most important events in the career of Sir James Outram, commencing with the subjugation of the Bheels in 1822, and terminating with the relief of Lucknow 1857. The frame of the shield is of steel, richly damascened with gold, and contains eight medallion portraits of Sir James's companions in the Lucknow campaign, viz.:—Sir John Inglis, K.C.B., General Neill, G.B., Sir Robt. Napier, K.C.B., and G. E. W. Couper, B.C.S.; also of Sir Edwd. Lugard, K.C.B., General Walker, C.B., General Jacob, C.B., and the Rev. C. P. Badger, his companions in the Persian war. The circle in low relief consists of six subjects—viz., the Subjugation of the Bheels, the Civilisation of the same tribe, the Dying Chieftain (Meer Noor Mahomed Khan) consigning his Son to the Protection of Colonel Outram, the Defence of the Residency at Hyderabad, the Charge of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry on the Persian Square at the Battle of Kooshab, and Charge of the Volunteer Cavalry before Lucknow, commanded by Sir James Outram. The centre group, in high relief, represents Sir James Outram resigning to his junior officer, General Havelock, the command of the force destined for the relief of Lucknow. Motto, "Clarus Marte, clarior nobilitate animi."

On Tuesday, the 24th inst., the gift was presented to Sir James Outram, at his house in Kensington. The proceedings were private, the General having excused himself, on the score of delicate health, from the ordeal of a public meeting. The following gentlemen—all members of the Testimonial Committee originally formed in Bombay—were present:—Mr. A. Malet, formerly a member of the Bombay Government; Mr. H. D. Cartwright, of the firm of Leckie and Co., Bombay; and Mr. Edward Howard, Director of Public Instruction, Bombay. There were also present Mr. H. Reeves, lately a member of the Bombay Government; Mr. W. P. Adair, M.P., formerly private secretary to Lord Elphinstone when Governor of Bombay; Mr. H. L. Anderson, Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government; and Mr. W. Wilkinson, of the firm of Remington and Co.

Mr. Malet, after a few words of introduction, read an address from the members of the committee in England. In this address they expressed the affectionate esteem they entertain for the character of Sir James Outram, and the admiration with which they have viewed his public career. In conclusion, they regretted that he was unable to bear the fatigue of a meeting at which the feelings of those friends who requested his acceptance of the testimonial might have been publicly manifested, and expressed their most fervent hopes for the restoration of his health, so valuable to his country, and for his enjoyment during a long and happy life of the gratitude of the nation, and of the honours which her Majesty had been pleased to bestow upon him.

Sir James Outram then read the following address:—"I am so overcome by the kindness of my friends in Bombay that I am quite at a loss to find terms to express my gratitude for the generous manner in which they have again denoted their too flattering estimate of my public services in India, and their esteem for me as an individual. The repeated testimonials I have received from my friends and comrades in Bombay are far beyond my deserts. On the termination of the Scinde war a magnificent sword and centrepiece were presented to me; and now, as an additional proof of esteem and regard, this splendid shield and service of plate are tendered for my acceptance. I need not assure you that it is with feelings of deep gratitude I accept this fresh token of your approval of my services in India. These valuable testimonials from the friends with whom I have been associated for so many years are now my most cherished possession, and will constitute the most precious heirlooms I could bequeath to my family. I thank you, also, for the very flattering address with which you have accompanied the presentation of this memorial, and beg that you will convey to the many esteemed comrades and friends who have subscribed to it this very feeble expression of my feelings of deep gratitude for this further recognition of my services in India."

The balance of the subscribed funds not required for the shield was devoted to the purchase of a service of plate, manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, which also was presented to Sir James Outram.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The directors state in their report that steady progress has been made in the works during the past half year, and they trust that the line is now open for traffic from Memoodabad in the north to Par river in the south, being one hundred and seventy-three miles, including the bridge over the Mhye river. By the reports from India, the eighteen additional miles from Memoodabad to Ahmedabad (the northern terminus) were expected to be completed at the end of this month. Considerable progress had also been made in the line south of Par river, and forty-one additional miles were to be finished at the end of this season, extending the open line to Dhanoo, and giving a total length of about two hundred and thirty-two miles. The important bridges over the Veturnee and Bassein rivers were proceeding rapidly. The remaining heavy works between the Par river and Bombay are the embankments at Mahim and Colaba—the last-mentioned being the only work of which the completion is expected to extend beyond the end of the coming season. The Colaba embankment may occupy from one to two years; but, considering that it is at the very extremity of the line, means will no doubt be found, by temporary tramways or otherwise, to enable the goods arriving at that point to reach the shipping wharves of Bombay, only three miles distant; at the same time a junction by the Mahim branch will be effected with the terminus station of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and thus there is a fair prospect that, although the through communication on the company's rails will not be perfectly established, the commerce of Bombay will nevertheless find its way to the Baroda line early next year. At the commencement of the half-year there were 109½ miles open to public traffic, and at the close of the half-year 132½ miles, the average during the half-year ending the 31st of December, 1861, being 124½ miles. The receipts amount to 237,001 rupees (£21,725), against 37,891 rupees (£3,473) in the corresponding half of 1860, showing an increase of 199,110 rupees (£18,252.) The number of passengers was 426,527 against 72,796; and the amount of receipts 181,420 rupees (£16,630), against 34,533 rupees (£3,165) at the corresponding period of 1860. The average receipts per mile open in the past half-year amount to 1,007 rupees, against 1,257 rupees in the corresponding half of 1860; and the average expenditure to 964 rupees, or 50.57 per cent. of the gross receipts, against 821 rupees, or 65.33 per cent. of the receipts. The total receipts for the half year were 237,001 rupees (£21,725), and the expenditure 119,860 rupees (£10,967), leaving an available balance of 117,140 rupees (£10,757). The merchandise traffic has hitherto contributed little towards the gross receipts, nor will it until the line is opened through to Bombay. The goods traffic has, however, increased during two years from 980 rupees to 1,907 rupees per mile of railway. The capital account shows that £3,603,692 had been received, including £873,126 advanced by the Secretary of State for India, and £2,806,370 expended, leaving a balance of £470,062 in the hands of the Secretary of State for India, and £327,260 at bankers, and in India.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £2. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £2. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

(REDUCED RATES FOR THE EAST AND WEST INDIES.)

The Directors of this Company beg to announce that they have adopted a new system of Rates for the East and West Indies, by which the insured, instead of being subjected to a heavy extra premium during the years of his residence in the Tropics, has the option of throwing the same over the whole currency of his Insurance, by paying a fixed rate, which, it will be seen, is very little higher than the home one.

The following are Specimens of the New Rates:—

ANNUAL PREMIUM FOR THE INSURANCE OF £100.

(Payable during the entire currency of the Policy.)

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

The BEARD, WHISKERS, and MUSTACHIOS are real used by the use of

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

PRITCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-

MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a sure remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Pritchard, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT is a wonderful

Remedy for Bad Legs, whether caused by external violence or resulting from cold, erysipelas, varicose veins, gout, or rheumatism. The deepest ulcerations of the flesh yield to the powers of this unguent with the same readiness and the same certainty as the simplest scratch or slightest inflammation of the skin. The heat and smarting of scalds and burns are checked at once by this soothing application, and the progress of the cure, to the sufferer's astonishment and delight, proceeds in its painless course. This important fact should induce everyone having the charge of children always to keep this pain-saving application within reach. Holloway's Ointment will spare the child torture and the mother anxiety.
